Pine Named D. C. Justice And Curran Prosecutor

Swift Confirmation Of District Jurists Expected in Senate; Choice Widely Hailed

(See editorial, "Gains for the District," Page 10.)

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Speedy Senate confirmation of Washington-born David Andrew Pine, 48, as a justice of the District Court was confidently predicted last night as his appointment was referred to a judiciary subcommittee.

President Roosevelt sent the nomination of Pine, who has made "speedy justice" his policy in his 27 months as district attorney, to the Senate at noon yesterday.

To succeed Pine the President named 36-year-old Police Judge Edward M. Curran, who came here 16 years ago to study law and remained to become an exponent of enlightened judicial procedure. The nominations were received with elation by numerous influential Washingtonians.

The nominations were referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which referred them to a subcommittee composed of Senators William H. King (Democrat), of Utah; Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Warren B. Austen (Republican), of Vermont.

Approval of Pine was regarded as virtually certain. He has been supported by a unanimous group of business, legal and civic organizations and no opposition to his appointment has been voiced since his name was put forward four months ago.

Senator King has been one of Pine's warmest partisans. Because of Senator King's slight illness, no action is likely for several days.

Curran Choice a Surprise

The choice of Judge Curran as district attorney was somewhat a surprise. However, he has been widely honored here and his views on criminal procedure have been attentively heard.

Pine, a stocky, pink-cheeked man with sharp eyes, a cleft chin and a gentle manner which sometimes exploded into passionate emphasis, received the news of his elevation calmly. "I am deeply grateful to the President and to the Attorney General for the high honor of this appointment," Pine said, "and I wish I could pause to express my appreciation in full. But, you see, I am due in the grand jury room."

So he hurried away with a great bundle of documents to resume an investigation of spurious letters which purported to link Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, to the Silver Shirt organization headed by William Dudley Pelley. Pine and John W. Wilson, chief of his criminal division, have been directing this inquiry for three days.

Pine Succeeds Cox

Judge Curran shared the general surprise at the announcement of his appointment yesterday. "I am very grateful for the confidence placed in me by the President and the Attorney General," he declared. "I shall do my best to perform my duties to the best of my ability."

Pine was named to succeed the late Justice Joseph W. Cox, whose seat on the bench has been vacant since his death, September 9, 1939. Pine's supporters urged that he met the necessity for increasing the number of local men, familiar with Washington problems, among the District Court justices. His confirmation would bring the city's representation on its general court to six, 50 per cent of the total membership.

Pine was born here September 22, 1891, the son of David Emory Pine, who also was a lawyer. The son attended Central High School and Georgetown University Law School, where he took his degree in 1913. He enrolled for graduate studies

Six Arrested, $25,000 Thefts Held Solved

Part of Stolen Gems, Perfumes, Silks And Laces Recovered

Two thefts of jewels and rare silks, totaling more than $25,000, have been reported solved by District detectives after more than three months' investigation, it was revealed last night as police arrested five men and a woman and recovered part of the loot.

Gems, linen and perfume, valued at $5,000 belonging to Col. and Mrs. Glenn S. Smith, of 3601 Connecticut avenue northwest, were recovered when detectives raided the home of a former maid.

The arrest of three men and two youths led to the restoration of $1,000 in imported silks and lace, part of the $20,000 loot from an auto parked at Ninth street and G place northwest December 18. The loss was reported by Fouad A. Zraick, of Brooklyn.

Information concerning both thefts was kept confidential by police in order to aid the investigators.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 15 (INS) An alltime record price for a lamb was paid today by Vice President Garner at the Southwestern Fat Stock Show and Exposition in Fort Worth.

Overton Backs Dual D. C. Tax As Balanced

Levy on High Incomes Offsets Sales Burden On the Poor, He Says

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, yesterday indorsed the Nichols bill proposing a dual sales and income tax for the present income levy as a battle loomed within the House District Committee over the fiscal affairs subcommittee report.

While approving the plan to continue the present income tax this year, Senator Overton, who is chairman of the District Appropriations subcommittee and a member of the Senate District Committee, said the substitute is preferable for the future.

The income tax on salaries above $10,000 was carefully worked out by Dr. Chester B. Pond, New York tax specialist, last year, he pointed out, to balance the sales tax burden on low-salaried classes.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee reiterated his approval of the sales tax as other members of the group prepared to fight the Nichols bill.

A threatened point of order against the measure next Monday, it was indicated, may delay action by the full committee until later in the week. The bill was to have been introduced in the House Thursday and reported formally by the subcommittee yesterday.

Due to a slip-up the bill was not introduced and the House was in recess yesterday. Under the rules of the House a committee cannot act on a legislative proposal until after it has been formally introduced and referred to the committee.

Randolph said the committee might consider the measure and withhold the report, but other members suggested that the legislation would be subject to a point of order on the House floor.

7,000 Jam Income Tax Office In Rush to Make Deadline

More than 7,000 Washingtonians filed through the local Internal Revenue office yesterday and last night to squeeze in just ahead of the 1939 income tax deadline at midnight. A dozen to 14 mail sacks stuffed with returns were expected this morning.

Assisting them with everything from expert accountancy to free notary service were 40 Treasury auditors and 40 deputy collectors. Desks filled two long rooms and overflowed into the hallways, where last-minute taxpayers nibbled penstaffs and scratched pates over their returns until midnight fell.

Assistant Chief Field Deputy Collector A. P. Rasin, in charge of the Washington office, saw nothing unusual in yesterday's rush of patrons. It was no greater and no less, he said, than that of other years, the city's increase in population and such things considered.

"We'll always have last-day rushes," he said. "Many people find it profitable to keep their money working until the last minute. And, of course, there are those who do everything at the last minute anyway."

Rasin was unable to estimate how much the local office has collected this year, how it compares with the intake of other years or what proportion of Washington income taxpayers will wake up today delinquent.

At Baltimore, the Associated Press reported, Joseph O'C. McCusker, deputy State comptroller, estimated receipts from the Maryland State tax would total about $8,000,000. He estimated mailed receipts as of midnight would bring the total to $7,000,000 and the other $1,000,000 would be provided by corporations, which have more time to file.

Senate Vote On Hatch Bill Set Monday

Passage Predicted As Chamber Rejects Opponents' Efforts To Amend Measure

By John E. Oakes.

The virtual close of two solid weeks of debate, oratory and filibuster was reached last night when the Senate unanimously agreed to vote not later than 3 p. m. Monday on final passage of the Hatch bill.

Reached only at the end of an exhausting eight-hour session, the arrangement presaged Senate passage of the bill, which prohibits political activity to Federally-paid State employes.

Democratic opponents, trying to kill the bill in the Senate, saw their last ray of hope go glimmering in the afternoon when the Senate upheld the author of the bill, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, in three decisive votes.

Passage Predicted

Temper of the Senate was most positively shown in defeat of a motion to send the bill back to committee. The now-familiar combination of Republicans plus Democratic followers of Senator Hatch and Majority Leader Barkley rebuffed the move, 52 to 31. Senator Barkley later predicted that vote on final passage would be even more favorable to the bill.

Brunt of yesterday's attack was borne by the final section of the measure, which, in effect, defines the prohibited political activities as those which are now forbidden to civil service employes by rules of the United States Civil Service Commission.

The demand of Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, that the banned activities be specifically written into the law provoked Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, to his first speech on the measure, and one that held the Senate spellbound.

George Defends Measure

Launching into a general defense of the bill as a whole, Senator George, chairman of the committee that reported it, asserted that "the thing that lost the Democratic Party seats in 1938 was the fear and feeling throughout the United States that we were willing to use Federal funds in Federal agencies to affect elections."

In answer to the charge of some of his Southern colleagues that the bill invaded States' rights, the Georgian roared that the measure "is a feeble and simple attempt to write one prohibition against Federal imposition of power on the States."

An intended victim of the Administration's ill-fated "purge" of 1938, Senator George declared that the bill attempts to ensure freedom of elections from control by Federal officials.

Declaring that he was not critical of President Roosevelt for "entering my State in the last political

Law Gets Lawyer When He Toots Horn for Wife

But his certificate of graduation this time was a traffic ticket, reminding him that if he wishes to summon his wife to his car he should not do it by honking. Reilly is solicitor of the Labor Department.

He and Mrs. Reilly had been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Laurence A. Knapp, at 1513 Thirtieth street northwest. Reilly sounded the horn to let Mrs. Reilly know he'd brought the car around.

"A squad car drove up, and I got a ticket," he said yesterday. But, evidently with fond reminiscences of Harvard days under the present justice, he added; "I do not think the justice had anything to do with it."

City-to-City Phone Rates Slashed

$5,500,000 Annual Cut to Be Effective Not Later Than May, FCC Announces

A reduction in long-distance telephone rates, involving a saving to the public of about $5,500,000 annually was announced yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission. The new rates will go into effect "not later than" May 1.

Announcing that the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. had agreed to the reduction "without the necessity of long-drawn-out rate proceedings," the commission declared the company "is pursuing a forward-looking policy."

In 1937, the commission ordered a cut in interstate rates, benefiting subscribers to the extent of about $12,000,000, indicating combined savings of $17,500,000 annually in the last three years.

Longest Rates Cut Most

Schedules of new rates, released with the announcement show that the farther the call, the greater the reduction. The maximum cuts will come on transcontinental calls. For example, the station-to-station day rate between New York and San Francisco for 3 minutes is now $6.50, while the new rate will be $4.

The new rate for a person-to-person call from New York to San Francisco for the initial 3 minutes is $5.00, compared with the old tariff of $8.75.

Another "typical illustration" cited by the commission is the present station-to-station day rate of $1.85 from Washington to Chicago, which will be reduced to $1.65. The night and Sunday rate, now $1.15, will be $1.10.

The person-to-person day rate will be cut from $2.45 to $2.20 and the night and Sunday rate, now $1.75, will become $1.65.

Walker Leads Inquiry

The new rates resulted from a series of studies conducted by Commissioner Paul A. Walker, after the commission on January 24 had ordered an inquiry looking to reductions.

In the ensuing discussions, attention was called to the improved earnings of the company in 1939, and the commission's statement yesterday said "it is expected that the increased business developed as a result of the reduction agreed to will affect the revenues of the company less than this amount and will leave the company in a favorable position as to earnings."

Revenues Increased

Such was the case in the interstate telephone rate reduction of 1937, the statement said, adding:

"Subscribers benefited to the extent of more than $12,000,000 annually, but the revenue of the company was not proportionately affected, in part due to the increased volume of business which resulted."

Georgia Governor Arrested at Rally On Contempt Writ

Macon, Ga., March 15 (AP).—Gov. E. D. Rivers was arrested on a Federal civil contempt citation tonight on the stage of the Macon auditorium, where, he was attending a meeting of the Georgia Education Association.

RIVERS

The contempt citation was issued recently by Federal Judge Bascom Deaver, of the middle Georgia circuit in a controversy involving Rivers' refusal to reinstate W. L. Miller, whom he ousted from the State highway chairmanship.

Deaver, in an injunction proceeding brought by Miller, followed the ruling of the State courts and ordered Miller put back in office.

The Governor was released on his own recognizance about midnight after a hearing before Judge Deaver. He promised to return personally at 10 a. m. next Friday.

Her Mother Cables The News From York; He Is Out of City

Keeping in close touch with his war-torn country has not occupied all of Finnish Minister Hjalmar J. Procope's time and thoughts, it was disclosed here late last night.

The handsome, dynamic diplomat's engagement to Miss Margaret Shaw, of York, England, was announced at the Finnish legation.

Mother Breaks News

The announcement here followed receipt of a cable saying Miss Shaw's mother had broken the news. "Mrs. Adela Shaw of Sutton-on-the-Forest, York, England, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Margaret Shaw, to His Excellency, Hjalmar J. Procope, Minister of Finland to the United States," the announcement said.

Miss Shaw is now in Europe. No date has been set for the wedding.

Attaches at the legation, in the absence of the 51-year-old minister, could report little about Miss Shaw. It was believed she has not been in this country. Just where, and how she and the minister met was not known.

Argentina, Japan Sign Trade Pact

Tokyo to Purchase 6,000 Tons of Wool, 4,000 of Meat in 1940

Copyright by New York Times

Buenos Aires, March 15.—Argentina and Japan this afternoon signed a reciprocal trade agreement by which the two countries are to purchase goods from each other to the value of approximately 30,000,000 yen in the remainder of this year. The agreement is in the form of two notes exchanged between Foreign Minister Dr. Jose Maria Cantillo and the Japanese Minister, Ivataro Uchiyama, at a ceremony in the Argentine ministry of foreign affairs.

Under the agreement, Japan will purchase 6,000 tons of wool, 4,000 tons of frozen beef and canned meats, 4,000 tons of casein, in addition to other products not specified.

Argentina agrees to grant exchange permits at a favorable official exchange rate to facilitate importation of industrial chemicals from Japan, as well as cotton textiles, iron and steel goods and other unspecified manufactured goods.

Replaces German Market

By this agreement, Japan offers an important market which will partially replace certain European markets, particularly Germany, which have ceased purchasing Argentine meat, wool and other products since the outbreak of war.

The agreement regarding industrial chemicals enables Japan to supply certain heavy products formerly imported from the United States, but now prohibited under exchange control regulations.

The communique does not detail the type of merchandise to be imported from Japan, but it is learned from reliable Japanese sources that these goods include several classi-

Tired Finns March Home, Peace Ratified

Sorrowing Soldiers Drive Before Them 100,000 Refugees

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, March 15.—The Finnish Diet tonight put its formal seal on the Russo-Finnish peace treaty, approving its stringent terms by 145 votes to 3.

Told by Prime Minister Risto Ryti that "to make peace often calls for more courage than the resort to war," the Parliament deliberated for 2½ hours, then voted.

Explaining why Finland agreed to peace at Russia's price, Ryti told the Diet that the little republic was fighting alone except for "merely a few reinforced battalions, mostly from Sweden."

He said that the last minute aid offered by Britain and France could not have reached Finland "earlier than the end of April, and the strength of troops then arriving would have been so small as to be insufficient even to make up for casualties our own army would have suffered in the meantime."

"By accepting this help," he ex-

Roosevelt Attitude on Census Is Hitler-Like, Says Tobey

By Felix Cotten

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, yesterday charged President Roosevelt's attitude on the census questions dispute was reminiscent of the tactics by which Adolf Hitler rose to power in Germany.

Tobey, foremost crusader against census questions of a personal nature, made the comparison after the President had accused him of inciting the people to violate the law by refusing to answer questions concerning their income.

The Senator asked the President, "kindly advise me what law you refer to." He then quoted the guarantee in the Bill of Rights against unreasonable search and seizure. This has been interpreted by the Supreme Court, he declared, to exempt a citizen's "private affairs, books and papers from the inspection and scrutiny of others."

The President, still suffering from a cold, was confined to the White House. Unable to hold his scheduled press conference, he instructed Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, to make a statement in his behalf.

"The President would have told you," he said, "that for the first time in his knowledge a United States Senator openly advised the American people to violate the law and held himself up as the one person who will not answer the two income questions when he knows full well that, in his case, the answer will be unnecessary since the enumerator would know that the Senator earns more than

German Pact Bid Based on Return Of Iron Guardist To Cabinet Post

The War Today

PREMIER DALADIER of France, after a second day's secret Senate session, at which he had to defend his conduct of the war, won a vote of confidence, 240 to 0. There were reports, however, that he would resign some of his cabinet posts, retaining the premiership only. Page 6.

Rumania and Hitler

By Robert St. John
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest (Saturday), March 16.—High Rumanian government sources declared today that the conditions of a German "security" offer to Rumania, involving proffered long-term guarantees from Russia and Hungary, were "intolerable and impossible of acceptance."

King Carol, close associates said, was particularly indignant over a reported German suggestion that he take a pro-Nazi Iron Guardist into his cabinet as a condition for such "security."

Other Nazi overtures in the economic field, cited also by Germany as conditions for hands-off pledges by Russia and Hungary, likewise encountered stiff opposition here.

Economic Ruin Feared

The king's advisers were represented as feeling that any Rumanian attempt to meet German demands for a monopoly on Rumanian exports as the prices of guarantees would wreck the country economically almost as much as war itself.

Still another Nazi proposal—Rumanian demobilization—was opposed by military quarters as likely to put this country completely at the mercy of foreign powers, no matter what guarantees were made on paper.

Authoritative sources said the plan was doomed to flat rejection unless Germany showed a disposition to modify it greatly. As things stand, Rumania has an Allied pledge of assistance against aggression, made prior to the war.

Amnesty Offered

As for the Iron Guardist matter, fugitive leaders of this organization who are in Germany are still barred from their homeland, despite current amnesty offers to repentant Iron Guardists imprisoned in Rumania.

Carol was represented as fearing that presence in his cabinet of an avowed protector of Nazi interests would be the beginning of the end of Rumania as an independent state.

Germany was reported to have emphasized that such a cabinet change was vital to the general plan of security Adolf Hitler has suggested.

[Germany is deeply interested in keeping Rumania out of war over her World War won territory in order that Rumania may give Germany the oil, food and other things Germany needs to fight the Allies. Pro-Nazi influence within King Carol's cabinet, naturally, would make this economic help all the easier and would help stiff-arm the Allied blockade efforts in the Balkans. Both Russia and Hungary

Hawaii Needs Anti-Aircraft, Marshall Says

Reveals Canal Will Get Guns First, Delaying Island's Program

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, said on his return from an inspection of the defenses of Hawaii yesterday that the Pacific stronghold needed more antiaircraft protection but otherwise was "in excellent shape."

The Army leader said an additional regiment of 3-inch antiaircraft guns would be sent to the island outpost, but indicated it would be delayed until more urgent reinforcements at other points are accomplished.

Gen. Marshall mentioned the Panama Canal particularly as needing additional guns which must be supplied before the Hawaiian defenses are enlarged. Asked about President Roosevelt's decision to send more planes, guns and troops to the canal, he said plans were already in existence to supply them.

Increasing Canal Garrison

"We are increasing the garrison in Panama from 11,000 to 20,000 men," he declared. "Air squadrons are now being trained here to be flown to the isthmus."

The Army will take part in large-scale maneuvers planned by the Navy next month in the mid-Pacific, Marshall said. He would not elaborate on the extent of the military participation in the fleet war games, but indicated the Army Air Corps would be involved.

In the last few months, Gen. Marshall has made a series of aerial inspection trips which have taken him to every major post in continental United States, Panama and Puerto Rico. Next July he said he hoped to fly to Alaska, where two new Army air bases are planned.

Meanwhile, a Congressional conference committee considering changes in the Navy's promotion system which had been deadlocked for nearly a year, met and made some progress toward an agreement.

Several Conflicts Ironed Out

A bill to revise the selective system of promotion in the Navy and Marine Corps passed both houses of Congress last year and was sent to conference. Representatives of the Senate and House reached a stalemate on the measure after several meetings.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said several amendments in disagreement had been adjusted and predicted an early agreement on the others. A House proviso, which would allow officers designated by selection boards as "fitted" (but not retained on active duty) to receive the retired pay of next higher grade, was agreed to, he stated. Under present law, such officers are promoted on retirement, but receive the retirement pay of the lower grade.

campaign," Senator George shouted that it was "inevitable that, given the large powers we've seen fit to give the Federal Government," the head of the party in office will make use of that power.

The George-Brown debate struck sparks at times, but earlier in the afternoon Senate speechmaking largely took the form of good-natured banter.

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, leader of the anti-Hatch bill forces, reverted to the oft-mentioned phenomenon of the entire Republican membership keeping silence and voting with the majority leader.

The Republicans, declared Minton, "have been sitting over there waiting for us to lay an egg—and then they'll Hatch it."

The G. O. P., he said, has put on "an exhibition of trained fleas that hasn't been equalled in Washington for 150 years." He then compared the Republicans to a string of docile elephants, obeying the command of their "mahout," Minority Leader McNary.

"And now," said Senator Minton in a sorrowful voice, "we're going to march the last mile—and I'm ready to go."

In two separate votes, the Senate approved vital parts of the bill. By a tally of 47 to 30, it indorsed the section considered the "heart" of the measure, forbidding political activity to State employes paid in whole or part from Federal funds; and in a 42-34 vote, it accepted the paragraph making the Civil Service Commission's rules the criterion of prohibited political activity.

At the close of the day, an amendment offered by Senator Stewart (Democrat), of Tennessee, exempting some employes now covered by the bill, was defeated by a vote of 38 to 21.

Downey Snubs 3d-Termers; Garner to File in Oregon

California Democrat Takes Stand After Ickes Heals Olson-McAdoo Rift, Rejects Offer to Serve on Their Slate

By Robert C. Albright

Slapping at California's "harmony" third-term movement, Senator Sheridan Downey, of California, yesterday aligned himself with Senate antithird-term Democrats.

"I believe it would be very difficult for any President, however popular or unpopular, to successfully hurdle the third-term barrier," said Downey, who disclosed he is not a party to the third-term amity pact between former Senator McAdoo and Gov. Olson.

Secretary of Interior Ickes Thursday negotiated an agreement between McAdoo and Olson whereby one combination slate of Roosevelt delegates will be entered in California against Vice President Garner instead of two. Downey was asked by Olson to serve on his original slate, but declined.

Garner to File in Oregon

Meanwhile Garner, only Democratic candidate to openly oppose a third term, announced he will file in Oregon's May 17 primaries, the fourth State in which he has challenged Roosevelt bandwagon moves. He already had filed in Wisconsin, Illinois and California, but skipped Ohio, where the deadline for filing expired last night.

Garner wired Earl Snell, secretary of State, of Salem, Oreg.:

"Please be advised that I desire to enter the Oregon primaries to be held May 17 as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States. My written application will be filed in due course."

See Third-Term Defeat

Meanwhile Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, supporting the Democratic candidacy of Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt, and Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, himself seeking the G. O. P. nomination, said they were convinced on the basis of New Hampshire's primary showing that the President cannot be reelected.

Bridges cited the reduced vote in his State for Roosevelt-pledged delegates under 1936, the minority Democratic vote against a third term, and the enlarged size of the Republican primary ballot. Van Nuys said he "never had thought" the President could be reelected to a third term, and was now more convinced.

Garner forces, although their lone New Hampshire delegate-candidate was outdistanced, likewise appeared satisfied with the third-term opposition showing made in New Hampshire. The first crucial Garner test will come in Wisconsin April 2, where the Roosevelt vote will be split between two conflicting third-term slates.

Expects Large Garner Vote

Senator Downey, who within the month is expected to comment pointedly in a speech on California's proposed Olson-McAdoo "harmony" slate for Roosevelt, predicted Garner would poll a large vote in California despite the alignment of State Democratic organizations against him.

Downey is about to publish a book prophesying a new business recession. He declared yesterday that "barring an increase in war orders, it might drop to the level of 1929. If it does, President Roosevelt would be confronted with the same political arena that faced Hoover in 1932."

Senator Van Nuys, who reiterated his opposition to a third term, nonetheless advised against Senate consideration of antithird term legislation as "bad politics."

Resolutions by two Republican State Legislatures, New York and Rhode Island, have been filed with the Senate requesting preventive legislation against a third term, and Thursday this stirred sporadic Senate debate.

Holt to Offer Resolution

It was learned that Van Nuys and some other Senate Democrats opposed to a third term have counseled Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, against introduction of his resolution placing the Senate on record against a third term for any President.

But yesterday Senator Holt announced he has definitely decided to introduce and call up his resolution "as the session's finale," in late May or June. Holt said he has just completed a check of Senate antithird term sentiment and is convinced his resolution will pass.

"I have publicly given my word that I will offer this resolution, and so feel compelled to call it up for a vote," said Holt.

He said he does not think the President will run "unless he feels sure he can win, and I don't think he can win."

The deadline for filing Presidential declarations in Ohio primaries passed without any new entries. A "favorite son" slate committed in advance to President Roosevelt remained unopposed.

Charles Sawyer took the nominal "favorite son" spot after Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, declined to run as a third-term "stalking horse." Donahey, recently urged by the President to seek re-election for Senator or run again for Governor, let the deadline pass without changing his decision to retire from public life in January.

Delegate Pledged to Taft

Another Ohioan, Senator Taft, a major contender for the Republican Presidential nomination, meantime garnered his first pledged delegate, the first delegate to the Republican convention instructed for any candidate, in North Carolina.

A district convention vote at Williamstown, N. C., pledged William Martin, Williamstown attorney, for Taft, and John L. Phelps, of Creswell, alternate, who was likewise pledged for Taft. Although other delegates already named have declared for Taft, the North Carolina district election was the first to instruct for him.

Taft has been particularly active in the South, and his managers claim strong potential delegate strength in other Southern States. The Republican candidate has made two major speeches in North Carolina this year. North Carolina already has elected 8 of her 23 delegates by district convention. Of these, 6 were reported for Taft and a seventh was claimed to be "favorable."

Farm Shacks Must Go, U. S. Decides

President Allows $2,524,000 to Begin Vast Clearance Drive

President Roosevelt yesterday launched a farm tenant shack clearance program which sponsors hope will result eventually in 1,000,000 or more model cottages dotting the countryside in poorer rural areas.

He authorized the United States Housing Authority to lend $2,524,500 to finance the construction of 1,300 farm homes in four Southern and two Middle Western counties.

This is a beginning. The bill to double the $800,000,000 lending power of the USHA, which has passed the Senate and is now before the House, earmarks $200,000,000 to expand the shack clearance program.

Hope for Passage Soon

Administration officials hope the bill will be passed at this session.

The significance of the tenant shack projects is that through them the USHA slum clearance program is extended into the rural housing field.

The object is to replace ramshackle, tumbledown shanties in the South and other poorer rural areas with substantial houses of simple design, consisting of a living room, dining space, kitchen, and an average of three bedrooms.

Rent will be less than $50 a year. Small farm owners, tenant farmers, share croppers and farm laborers may rent the houses, each of which will be constructed on an acre donated for the purpose by the owner of the farm on which it is built.

The houses will be owned and rented by local housing authorities. The USHA will lend 90 per cent of the total development cost.

For Low-Income Tenants

Only tenants of "very low incomes" will occupy the houses. They will be required to do the upkeep and repair work themselves.

An adequate well will be provided with each house, and a new sanitary outhouse. Farms on which the houses are built must be capable of sustaining a family and affording sufficient income to pay the rent.

The farm owner will not be allowed to increase the rent for the farm or share of the crops because of the new house.

There will be one project each in Lonoke County, Ark.; Thomas County, Ga.; Lee County, Miss.; Darlington County, S. C.; Alexander County, Ill., Vigo County, Ind.

The average over-all cost of each home is estimated at $2,158, but the average ranges from $1,985 in Thomas County to $2,600 in Vigo County.

The USHA loans will run for 60 years and will bear 2¾ per cent interest.

Tobey Answers Roosevelt Remark

$5,000 a year."

Tobey was said to be resting on his farm in Temple, N. H., but informed of what Early had said by Charles Tobey, jr., his son and secretary, sent a telegram to the President.

Hitler Tactics, Says Tobey

"If it is your position," he told the President, "that an unauthorized ruling of a departmental bureau constitutes a law of the United States, then it is important that the people recall that such were the tactics used by Hitler in gaining powers never sanctioned by the people."

He said it was "time to call a halt to attempts of departments to arrogate to themselves the functions of a legislative body, especially in matters which threaten the people of this free country with imprisonment for not bowing to the will of a bureau."

Early was referring to a recent radio broadcast by Tobey, who has asserted that citizens would be within their rights in refusing to answer the income questions.

Since Tobey's salary as Senator is more than $5,000 a year, Early pointed out, he could simply say that his salary was "$5,000 plus." The other income question asks whether income from sources other than salaries and wages exceeds $50 annually, and requires only a "yes" or "no" answer.

Early said the President intended to say that the income questions were requested by a wide range of prominent citizens and organizations, and were intended to "develop the same basic statistics about the low-income groups that are now available for the higher-income brackets through hte income tax returns."

The President feels, he said, that these statistics are needed by business "as a guide to mass buying and that they also are vitally needed to study unemployment among millions of part-time workers and piece workers."

Salaries and wages, he declared, are the only common denominators which represent the degree of employment among such workers.

Early said no change in the census questions was contemplated other than that announced Thursday by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins whereby citizens may, if they desire, write out the answers to the income questions on a blank furnished by the census taker, inclose them in a sealed franked envelope, and hand it to the enumerator to be mailed to the Census Bureau here.

Tobey advised the President that this modification had not mitigated his opposition to the income questions.

Canned Fruit Ban Brings Difficulties

By the United Press

Fresh United States-British difficulties arose yesterday over a British order temporarily banning imports of American canned and bottled fruits, while legislation was introduced in the Senate to break off diplomatic ties with Russia and extend new financial aid for war reconstruction work in Finland.

The suspension of preserved American fruit imports was announced by the British Embassy here as a war measure and was met with immediate criticism by Senators Nye (Republican), of North Dakota; Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico; McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada; Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Downey (Democrat), of California. Senate Democratic Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, called the ruling "unfortunate."

Nye said the move probably was designed to penalize the United States for "not more actively supporting the Allied side of the war," but Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, declared that it was an emergency measure to help conserve British dollar exchange as well as shipping space.

"In view of the trade agreement between the two countries," the Ambassador said, "discussions are taking place at the present time with the United States Government with a view to mitigating to the fullest extent the effects of the measures which the British government are compelled to take for war reasons."

Secretary of State Hull pointed out that discussions were continuing with Allied experts to safeguard American commercial interests, and said one of the points under discussion was a plan whereby Britain would purchase some American tobacco to mix with other tobaccos so that the taste of the British smokers would not be permanently changed to other brands.

Hull also pointed out that although British buying of some American products has greatly declined, total American exports to Britain have increased considerably since the war began, and sales to France have more than doubled.

[Commerce Department reports valued British purchases of American goods in January at $67,143,000, compared to $41,909,000 in January, 1939, French purchases at $38,508,000, compared to $10,815,000 in the corresponding month a year ago, the International News Service said.

[Department experts said they had no breakdown of the figures by commodities, but expressed belief a later breakdown would reflect the 1939 trend of heaviest gains in aircraft, aluminum, munitions and machinery for munitions manufacture.—Editor's note.]

Canada to Apply Nickel Export Quotas

Copyright by New York Times

Canada, which has 90 per cent of the world's supplies of nickel, develops it with the aid of large amounts of American capital and finds a chief market for it in this country, soon will impose quotas on its export, it is learned in official quarters here. It will be done to make sure not only that nickel does not reach Germany but that it does not go to Russia.

The United States, which procures its tin and rubber from British and Dutch sources, has found it necessary to take vigorous steps in the last month to prevent their reexport to Russia, since they are strategic materials whose resale to the Soviets incidentally has caused angry comment in Great Britain.

These are two of the headaches which the war has brought to American businessmen, soldiers and Government officials.

Restrictions on the import by the United States of nickel, tin or rubber would be a serious matter. There is no expectation, however, that the British Empire, which is the chief source of supply of all three, will allow measures that may be taken to control their export to bear heavily on this country.

Tin and rubber, which Soviet Russia had been buying heavily from the United States until the leak was plugged by Government action, are on the list of strategic materials announced by the Army and Navy Board.

Last summer Russia began buying rubber heavily from the United States. In December and January she began purchasing tin and had accumulated some 2,000 tons of it by quiet purchases through brokers before it became apparent. When the British learned of it there were angry comments in Parliament on the ground that it was inconsistent for a country professing friendliness toward Finland to reexport materials obtained from British sources to Finland's enemy.

Sales of rubber and tin from the United States to Russia or any other country now have ceased.

Plane Firms, Allies Suspend Talks on $1,000,000,000 Order

Await 'More Favorable' Atmosphere As Congress Prepares to Open Inquiry; Aircraft and Steel Shares Break

By Devon Francis.
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 15.—American manufacturers and French and British purchasing missions who have been dickering for the sale of $1,000,000,000 worth of warplanes, suspended their talks today.

It was understood that the negotiations, at least for late model planes which the Allies hoped to obtain, would not be resumed unless next week's Congressional inquiry into the sale of aircraft abroad is held in a "favorable" atmosphere.

Representatives of at least eight plane and engine makers, who remained uncommunicative, left the city after less than five days of conversations. They made no arrangements to return Monday. Manufacturers with local offices declined comment.

The sudden suspension may also have been connected with the possibility of a general European peace move in the wake of the termination of the Russo-Finnish war.

Steel, Plane Shares Break

Whether the French and British purchasing missions, which only eight days ago publicly announced they were ready to commit themselves on huge orders, had received new instructions from home was not known.

In any case, before the talks closed steel and aircraft shares, which had been soft in the stock market during the morning, broke more than 2 points in some instances by noon.

It was reported reliably that the manufacturers' portfolios were still open to re-orders on equipment already released for export.

The French and British have been interested, however, more in the purchase of the newer types of warplanes, developed for the American armed services and not released for export, than in older planes.

In Washington, where both Senate and House subcommittees are scheduled to launch inquiries into aircraft sales, the House military aviation subcommittee formally asked four War Department representatives to testify next Wednesday.

Asked to Explain Policy

They were Secretary of War Woodring, Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson, Gen. George C. Marshall, the Army chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps.

They will be called upon to explain the Administrations' policy regarding the release of aircraft and other military equipment for sale abroad.

Chairman Harter (Democrat), Ohio, said the committee was interested chiefly in determinig whether foreign nations were being given the benefit of American military inventions, particularly those developed with taxpayers' money.

He added the committee also would go into the question of whether foreign purchases of American planes was interfering with United States defense plans.

Technically the New York negotiations were broken off only as they related to contracts for planes such as the "Bell Airacobra," described by the manufacturer as a 400-mile-an-hour pursuit. It is not released for export.

House Group To Invite Goss As Witness

Resigned Land Bank Chief to Be Asked To Appear Wednesday

Albert S. Goss, who resigned as land bank commissioner in protest against "soft" credit moves of the Farm Credit Administration, will be invited to appear before the House Agriculture Committee next week.

Democratic and Republican members of the committee joined in urging that Goss and a Treasury representative be invited to testify on the Jones bill for revising the farm credit system. Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, who introduced the measure, told the committee he was "perfectly willing" that Goss be heard, and said he would extend the invitation to appear Wednesday.

The invitation, which was urged by Representatives Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska; and Hope (Republican), of Kansas, was seen as opening the way for an airing of the credit policy fight within the FCA since the agency was placed under the Agriculture Department last July.

Goss, one of three key FCA officials who have resigned as a result of the agency's transfer, has attacked the Jones bill as typical of a tendency to solve the farm problem by lending more and more money, and declared it would "wreck" the cooperative farm system built up over a 23-year period.

Jones said that Goss was "extreme" in some statements, and declared his bill was intended to "improve and preserve" the farm credit system. The bill would fix at 3 per cent the interest rate on land bank loans, now 3½ per cent, and on land bank commissioner loans, now 4 per cent, retire the stock of the land banks, and establish Government guarantee for farm bonds.

War Hero, Lasky Fail to Agree On Film Story

Nashville, Tenn., March 15 (AP).—Alvin C. York, the World War hero, and Jesse L. Lasky, the movie producer, dickered today over a contract to permit Lasky to produce a pictorial story of the life of the Tennessee mountaineer.

With his attorney, Walter L. Bruington, Lasky opened the conference by brandishing a typical Hollywood contract.

"That's not for me," drawled York, and handed it to John Hale, a country lawyer from Jamestown, Tenn., who said: "What we want is a plain old Tennessee contract that simply says what you shall do and what the sergeant shall do."

Then York recalled deals he had made for horses or mules, adding: "There isn't a great deal of difference between trading for a mule or a movie contract."

The conference recessed.

Musica Calls Macy Store Bootleg 'Front'

Testifies N. Y. Firm Aided Drug Concern In Shady Deals

By the Associated Press

New York, March 15.—The firm of R. H. Macy & Co., New York's biggest department store, was described in Federal Court today by George Dietrich-Musica as a "cover house" through which the arch-swindler, F. Donald Coster-Musica, sold alcohol to bootleggers in the form of eau de quinine.

Dietrich-Musica testified as a Government witness in the mail fraud trial of five men accused of guilty knowledge of the astonishing bookkeeping gymnastics through which Coster-Musica embellished the $87,000,000 McKesson & Robbins Drug Corporation with about $20,000,000 in fictitious assets.

His picture of the Macy store as a sort of middleman between Coster-Musica and various bootleggers of the prerepeal era did not involve McKesson & Robbins, but went back to Girard & Co., a concern acquired by Coster-Musica when he was on the way up to eventual control of the McKesson organization and shucking, in the meantime, his real identity as former convict Philip Musica.

"Ridiculous" Says Macy Aide

In connection with Dietrich-Musica's testimony, Delos Walker, Macy's general manager, issued this statement:

"Such testimony sounds too ridiculous to receive serious acceptance. However, we shall be glad indeed to lend every facility to the Federal district attorney for the exploration of Musica's testimony."

"Did Macy's actually buy the eau de quinine?" asked George Medalie, of defense counsel, at the trial.

"Yes, they did," said Dietrich-Musica. "Macy would pay Girard & Co., and the bootleggers would pay Macy."

"You mean," counsel pursued, "that Coster used to put Macy on the books when he really wasn't selling to Macy?"

"Macy only gave the order; they never got the goods, nor never saw the goods," the witness responded.

300 Barrels in Order

"There would be 300 barrels (in an order)—you have got an item of 300 barrels of quinine (which) would be billed to Macy's, but somebody else would get the merchandise."

Dietrich-Musica, a brother of Coster-Musica—who shot himself to death in his Connecticut mansion in 1938 amid the wave of scandal that his exposure had caused—declared that any auditor should have known that Macy's itself couldn't have taken actual delivery of 300 barrels.

"Any auditor," he added, "would know that we were making more shampoo and eau de quinine than could be used by the whole world."

At one point he agreed with Medalie that a "good bootlegger" of an era now gone could "boil off" eau de quinine and lilac vegetal "and sell it for some kind of scotch."

Families Flee Homes In Seaboard Floods

New York, March 15 (INS).—Relief and repair crews worked overtime tonight to restore transportation and communication lines disrupted by floods following the southeast gale and heavy rains which swept the Atlantic seabord from New England to Virginia last night and early today.

Many roads were closed to traffic in New York State, New Jersey and Pennsylvania because of washouts.

At Morristown, N. J., 50 families were evacuated from "The Hollow" after the Whippany River rose over its banks.

At Philadelphia, the Schuyhkill River rose 6 feet between 11 p. m. last night and 5 a. m. today, but finally the rise stopped. It reached a point only 10 inches below flood stage at Flat Rock Dam.

Tom Pendergast Settles With U.S. for $350,000

Tom Pendergast, former Kansas City boss, now serving a prison term in Leavenworth for income tax evasion, has settled his tax argument with the Government for $350,000, it was learned yesterday. Pendergast had been assessed an additional $707,000 in back taxes, but on recommendation of the Internal Revenue Bureau the compromise was reached.

The Internal Revenue Bureau also agreed to a $9,000 payment by Emmet O'Malley, former Missouri insurance commissioner, who is also serving a jail sentence at Leavenworth for tax evasion.

Pair of 11-Year-Olds at Langdon School Elected Co-Chairmen for 'Pinocchio' Showing

Martha Geesling Honorary Chief of Film For Crippled Children

Two proud 11-year-olds were elected yesterday by their Langdon schoolmates as cochairmen of the special "Pinocchio" premiere for physically handicapped children to be given at RKO Keith's Theater next Thursday at 9 a. m.

They are Edith Mae Meile, of 1400 Good Hope road southeast, and Elmer Donn Miller, 259 Kentucky avenue southeast.

At the same time, Martha Geesling, the Emergency Hospital patient, 13 years old, an invalid, who was taken to the Capitol Thursday to urge visiting teacher funds for instruction of shut-ins, was named honorary chairman of the movie party, sponsored by Keith's and The Post.

The closely contested election at Langdon School was supervised by Mrs. Beulah Jones Drake, principal teacher of the crippled children's department.

"I am very happy over being appointed honorary chairman of the crippled and handicapped children's party," said Martha, who herself has never seen a movie in a theater. "Whatever the duties are, I shall do my best. I want to thank all the good citizens who have worked to make the party possible."

William L. Bush, vice president of the Gray Line, said he will furnish a 30-passenger bus, for youngsters whose parents cannot take them to the party.

Michael J. Uline, head of the ice company bearing his name, will assume responsibility for transporting the pupils of Langdon School. He also will provide a truck to haul their wheel chairs.

Joseph Cherner, of the Cherner Motor Co., volunteered to place a number of passenger cars at the children's disposal.

Individuals and business houses wishing to assist in the transportation plans are invited to write or telephone the city editor of The Post.

Edith Mae Meilie and Elmer Donn Miller, both 11, of the Langdon School for Crippled Children, have been named co-chairmen of the Post-RKO sponsored premiere showing of "Pinocchio" at Keith's Theater Thursday morning.

Social Council Adopts Bill For Child Care

Measure Provides For the Licensing Of Adoption Agents

Legislation for licensing persons or agencies who accept children under 16 for placement in foster homes was adopted yesterday by the child welfare committee of the Council of Social Agencies.

The measure will be presented to the council's board of directors for ratification and will then be submitted to the Board of Public Welfare as recommended legislation, it was announced.

In addition to requiring that child placement agencies be licensed, the bill includes a maximum penalty of a $300 fine or 90 days in jail or both for violation of its provisions.

Under the measure, a licensed agency may accept children for foster home placements either from parents or courts. Placement agencies would be designated by the Board of Public Welfare, and a special committee from the board, Health Department and five local charitable organizations would formulate standards for care and services to children placed in homes.

The council's committee also adopted a measure providing for the support and maintenance of children born out of wedlock.

The Rev. John W. Rustin presided at yesterday's meeting of the child welfare committee. Mrs. Louis Ottenberg is chairman of the legislative committee.

Red Cross to Hold Course for Staff

A six-week staff assistants' course, to begin "within the next few weeks," was announced yesterday at a meeting of the Kensington branch of the Montgomery County Red Cross Chapter.

Mrs. George Snyder, production chairman, reported that in the last two months 17 sweaters and 22 woolen dresses have been made for war relief. Volunteers are needed for bandage dressings, Mrs. Snyder said. She urged all persons in the neighborhood interested to get in touch with Mrs. Henry Milburn, of Kensington.

A donation was made to help the chapter reestablish its office which was destroyed in the Rockville High School fire.

Air-Bomb Test Urged on Old Ships Instead of on Animals

Mrs. H. W. Elmore, Head of District Humane Society, Scores Proposal Goats Be Tettered and Killed

Obsolete ships instead of live animals will be used to demonstrate the supposedly terrific striking power of mysterious new air bombs invented by a Baltimore man, if the Washington Humane Society has its way.

Mrs. Herbert W. Elmore, president of the society, revealed yesterday she has written to the chairmen of the Senate and House Military Affairs committees protesting a proposal that goats be tethered in a field and bombed.

The new weapon, invented by Lester P. Barlow, of the Glenn L. Martin Co., of Baltimore, is said to have power to kill every living thing within 1,000 feet.

"We've had a long fight to save the starlings," Mrs. Elmore said last night. "Now it looks as though we'll have to do what we can about this. Why don't they make their test on obsolete ships? We've certainly got enough of them."

So impressed was the Senate Military Affairs Committee by Barlow's description of his explosive, named GLMite for the Martin firm, that it ordered records of the hearing burned. Barlow will be questioned again Monday.

"I can fly 20,000 feet over a battleship," Barlow told the Associated Press in Baltimore yesterday, "and put it out of commission with one of these bombs. I don't even have to hit it.

"When she goes off 30 feet above the surface, I'll get the gun crews and controlling crews and put the ship out of commission. Another bomb set to go off 40 feet beneath the surface would finish the job."

Such bombs exploded in the air over a battlefield, he said, would result in wholesale slaughter.

Duke Carl Eduard And Davis Confer On Polish Relief

Carl Eduard, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, president of the German Red Cross and vice chairman of the League of Red Cross Societies, discussed relief work activities in Europe, particularly in Poland, for an hour yesterday with Norman H. Davis, president of the American Red Cross.

After the conference which was described by officials as general in character, Davis remarked that the duke had "the real Red Cross spirit."

In addition to discussing Polish relief, the two officials went into the refugee problems of tar-torn countries, the reuniting of relatives and the problems presented by prisoners.

They will have another conference and lunch today.

Geneva, March 15.—A 70-year-old Lithuanian Jew named Adolf Hitler is causing Nazi authorities in German-occupied Poland considerable amount of embarrassment, according to the Jewish People's Newspaper in Zurich.

The newspaper states that the old man was caught by the war while visiting the village of Wloclawec. He has begged to return to Lithuania, but the Nazis object to granting a visa because, although this Jewish Hitler spells his name with a double "t," it still approximates, too closely, that of Germany's anti-Semitic Fuhrer.

U. S. Court Again Denies Beard's Bid for Freedom

New Orleans, March 15 (AP).—Sam R. Beard, serving a two to six year term in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, today lost his third attempt to gain release on a habeas corpus writ before the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Beard claimed his conviction for violating the District of Columbia gambling code should be thrown out because "wire-tapping" evidence which the United States Supreme Court since has ruled illegal was used against him.

The appellate court held that no objection was raised by defense at the time of trial and that there was no indication Beard's constitutional rights had been violated.

This attempt marked Beard's seventh bid for freedom since imposition of the prison sentence in May, 1935.

Scott Circle Jam Caused By Underpass

Intersection Unable To Assimilate Faster Flow of Traffic

By Howard F. Wentworth

Novelty of the new Thomas Circle underpass apparently began to wear off yesterday and rush-hour traffic zipped through the shiny tunnel with little delay.

But it was a different picture at Scott Circle. Although the afternoon rush-hour jam didn't compare with Thursday's congestion, cars at this point were stalled for nearly two blocks along Massachusetts and Rhode Island avenues.

Inspector William E. Holmes and a special detail of policemen were on hand to straighten out the snarl, shunting traffic through side streets when an impasse developed.

"Impossible," Says Holmes

"It is just impossible to get traffic through Scott Circle with its narrow roadways now that more motorists are using the underpass route," said Inspetcor Holmes. "Something will have to be done—and done quick."

Cars which sped under Thomas Circle at 25 and 30-miles-an-hour were slowed to a snail's pace around Scott. Again yesterday, four lanes of traffic were forced to converge into two in order to negotiate the "channelized" roadways.

Motorists, on the other hand, had nothing but praise for surface improvements at Thomas Circle.

Said one taxi driver: "It's the first time in my five years' experience of driving a cab that I've been able to get through Thomas Circle on Fourteenth street without getting mad. There appears to be a few kinks, but I'm sure they'll straighten out when folks get used to things."

The new light system at Union Station Plaza, however, obviously continued to annoy homeward-bound motorists yesterday. A survey at rush-hour time revealed that the bulk of traffic approaching the plaza turned away rather than buck the intricate maze of flashing signals.

Plaza Deserted

At 4:50 p. m.—Usually the height of the afternoon rush—the plaza was almost free of traffic. Only a few passenger cars were observed within the station area. Taxis traveling to and from the depot accounted for the major traffic flow.

Of 12 pedestrians who attempted to cross the plaza, only three were seen to observe the new "walk" and "don't walk" signals. Several walkers stood patiently on the curb awaiting a change of lights, but gave up and crossed on the "don't."

Fight in Air Held 'Unbelievable'

New York, March 15 (U.P.).—After questioning Joseph Rosmarin for two and a half hours, Assistant District Attorney McKinney, of Richmond County, tonight described as "unbelievable" the story he told of a hand-to-hand fight with a passenger in a plane he was piloting yesterday.

The plane crashed into New York Bay. Rosmarin was rescued by a tugboat. The body of Emanuel Eisenberg, press agent, slipped from the plane and washed up today on the Jersey shore.

Trial of Correspondent Concluded in Japan

Tokyo, March 15.—The trial of James R. Young, International News Service correspondent, on a charge of sending out reports damaging to Japan was finished today and a verdict is expected next Friday.

As the charges involved matters which under military law cannot be published in Japan, proceedings were conducted in camera. The only witness examined was Seishichi Iwasaka, former president of the Tokyo Gas Co., who has known Young intimately in the United States and Japan.

Paris, March 15 (AP).—Marcel and Paul Vacoret, brothers, died on the guillotine in the courtyard of La Sante Prison at dawn today, just four months after they killed three policemen who attempted to arrest them for stealing bicycles.

President Lebrun had denied their appeal.

Blames It All On Barleycorn

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. SONIA CLIVE, blond model-wife of Artist Henry Clive, had on file in New York yesterday a suit for separation. She accused Clive of laziness and over-indulgence in liquor, saying that her efforts to reform him were futile. She asserted the painter could make $50,000 but because of his drinking is satisfied with $10,000

Willkie Urges Continuance Of Revolution

Denies That 'True' Liberalism Calls for Economic Equality

San Francisco, March 15 (AP).—True liberals are persons who believe men should be free—not those who call themselves liberals and try to "concentrate power in the hands of a single individual," Wendell L. Willkie told the Commonwealth Club today.

The president of Commonwealth and Southern Corporation asserted "it is time for the American people to take up the revolution their forefathers started, and to carry it further."

Addressing the club on "Liberalism," Willkie derided any definition of the word in economic terms. Liberty and liberalism, he insisted, do not call for equal distribution of wealth.

"If it is true, as some New Dealers have told us, that unemployment will be from now on permanent, it seems to the liberal that his system is then finished.

"If he believes that, there is nothing left for him but to become an out and out reactionary and insist upon a return to the old absolute power system that has so bloodily governed humanity for so long."

People will demand a curb be placed on government "which has grown too great," he said.

Bioff, A. F. L. Leader, Loses Fight to Void Old Sentence

Court Can't Pardon, Says Judge In Answer to Habeas Corpus Plea On Term Decreed 18 Years Ago

Chicago, March 15 (AP).—William Bioff, who rose from a job in a Chicago saloon to leadership of 35,000 Hollywood movie unionists, lost his criminal court fight today for release from an 18-year-old six-month sentence for pandering.

Chief Justice John Prystalski refused to grant Bioff's petition for a habeas corpus writ and ordered him remanded to the house of correction, but delayed entering the order until March 25 to permit an appeal to the State Supreme Court. The court continued Bioff's bond of $5,000.

State Senator Abraham Marovitz, attorney for Bioff, declined to outline the next step for his client, who, he said, had rehabilitated himself despite the handicap of having lived his early life amid crime, thieves, and even murderers. Marovitz also contended that the State had been guilty of neglect and undue delay.

"This court," said Judge Prystalski, "has no pardoning power" after commenting that Bioff had remained in Chicago more than ten years after his conviction.

Unions Back Bioff

Hollywood, March 15 (AP).—Informed today that a Chicago court had ordered William Bioff to finish an uncompleted term for pandering, Jackson Parks, spokesman for the A. F. of L. Conference of Studio Unions, declared:

"Bioff will remain chairman and will continue to direct film labor negotiations, even if he has to do it from a jail cell."

Body of Missing Woman Found; Man Confesses

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 15 (INS).—The body of Mrs. Anna K. Henson, missing since January 18, was found buried behind her home in Daytona Beach late today.

Authorities discovered the body a few minutes after A. M. Phillips, who claimed he married the woman recently, had confessed, police said, to her murder. Phillips already was being questioned by authorities on charges of mail fraud.

Pine Is Named Justice, Curran Prosecutor

Swift Confirmation For District Jurists Expected in Senate

and was admitted to the bar in October, 1913.

Clerk for McReynolds

The next year Pine became the confidential law clerk of the then Attorney General, James C. McReynolds, and served in that capacity until McReynolds became a Supreme Court Justice. Pine then was clerk to Attorney General Thomas W. Gregory, later becoming an assistant attorney in the Department of Justice.

When the war came, Pine became an Army lieutenant, rising to the rank of captain before he was mustered out in 1919. He returned to the Department of Justice and became a special assistant to the Attorney General, being assigned to handle Federal litigation in the Far West.

Following the inauguration of President Harding in 1921, Pine, a Democrat, entered private law practice with the late Ralph Fleharty and Col. James Easby-Smith, under whom he had served in the war.

Made a Full Partner

Four years later Pine became a full partner in the firm, the other members being Col. Easby-Smith, Former Assistant Corporation Counsel Frank Easby-Smith, and Francis W. Hill, jr., who now is president of the District Bar Association.

Pine began practicing with A. F. Myers, former Federal Trade Commission chairman, in 1929 and continued until he became first assistant district attorney February 1, 1934.

January 1, 1938, Yine became district attorney. The day he took office there were 629 criminal cases awaiting trial in the District Court. Pine believed that delay in criminal justice was an unsound and dangerous policy.

"Speedy justice is the best deterrent of crime," he repeated in addresses to civic bodies and in his official appearances before Congressional committees.

The new prosecutor formulated a consecutive program of clearing the lagging criminal docket. After nearly two years of experimental assignments, he reorganized his staff upon a streamlined pattern, with a civil division under Division Chief John Fihelly and a criminal division under Division Chief John J. Wilson. To insure that prosecutions moved with no dragging ends, Pine established the post of senior McNeil to cooperate with both divitrial attorney, appointing George E. sion chiefs in getting cases to trial without delay.

Recognizing the value of social research, Pine welcomed cooperation of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, using its charts and analyses and posting the more striking and pertinent on the walls of his office. He reorganized his own record system, also, and never left his desk at night without examining a report which showed the position of every case on his books at the close of that day.

Only 84 Cases Pending

The result of his efforts was demonstrated yesterday. As Pine was receiving the congratulations of his friends, Assistant District Attorney John C. Conliff, jr., handed his chief daily report, which showed that at the close of business yesterday there were 84 criminal cases awaiting trial. This compared with 629 a little over two years ago.

Pine's sustained, systematic campign against crime won him the support of public groups when a seat on the benth was vacated by the death of Justice Cox. The District Bar Association gave him its unanimous indorsement. Another strong backer was the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

Some of the other organizations which joined the movement were the Federal Bar Association, the Women's Bar Association, the Barristers, the American Good Government Society, the Washington Board of Trade, the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, the Brookland Citizens Association, the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights, the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, the Federation of Business Men's Associations, the Delta Theta Phi Law Fraternity, the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association, the National Democratic League, the Mid-City Citizens Association, the Northern Seventh Street Business Men's Association, the Petworth Citizens Association, the Piney Branch Citizens Association, the Virginia Democratic Club, the Society of Natives and the Southeast Citizens Association.

These organizations, in letters, resolutions, petitions and by personal calls presented the appointing and recommending authorities with two propositions: (1) That the District Court, 18 months behind in its work, ought to have among its judges another local lawyer; and (2) that Pine was the lawyer.

Prominent in Clubs

Many prominent citizens took individual action to spur the appointment. These men knew Pine from his work in various organizations. He is a member of the Episcopalian Church, the American, Federal and District Bar associations, the Barristers, of which club he is a former president; the Lawyers Club, the Masons, the Metropolitan Club and the Delta Theta Phi Fraternity.

Announcement of the nominations impelled quick acclaim. Sefton Darr, a former president of the District Bar Association, said of Pines' nomination: "The appointment was a very fine one. He knows the needs of the District, is familiar with our courts and the people here should be grateful to the President for the appointment."

Judge Curran's promotion Darr called "perfectly logical."

"I regard it as another fine appointment," he said.

Mrs. Helena Doocy Reed, president of the Women's Bar Association, believed the appointment of Pine served a two-fold purpose: it recognized the merit of Mr. Pine and served the desire of District residents that a District resident have the post. She reminded that the association unanimously indorsed Mr. Pine last October.

"I am very much pleased over the appointment of Judge Curran, and feel he will make a splendid record," she said.

John Claggett Proctor, acting president, Association of Oldest Inhabitants, was outspoken in gratification over the appointment.

"I have known Mr. Pine all his life, and I knew his father before him," he stated. "I cannot express my gratification, and the association feels the same."

He added that he felt the nomination of Judge Curran to be "a very good appointment and one that is due any man who has served the city as well as he has done."

Sparrel Wood Comments

Sparrel A. Wood, president, Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights, commented:

"We (the forum) are particularly glad to hear of David Pine's nomination to judgeship in District Court for three reason. First, on the basis of his excellent qualifications; second, that he is a local man (our organization has long advocated appointment of a local man to the judgeship), and third, because he is familiar with court procedure. No better man could be found for the position."

Of Judge Curran's nomination, Wood said: "I was personally very glad to hear of it, and am convinced he is a good man."

Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the District Bar Association, commented that "Mr. Pine is eminently qualified, and his appointment meets with the broad general approval of the entire District."

"He is a man of outstanding ability, of judicial temperament and high integrity. He is equipped to render immediately effective service. He will bring our calendar to current condition," Hill added.

Curran, he said, "has made a very able and satisfactory judge and is well qualified for the position of district attorney."

Spencer Gordon, prominent attorney, said he was "delighted over the appointment. They could not have found a better man."

Curran's choice, Gordon said, was "a fine nomination. He made a splendid record on the Police Court bench and should make a splendid district attorney."

Senator King was described as gratified to hear of the appointment."

Pine married Miss Elizabeth Bradshaw and they have one daughter, Elizabeth Carr Pine, 16, who is a student of Roosevelt High School. The Pines live at 1625 Nicholson street northwest.

Curran Born in Maine

Judge Curran was born in Bangor, Me., May 10, 1903. He came here when he was 20 years old, after receiving the degree of bachelor of arts at the University of Maine. From Catholic University, Curran received the degrees of bachelor of science and bachelor of laws.

Curran became a teacher of law in Catholic University and in Columbia Law School. Later he was named an assistant corporation counsel, and has handled trials in the Police Court. Judge Curran was married June 7, 1934, to Miss Katherine Hand, of Washington. They and their three children live at 6607 Western avenue.

President Roosevelt sent Curran's nomination as Police Judge to the Senate March 12, 1936, and he was soon confirmed. After ascending the bench, Judge Curran continued his legal researches, enrolling as a graduate student of jurisprudence in the George Washington University. His object was to work out practical application of modern principles to the problems of his court.

Staggered Court Hours

Judge Curran initiated a series of reforms, urging staggered hours for holding court, to make appearances easier for defendants and witnesses. He advocated a system of uniform fines and other penalties.

While urging immediate reform, however, Judge Curran continued to search for the broader, more fundamental principles of criminal sociology. The blame for most criminal careers, he concluded, lay in the law efforts of parents, schools and other guiding agencies. "Start them right when they are young," was his solution of the problem of crime.

As a judge, Judge Curran confessed himself often bewildered by the problem of a proper sentence for criminals before him. He became a stanch advocate of a behavior clinic, by which a judge might have the benefit of skilled social and psychological laboratory study.

Judge Curran endeavored to distinguish between viciousness and frailty in human conduct, sometimes recalling that he himself once was obliged to post collateral for improper parking. Once on Good Friday he dismissed 40 men accused of drunkenness, telling them "Go, and sin no more."

As he becomes the District's highest ranking prosecutor, Judge Curran is a prematurely white-haired man, slight of build and fresh of complexion. He dresses dapperly, and insists upon rigid decorum in the court room.

Saccardi Asks Stiff Sentences To Stop Crime

Dr. Nolan Berates Victims for Refusal To Prosecute

Lack of uniform and heavy sentences for major crimes was scored yesterday by the corrections committee of the Council of Social Agencies at a meeting in the Y. W. C. A. It was voted to seek a conference with judges of the District Court in an effort to curb Washington's increasing number of armed robberies.

"We have on our books sufficient laws to put a stop to these crimes of violence," said Vincent Saccardi, chairman. "As long as we have the necessary weapons to wipe out crime, let's use them."

He referred to sections of the District penal code which provide for additional sentences over the prescribed penalty for armed robbery. He pointed out that under the law, judges may add five years to a jail sentence for first-offense armed robbery, 10 years for a second offense, 15 years for a third and 30 years for a fourth.

"Gunmen who commit robberies," said Saccardi, "should receive the severest penalties possible. In many instances, they wouldn't hesitate to commit murder."

G. Howland Shaw, member of the committee, was named to complete arrangements for the conference with District Court judges, and Saccardi said he would prepare a "program designed to arouse public opinion" for presentation to the council's annual meeting May 13.

Dr. James Allen Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, reviewed Washington's crime situation. He pointed out that 10,064 robberies were committed in the District last year and in 20 per cent of the ones which were solved, victims refused to appear in court to prosecute.

"It is a horrible condition when citizens refuse to recognize their civic responsibilities and won't help police convict accused criminals," he said.

White House News Writers Dine Tonight

Roosevelt to Be Guest; 700 Correspondents Will See Satirical Film

Satire and entertainment will be mingled tonight at the eighteenth annual dinner of the White House Correspondents Association, at which President Roosevelt will be the guest of honor.

Most of the members of the Cabinet, other Administration officials and Congressional leaders will be present, together with about 700 newspapermen and their guests.

A feature of the program will be a satirical movie written by the White House correspondents and produced and filmed by Paramount News. The 1940 Presidential campaign will be the theme.

The entertainment will be a floor show provided by the Columbia Broadcasting Co.

Although the President has been confined to his room with a cold the greater part of the week, there has been no announced change in his plan to attend.

He has attended every dinner of the association since he has been in the White House. The association canceled its dinner last year owing to the hotel employes' strike.

The dinner, strictly a stag party, will be the occasion for the induction of officers. Earl Godwin, of the Washington Times-Herald, who has served as president for two terms, will turn over the gavel to Felix Belair, jr., of the New York Times Washington bureau, the new president. Other officers are Thomas F. Reynolds, of the United Press, vice president; Paul Wooton, of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, secretary-treasurer, and John C. O'Brien, of the Philadelphia Inquirer; Claude A. Mahoney, of the Wall Street Journal, and Douglas B. Cornell, of the Associated Press, members of the executive board.

The Navy Band orchestra will play and a chorus of 50 students of the Navy School of Music will sing old sea songs.

Armstrong High Chorus on Radio Workshop Today

The combined chorus of Armstrong High School will present a half hour of American music on the Student Radio Workshop of the Air, beginning at 5 p. m. today over WJSV.

Asking itself the question, "What is American music?" the chorus has arranged its answer in the program, which says "American music is Stephen Collins Foster, James Bland, Sigmund Romberg, Edward McDowell, William Grant Still, William C. Handy, George Gershwin and Harry T. Burleigh."

Renditions will include "Wagon Wheels," "The Arkansas Traveler," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," "St. Louis Blues" and "Rhapsody in Blue."

A skit titled "What Is American Music?" will be presented by James Clark, Edna Holmes and Roscoe Speller.

The Morning After Is Fine, Gourmet Reveals

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Without benefit of soda, aspirin tablets or patented morning lifts that fizz in water, G. Selmer Fougner, an elder gourmet who ate his way through the $8 Amis d'Escoffier banquet Thursday night, arose yesterday at 10 a. m. to talk of food and find the morning good.

FOUGNER

A portly man, who attends at least four gourmet feasts a week and writes of foods and fine wines, he beamed from his hotel window, did not hiccough once, and inquired of the next train to New York, where his schedule called for further banqueting.

To a question, he said "Fillet of Sole Marguery; it is, I think the greatest dish developed in the last decade. Thick white sauce, mushrooms and truffles." His mouth twitched, as though tasting it, but his expression was that of a scientist who offers professional conclusion.

"But to the question of how I feel. I have not let-down. I have had a wonderful experience. Broadly, everything worthwhile takes place around fine dinner tables. Wars are concluded and peace treaties signed. No, I feel no ill effects from last evening."

The telephone rang, to say his train left at noon.

"I remember once in Paris, Mme. Ritz gave a dinner in my honor. There were 14 wines . . . How did I find time for all this and the food? Well, you pick and choose, you know, saying, 'will lay stress on this, or that . . . But there were 14 wines and the next morning Mme. Ritz called to inquire how I was. I was all right.

"I must hurry now to the train. But the greatest chef now is Joseph Donon, a Frenchman, the chef of Mrs. Twombly. The big hotel chefs are becoming executives, but in Mrs. Twombly's kitchen the chef cooks. Yes, I feel no effects. These meals are so balanced that nothing can happen to your digestion. The meals are even rehearsed, with committees tasting and the chef who prepared the previous meal is summoned in.

"I must hurry. How long is it to the train? My favorite dish," he reminded, hurrying through the door; "it is the simple tournedos Rossini. A small piece of beef, two inches thick, broiled on a piece of toast. . . . Oh, boy, hurry my bags, have the cab waiting, please! . . . surmounted by a large foigras and a slice of truffle."

Waterways Called Vital To Defenses

Rivers and Harbors Congress Addressed By Rep. Secrest

Maximum development of the country's inland waterways should be recognized as an integral phase of the National defense program, the National Rivers and Harbors Congress asserted last night in a resolution adopted at its final session in the Mayflower Hotel.

The report of the resolutions committee, read by Representative Robert Secrest (Democrat), of Ohio, stated that the United States, if involved in war, would find rail and other transportation facilities seriously strained. Waterway development, if begun soon enough, could meet the burdens of an "emergency load," the resolution declared.

Points to Present War

"After our entrance into the World War," Secrest pointed out, "our railroads became overtaxed and the Railroad Administration took steps to develop supplementary transportation on inland waterways —only to learn that extensive improvements could not be attained promptly enough in a time of great national effort."

"We are aware of the high value placed upon inland waterways by those European nations now at war," he added.

The congress expressed "unalterable" opposition to the control of intercoastal, coastwise or inland waterway transport by any regulatory commission.

Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, was reelected president. Other officers for 1940 are William J. Driver, former Representative from Rrkansas, chairman of the board; Representative Secrest, vice chairman of the board; Fred Beneke, secretary-treasurer; William A. Webb, executive vice president.

Earlier yesterday congress delegates bitterly attacked the Wheeler-Lea bill, which would bring inland waterways under jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Representative Francis Culkin (Republican), of New York, charged that the bill was the handiwork of "the ruthless railroad lobby."

Chief concern of the ICC, he said, "is to enable the railroads to pay interest and dividends on their stocks, bonds and other alleged assets, whch theoretically represent the railroad's swollen and watered capitalization, much of which is obsolescent."

Reduction Protested

Representative Orville Zimmerman (Democrat), of Missouri, declared that cheap water transportation "must be preserved for the public welfare, regardless of the serious problems of any other form of transportation."

Both Republican and Democratic Senators and Representatives took part in the two-day session of the congress. Speakers from all sections of the country protested the Budget Bureau's reduction of the War Department's request of $280,000,000 for flood control and river and harbor projects to $90,000,000.

W. B. Rodgers, president of the United States Flood Control Federation, yesterday warned the congress that it would be the "purest folly" to slow down the Nation's flood-control program.

The projects committee of the congress last night placed on its approved list 18 new flood-control and river and harbor developments, involving an estimated outlay of $86,155,150.

Last year the approved list contained 54 projects, estimated to cost a total of $696,000,000. These projects still have the group's indorsement.

The congress withdrew its approval of the St. Lawrence seaway project "due to the fact that Canada is now at war." The resolution asked that the Senate, before taking action, "consider carefully all implications arising from the proposed construction of the St. Lawrence waterway."

Other speakers yesterday included Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi; Chauncey J. Hamlin, chairman, Niagara Frontier Planning Board; Representative Ellis (Democrat), of Arkansas; J. Hampton Moore, president, Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association; Representative Carter (Republican), of California; Representative Leavy (Democrat), of Washington; Cleveland A. Newton, general counsel, Mississippi Valley Association.

Pupils to See Benefit Circus In 5 Groups

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, yesterday announced a stagger system for the excused attendance of pupils at the Children's Hospital benefit circus to be held in Riverside Stadium April 15-21.

White and colored public schools have been grouped into five divisions, each to have its day at the circus. A maximum of 4,500 tickets, specially priced at 25 cents, will be allotted to each division.

The tickets will be honored at the 3 p. m. matinees April 16 to 20, inclusive, also at the 10 a. m. performance April 20. They will be sold on a first come, first served basis.

Boys and girls in Division 1 will be excused from school in time to attend the 3 p. m. matinee April 16; Division 5, whose tickets will be good for the Saturday performances, will not have to be excused from classes.

Junior League Warns of Appeal For False Projects

Any solicitation of funds for child-welfare projects in the name of the Junior League of Washington—other than Children's Hospital—is "totally unauthorized," the league announced last night.

Recent reports that Washingtonians had been asked to contribute to aid the league's child welfare program prompted the following statement from Mrs. Ernest Warren, publicity chairman:

"The Junior League has only one agency for whom it raises money—the social service department of Children's Hospital. Any other representations are false and unauthorized."

All Together, Now . . . Strike Up the Band!

Temple Center, Tenth and N streets northwest, is the scene of many a "jam session" like this. Dr. Darby Quits as Secretary Of D. C. Church Federation

After almost 18 years as executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, Dr. W. L. Darby has announced his resignation, effective November 30.

DR. DARBY

Dr. Darby explained that "the work has become too strenuous and needs a younger man to carry on the increasing responsibilities. He will be 65 on November 29. He presented his resignation at the federation's monthly board meeting on Thursday.

Since he assumed the secretaryship in 1922, when the headquarters were a one-room office and waiting room in the Bond Building, the annual financial budget has increased from $8,000 to $20,000, the affiliated Protestant congregations from 50 to 150, and the denominations from 10 to 22.

Today it is the only federation in America owning its own building, a $70,000 plant at 1749-51 N street northwest. It was acquired in 1937.

In his apartment in the Ontario, at Eighteenth street and Ontario road, last night Dr. Darby pictured a growing sense of unity among local congregations as one of the most heartening aspects of his career here.

Dr. Darby, who will continue his full federation duties until November 30, has some plans "under consideration" for the future, he said, and added that he "wanted to stay in harness as long as possible."

When he became federation secretary he succeeded Dr. Lucius C. Clark, who later was named American University chancellor. The federation, organized in 1920, will celebrate its twentieth anniversary here on April 8.

Dr. Darby Speaks At Lenten Service

More practical Christianity was urged yesterday by Dr. W. L. Darby at Southeast churches' daily noonday Lenten services at the Penn Theater.

"There is a great need for practical Christianity today," said the executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, "rather than sentimental or mystical conceptions of religion which are inadequate."

The real test of a Christian is embodied in the characteristics of love, joy, peace long-suffering, kindness, meekness, faithfulness, goodness and self-control, he assured. The Rev. A. F. T. Raum, presiding, introduced the speaker.

The Fifteenth Street Christian Church, of which the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers is pastor, will conduct the coming week's programs, Monday through Friday, at 12 noon. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, will preach on Monday.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will address daily noonday services at Epiphany Episcopal Church—his former pulpit—during Holy Week, Monday through Friday.

Daladier Wins 240-to-0 Confidence Vote But 60 Abstain From Ballot

May Give Up War Portfolio, Paris Hears

Senate Gives Premier Mandate to Exercise 'Increasing Energy'

By P. J. Philip.

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, March 15.—By 240 votes and 60 abstentions the Senate this evening, at the end of its second day in secret session, voted confidence in the government "and its Allies" to continue the war "with increasing energy."

[The Associated Press reported from Paris that Daladier may be forced to yield his war portfolio to the French Generalissimo Gamelin, while the United Press reported the premier may also give up all other cabinet posts except that of premier.—Editor's Note.]

So, for the moment, has ended the flurry of criticism roused by the feeling that France should have done better and acted more quickly in aiding the Finns.

To that criticism, Premier Daladier no doubt replied in much the same terms as he used when he addressed the Chamber on Tuesday on the eve of the acceptance by Finland of the Soviet terms. He could add other arguments to those he used, for the Finnish ministers have since then made it clear that they were aware of the help which France and Great Britain were ready to provide if they launched a public appeal and it was they, themselves, who refrained from doing so because of the difficulties entailed by their situation and the attitude of their neighbors.

Arms Still on Sidings

It was disclosed today that large quantities of the arms and ammunition which were sent were still in sidings on that little railroad across Scandinavia which was the only link connecting Finland with the Western powers.

The second main point of criticism of the government's policy was contained in the speech yesterday of former Premier Laval, opponent of communism and advocate of a good neighbor policy with Italy. Laval occupied most of yesterday's session, and Daladier most of today's. It was the first time since the war began that the former premier has presented his views as fully in public and the terms in which at yesterday's public session he accepted Daladier's invitation to immediate debate indicated that if there were to be any duel behind the Senate's closed doors it would be between these two.

Vote's Meaning in Doubt

Of what happened nothing was disclosed, but the terms of the vote of confidence if read carefully indicate the conclusion reached and accepted by the government. The first paragraph, voted by a show of hands, paid homage to Finland. Then the first four words of the second paragraph, "confident in the government," were similarly approved. On the last part of this sentence a vote was taken: "Confident in the government to conduct the war in close accord with our Allies with a growing energy until the final and complete victory which will assure the liberty of all nations."

Two hundred and forty voted for this war-aim resolution, and 60 abstained. The action of the 60 could be interpreted as indicating a lack of confidence in the Daladier government to conduct the war with greater energy or it might be that they differed on whether it was either possible or desirable to re-establish in Europe, as nations, all these ethical groups in which a few men are always to be found who consider that they are entitled to full independence.

British War Supply Agents Taking Graft, Says Laborite

By Homer Jenks

United Press Staff Writer

London, March 15.—Herbert Morrison, Laborite Member of Parliament, blasted out into the open today the nation's first war contract scandal since Britain took up arms.

He named names and discussed details in support of his charges that commission agents were claiming 2½ to 10 per cent "cuts" for influencing the Ministry of Supply in awarding contracts.

Morrison's charges brought from Supply Minister Edward Leslie Burgin an admission that "very undesirable activities" were going on. They also resulted in the disclosure that Defense Act regulations were being drafted to make a person attempting to obtain commissions by claiming influence of government officials liable to a £500 fine or two years' imprisonment.

The Associated Press reports from London that widespread dissatisfaction over administration of the war-time ministry of supply had developed tonight into demands for resignation of Supply Minister Burgin. Detailed reports of the Commons debate on the issue yesterday, said the report, dominated the entire press.—Editor's note.]

Morrison has been pressing for weeks for an explanation of Ministry of Supply activities. Political observers believe his hammering at Burgin eventually may result in the minister's removal and reorganization of the British cabinet.

Burgin, defending his stewardship, said that the ministry had awarded contracts totaling more than £500,000,000 during the first months of the war. He said he had not seen a case in which any among the ministry's 4,000 employes had been bribed or offered an improper advance in connection with a government contract."

When Morrison pressed for an explanation of the dismissal from the ministry of Robert and David Besar, brothers, and Capt. C. P. Davis, Burgin replied that they were "merely not suitable" for the jobs, adding that there were no allegations against them.

Demands Reinstatement

That evidence in the dismissal cases has not been closed was seen in a statement tonight by David Besar demanding reinstatement or a "plain declaration of reasons for my dismissal."

Rumania Rejects Nazi Pact Offer

once owned present Rumanian territory.]

Even before the assassination last September of Premier Armand Calinescu the Iron Guard had been outlawed. Hundreds of its members died in a blood purge which King Carol ordered to atone for the premier's death.

Today, however, a delegation of Iron Guardists imprisoned in 1938 took advantage of royal clemency, pledged allegiance to King Carol and joined the National Rebirth Party, only legal political party in Rumania.

[The United Press reported from Bucharest late last night that Nae Ionescu, a leader of the suppressed Iron Guard, died of a heart attack there yesterday. He was a member of the faculty of Bucharest University and one of the most pro-German politicians in Rumania.]

Further, Premier Gheorghe Tatarescu is scheduled to tell the nation in a broadcast Sunday night that the Iron Guard question has "solved itself" and exists no more.

Reliable informants gave the word that a Rumanian military delegation now in Berlin has been told that Russia could be prevailed upon to sign a 25-year nonaggression pact with Rumania and that Hungary would agree that for ten years she would not press Rumania for territorial revision.

Plan Outlined

Provisions of the Nazi plan to have Russia and Hungary guarantee Rumania's frontiers were reported by usually trustworthy sources to be these:

Rumania would promise to demobilize immediately the majority of her 1,600,000 soldiers, who would return to work in her fields and factories. (This would help Germany get Rumanian supplies moving.)

Under the guidance of German experts, Rumania would accelerate her industry and agriculture to an unprecedented degree.

Germany would get a virtually complete monopoly on Rumanian exports of oil, cereals and other supplies, Rumania retaining only 6 per cent of these over the average domestic consumption annually for the past five years.

Admission of one member of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard to the cabinet in order to "safeguard German interests."

The German plan received serious consideration by the King and the cabinet, but the fourth clause was the stumbling block.

Rumania's value as an oil reservoir and a grain bin for the war-blockaded Reich was said here to be so great that the Nazis are playing all their diplomatic cards in an effort to secure a monopoly and freeze out the Allies.

By "disciplinary embargoes" the Allies recently stopped exports to Rumania for several weeks to get an agreement that Germany would not be given extra trade favors.

In bargaining with the Nazis, informed quarters said, Rumania sought a 25-year guarantee from Hungary not to press her claim on Transylvania, but Hungary's Italian friends got the period reduced to 10 years. Bessarabia, another big province, is the former Russian part of Rumania.

Rumanians Act To Balk Nazi Control of Oil

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, March 15.—Important economic circles are reacting in an unusual degree to the German attempts to get a footing in the Rumanian oil industry.

So far, the Germans have managed to secure a majority in two petroleum companies—the Petrol Bloc and the Forsky Romaneasca with a combined output of approximately 10,000 tons a month.

The Germans, however, are continuing to buy up shares in the Bucharest Stock Exchange.

Most of these companies lack working capital and these shares until a short while ago were quoted at very low prices.

Stock Increases Five Times

Since the Germans began buying them on a large scale, however, they have had sensational rises. One company's stock now is worth five times as much as it had been previously.

Lately the Germans have turned their attention to the stock of some of Rumania's largest independent companies, such as the Creditul Minier, with a resultant price rise of nearly six times. The output of this company is 800 tons a day, and it owns one of the country's most efficient refineries with a capacity of 340,000 tons a year.

Would Control Transfers

When the attempt was made to gain control of this company, there was a violent reaction in economic circles and, with the help of the most powerful financial institution in the country, counteraction was begun. Besides bidding against the Germans on the stock exchange, the management has called an extraordinary general meeting of stockholders for March 31, to alter the company's articles of association.

The changes contemplated would make all stock transfers subject to approval by the board of directors, would give the board full powers to decide in such transactions and would give the company the right to buy shares of other petroleum companies.

The purpose of the general plan would seem to make it mandatory for all Rumanian oil companies to group themselves around the Creditul Minier. Since the campaign has large if not unlimited financial sources at its disposal it seems unlikely that further inroads into the industry will be made by the Germans.

Welles Back In Rome; Peace Plans Reported

Envoy to See King, Ciano, Duce Today; May Visit Vatican

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 15.—Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles arrived in Rome this evening for the last and perhaps most decisive conversations of his European trip. He sees Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano and Premier Mussolini tomorrow and—almost certainly—the Pope on Monday morning.

But what is most important is the fact that he comes here in one of the most critical moments of the war, in a period of great diplomatic activity and tension to hear from Premier Mussolini's lips the last word on Italo-German desires and intentions.

The atmosphere is infinitely more tense than when the Undersecretary first arrived in Rome less than three weeks ago. The Finnish war is over; spring has come; relations between Great Britain and Italy are strained: German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop has been here and left behind rumors of sensational developments concerning the Axis and Russia.

Into this atmosphere a different Welles is stepping—a Welles who has heard the conflicting desires and feelings of the warring powers, and who knows now, at first hand, what they want and what they intend to do. Moreover, it is an envoy this time who is known to have had a greater mission than that of merely collecting information, as he proved again yesterday by leaving a "confidential message" with Premier Daladier of France.

Here in Rome there are new reports of peace plans. The form they generally take is that Germany, Russia and Italy, through Premier Mussolini, will try to win the United States' support for a peace settlement.

In addition to that, Italian quarters have the feeling that Welles is not a mere "roving newspaper correspondent" out to interview heads of states. Everyone noticed that, although a similar note presented by Myron C. Taylor to the Pope was published, President Roosevelt's message to the Duce has remained confidential. The Italians argue that formal letters of courtesy are not kept secret, but messages of a political nature are.

As far as the Pope is concerned, it is clear that Welles' audience will be the reverse of Von Ribbentrop's. The audience must be largely formal, since Myron C. Taylor is the envoy to the Holy See and would receive any important messages. Moreover, with Welles there will be great and genuine cordiality, whereas, with Von Ribbentrop there was a maximum of unfriendliness.

Britons to Ask More Vigorous Balkan Policy

By the Associated Press

London, March 15.—British legislators today mapped a bid for a bold diplomatic policy in the Balkans and the Near East, backed by British and French military might, as a measure to thwart possible extension of war.

Informed sources disclosed that a number of members of Parliament planned to demand such a vigorous policy when Prime Minister Chamberlain makes his next statement on the progress of the war before the lower house on Tuesday.

These members, it was said, will contend that the need for such a policy has become more urgent with the end of the Russian-Finnish conflict and the fear that in some quarters of a possible Russian or Russian-German drive into Rumania.

(In contrast, an unofficial but well-qualified source in Berlin said on Thursday that Germany had obtained a definite pledge from Russia to spare Rumania, come what may in southeastern Europe. The pledge, it was said, might enable German diplomats to steer Rumania away from the Allies and into a nonaggression pact with the Soviet Union.)

Members of Parliament were represented as wanting a forceful answer to what one described as a "coming totalitarian offensive" in the east.

Britain's stakes there are high, since any German or Russian thrust in the east would approach Britain's Near Eastern sphere of influence along a strategic empire lifeline.

Authoritative sources noted continental reports of a possible Russian-Rumanian nonaggression pact and took them as an ill omen for the Allies.

Neither the Rumanian Embassy nor the British foreign office had received anything to substantiate the reports, it was said, and British said they believed they were "issued by Germany to lull the Balkans and the Allies into a sense of security." Diplomatic sources contended that would be a false sense of security.

Clark Asks Break With Soviet, Brown Would Raise Finn Loan

Copyright by New York Times

Repercussions of the Russo-Finnish peace on the floor of the Senate yesterday caused Senator Clark, of Idaho, to introduce a resolution calling for immediate rupture of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, and Senator Brown, of Michigan, to offer an amendment to the Export-Import Bank's authorization of $100,000,000 to remove all restriction on the amount of money that could be lent to Finland.

Clark's resolution read as follows:

Whereas, President Roosevelt has declared that ending of the Russin-Finnish conflict does not yet clarify the inherent right of small nations to the maintenance of their integrity against attack by superior force, and

Whereas, the United States respects Finland for its heroic stand against overwhelming odds, and declares its condemnation of wanton aggression, and

Whereas, the United States views with disfavor the diplomatic exchange by which the Republic of Finland has been forced to yield a substantial portion of its territory to the Soviet Union, and,

Whereas, the Union of Soviet Socialistic Republics, in the opinion of the Department of State, has failed to abide by the Litvinoff agreement of 1933;

Now therefore be it resolved That it is the sense of the Senate that the President of the United States should recall the United States Ambassador to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and suspend further diplomatic relations with that country.

Brown told the Senate that "now that Finland is at peace, I see no reason why she should not have money to rebuild her bombed cities." As the latest addition of $100,000,000 to the capital of the Export-Import Bank was authorized by Congress, no new loan of more than $20,000,000 could be made to any single nation. No country was named in the authorization, but Jesse Jones, Federal loan administrator, assured committees of both houses that a loan to Finland was projected.

Jones told the committees that the size of the loan would be determined by the possibilities of repayment and that the whole matter would be treated on a commercial basis.

Finnish Diet Ratifies Terms

plained further, "we would have been drawn into the world war, the duration of which is impossible to predict with certainty."

By the time this happened the heartsick and dog-tired armies of Finland already had tramped 4 miles, pressing ahead of them 100,000 refugees, along a zigzag, 226-mile front, leaving behind the rich industrial and farm areas which will, henceforth, lie under the Soviet hammer and sickle.

The troops are withdrawing according to the schedule of the peace treaty with Russia, emptying great reaches of the country they fought for 105 days to defend, but now ceded to the enemy. The civilians are fleeing from homes which, under the peace treaty, will be in the Soviet Union.

As the combined military and civilian exodus began, Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner, in a broadcast to the United States, appealed for continued aid in the work of reconstruction which faces his nation.

Tanner expressed gratitude for the help and sympathy already extended by the American people, but declared that for Finland, her homes "blackened by almost daily air raids" and her man power spent, a hard task lies ahead.

Few Possessions Salvaged

He estimated that homes must be found for 450,000 persons who once resided in areas now ceded to Russia, and reminded his hearers of the "tens of thousands" of men who were wounded in the war and for whom the government must now care.

Every available vehicle was pressed into service to aid today's civilian exodus, but many trudged weary miles on foot, struggling with bundles containing a few salvaged possessions as they endeavored to keep ahead of the steadily moving troop columns.

The distance which the troops must retire, at the rate of about 4 miles a day, vary from a few days' march to a matter of 100 miles in the case of units stationed at the extreme eastern end of the Karelian Isthmus, where the Russian advance was stalemated during the recent fighting.

The entire Karelian Isthmus and the area northeast of Lake Ladoga must be cleared by March 26. Withdrawal from other ceded areas north of Lieksa and in eastern Finland will begin at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

About 600,000 persons in all will be resettled. About 150,000 of these, removed from crowded areas at the outbreak of the war, probably will be able to return to their former homes, but government officials said at least 70,000 new homes would have to be constructed.

Prof. Ilvari Leiwiska, of Helsinki University's geography department, declared the best larch forests in Europe are situated on the isthmus which is now Russian, together with rich agricultural regions near Viipuri and along the shores of Lake Ladoga.

Helsinki itself is returning slowly to normal routine. Wartime restrictions on lighting have been lifted, except for advertising signs. Street cars resumed their regular schedules today.

Norway Shies At Swedish, Finnish Pact

Emissary Arrives At Stockholm, Won't Make Commitment

By the United Press

Stockholm, March 15.—In an atmosphere which suggested strong Norwegian opposition to a defensive military alliance of Sweden, Finland and Norway, C. J. Hambro, speaker of the Norwegian Parliament, arrived today to discuss the idea with political leaders but would commit himself to nothing.

"I am not on an official mission," he told the United Press, "but on a trip for information."

Date Is Up to Finland

In the afternoon he paid several calls on the Swedish foreign office, and political leaders of different parties.

Reliable quarters confirmed that the defense pact talks will be held in Stockholm but said it was up to Finland to set the date. It was felt that the Finns would not delay because the talks are the most important of several questions which the Finns wish to discuss with the Scandinavian countries concerning rapid reconstruction work.

The opinion was expressed in some political quarters here that it would be wiser if the alliance were settled at once, because delay might find opposition in certain political quarters which, for the moment, with the state of public opinion definitely favorable to an alliance, do not dare show their opposition.

Papers Opposed

The opposition was expressed, however, in Norwegian newspapers, particularly at Bergen, where the Dagbladet advised Parliament to reject an alliance proposal and the Tidende said:

"We believe it will be some time before we can need a defense alliance. With every sympathy for Finland, we believe that the moment calls for a clear view to form the future attitude of the north against dangers we may meet in that war which has not yet been brought to a conclusion. In that war Russia does not play a part."

Britain to Add 600,000 Soldiers

London, March 15 (AP).—The ministry of labor tonight ordered the registration of some 600,000 men in April for military service, boosting the British army past the 2,000,000-mark.

Berlin, March 15 (U.P.).—The Official Gazette announced today that men of the military class of 1921 who are liable to military service must report between April 1 and May 15.

Daggers Point AtScandinavia, Dr. Walsh Says

"Illusion of Soviet Might Destroyed,' Says Georgetown Regent

End of the war in Finland leaves Russia in possession of approximately one-tenth of Finland's territory, and with four "new daggers" pointed at Scandinavia's heart, the Rev. Dr. Edmund O. Walsh, S. J., declared last night.

"The loss rests upon the conscience of a world which permitted the tragedy, not upon the physical valor and amazing spiritual resistance of Finland," he said.

Dr. Walsh, who is vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its school of foreign service, spoke before a large audience attending his Friday night lecture on American diplomacy at Memorial Continental Hall, Seventeenth and D streets northwest.

Analyzing the Soviet-Finnish peace treaty, Dr. Walsh observed that there was also to be calculated the "Soviet defeat" and the "Finnish victory." He referred to the great numbers of Russian dead and said he felt that the "great illusion of Soviet military might" had been destroyed.

The Finnish victory, he asserted, lies in the fighting quality of the Finnish army and in the "human decency" of its military leaders, who "refused to degrade their manhood by wanton slaughter of noncombatant civilians," although the Soviet air fleet "for three months had been bombing Finnish cities with characteristic brutality."

Air Forces Will Win War, Italian Says

Chamber Is Asked For Plane Funds To 'Face Any Event'

By Camille M. Cianfarra
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 15.—The reason why the Allies and Germany have obstained from large scale aerial operations is that both belligerents are afraid of reprisals, Gen. Francesco Pricolo, undersecretary for air, told the Chamber of Fasci and Corporations, which met today to discuss the air budget.

Gen. Pricolo said he was certain, however, that when "war will be really fought," the air force will bring a "decisive weight to the solution of the conflict." He cited the intensity with which the German air force operated against Poland, calling it "perhaps the sole determining cause of the Polish defeat."

He praised the "brilliant results" of the German air force against the British navy, although he admitted that the much debated question as to whether the air force will prove too formidable an opponent for the navy has not yet been answered.

Gen. Pricolo stressed that he was presenting his budget at a "particularly grave moment" while Italy is "getting ready to face any event." He drew what the Italians consider a highly comforting picture of the efficiency of their air force, and stated that Italy had replaced with up to date units all the planes used in the Ethiopian, Spanish and Albanian campaigns.

Before the sitting closed, a bill was introduced granting an additoinal 8.000.000.000 lire to the ministry of war for national defense. This, presumably, is part of an appropriation which had already been accounted for last October 27 by the Italian goverment, when 17.000.476,000 lire were earmarked for such purpose to be alloted in the coming budget.

Excerpts From Ryti's Apology for Peace and Warning on Future of Western Civilization

Helsinki, March 15 (AP).—Following are important excerpts from the statement of Prime Minister Risto Ryti to the Finnish Parliament on the Russian-Finnish peace:

To make peace often calls for more courage and greater initiative than the resort to war.

Before the outbreak of war one usually can estimate one's own strength and that of the enemy and the possibilities and risks inherent in these with some certainty, and in the measure in which this estimate discloses risks one can calculate the limit of the sacrifice it is worth while to make to avoid war.

But when war once has broken out it proceeds in accordance with its own stern laws. . . .

When one party, perhaps, wishes for peace, the other party may be entirely against it. The influence of accidental factors, however, sometimes leads to the occurrence of moments during a war when both desire peace.

When that occurs, such fleeting moments must be seized boldly or it is possible that they may not occur a second time.

The present government, which came into power last December 1, after hostilities had broken out, has regarded as its chief task the restoration of peace. . . .

Before the reconstruction of the government last November 30, thus on the same day as the invasion occurred, the government of the United States offered its good offices for the solution of the conflict by pacific means.

Finland at once accepted this offer but the Soviet Union refused it.

At its first session the present government decided to approach the Soviet government through the government of Sweden with a proposal for continuation of negotiations and intimated at the same time that new, positive proposals would be made.

December Offer Refused

The Soviet government gave its answer on December 4, refusing to enter into negotiations and stating then that an agreement had been reached with the newly constituted peoples' government of Finland.

The fact that the Finnish government has consented to this treaty calls for a few words of explanation.

In the opinion of the whole world Finland's case was hopeless in the beginning.

We were given an abundance of sympathy but no effective help from any direction. Not until it had become evident that Finland was capable of successfully defending herself did we begin to receive humanitarian and material help and munitions, especially from Sweden and the western powers.

Reinforcements Few

On the other hand, we received no help in the form of man power in actual fact, merely a few reinforced battalions, mostly from Sweden.

They were, however, as few in number and arrived at the front so late that their significance from the point of view of the nature and extent of the war has been small. For their personal willingness to make secrifices and because in them the old blood brotherhood in arms of the North was renewed, they merit the deepest gratitude of the Finnish nation.

Military assistance, meanwhile, was offered by the western powers that was far from small in regard to number and the fire effectivity of the troops. Nevertheless, the first batch of troops would have reached the front, providing normal transport could have been maintained, not earlier than the end of April and the strength of the troops then arriving would have been so small as to have been insufficient even to make up for the casualties our own army would have suffered in the meantime.

Even troops arriving later hardly would have been enough to increase our fighting strength and thus secure for our troops adequate rest so they would have increased our armament and perhaps have prevented our fighting strength from diminishing.

By accepting this help, however, we would have been drawn into the World War, the duration of which it is impossible to predict with certainty.

In all probability, the opponents of the Western powers would have resorted to war against these troops and our country thus would have become a battlefield also in the great war.

Danger Still Impends

The whole question of military assistance was rendered further uncertain by the fact that it would have had to arrive through two neutral countries, Sweden and Norway, which refused to allow its passage . . .

In those circumstances, the government, after grave consideration, came to the conclusion that, in spite of the onerous peace terms, it was best to snatch ourselves free of the war, now that the opportunity had occurred.

In the same way as we waged war alone, we concluded peace alone. Only the future can show whether we acted wisely and rightly.

Our country, like the whole of Europe, indeed, the whole of Western civilization, still is in the greatest danger. No one can say what tomorrow will bring.

Men at Georgetown Presbyterian Take Active Part in Congregation's Affairs

By Robert Tate Allan

Men church workers, as a general rule, don't get very enthused about active participation in missionary projects. They will help financially, but leave the organizational work to the women.

However, its a different story at Georgetown Presbyterian Church, since the inauguration of the congregation-wide school of missions, which closes tomorrow night.

Twenty-five men are enrolled in one of the six classes. New missionary techniques and methods, many of which were described at the recent worldwide Madras (India) Missionary Conference are being discussed.

Dr. John Bailey Kelly, the new pastor, has been leading the men's group, which, like other classes, is using Basil Mathew's famous book, "Through Tragedy to Triumph," as a text book. The author is a noted British missionary. As in other sessions, the one-month school of mission's meeting for tomorrow will be preceded by a fellowship supper at 5:30 p. m.

Always a mission enthusiast, Dr. Kelly was for 11 years secretary of missionary education for the Presbyterian Board of Missions in New York City. Prior to coming here he served for about ten years as president of Emporia College, at Emporia, Kans., home town of philosopher-editor William Allen White. Board member of the college, White expects to drop in on Dr. Kelly during his local visit in the spring.

Because of his love of classical music, and his interest in the subject at Emporia College—which is said to have one of the finest a cappella choirs in America—Dr. Kelly has been extremely gratified at the musical progress being made at his new charge here.

Much of the credit for that progress, he said yesterday, has been due to the splendid leadership of Miss Nancy Poore, who became music director last October. Recipient of a master's degree in music from Syracuse University and former organist at John Hall Memorial Presbyterian Church, New York City, she has developed an excellent quartette, boys' choir and Sunday school orchestra and helped initiate Sunday afternoon vespers.

The quartette includes Mrs. Frederick S. Laise, soprano; Miss Adessa Ehrhart, contralto; Barrett Fuchs, tenor, and Wendell Alderson, barytone. The adult choir has 30 voices.

When reports of organizations are presented at the annual congregational dinner on April 11, the Women's Association also will be able to give a good account of itself. Combined organization of the former Woman's Missionary Society, the Ladies' Aid and several other groups, the association is one of the church's strongest supporters.

There also is the Sunday School, led by Richard W. Thrush; youth work, under Mervyn H. Lanham; board of trustees, of which David B. Auld is secretary; the Session, with S. A. Swindells as clerk, and the Boy Scout Troop No. 3, of which John A. Raff is Scoutmaster.

Local "mother" church of its denomination, Georgetown Presbyterian Church this fall will celebrate its 160th birthday. Plans for that occasion already are being discussed, according to Dr. Kelly, native Washingtonian, and whose father, the late Dr. Joseph T. Kelly, was pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church here for 52 years One grandfather, John Bailey, served for 30 years as chief Clerk of the House, while his other grandfather, Moses Kelly, was once Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

After graduation from Central High School, Princeton University and Auburn Theological Seminary, Dr. Kelly took over his first charge at Saranac Lake, N. Y., and from 1908 until 1918 served at Plattsburg, where he recalls having preached to hundreds of doughboys in the training camp.

Census Compromise

Persons who object to telling a census enumerator whether their income is more or less than $5,000 need no longer fear the remote threat of fine or imprisonment for refusing to answer. Secretary of Commerce Hopkins has given these critics the option of writing their answers on a blank furnished by the enumerator. The unsigned slip may then be enclosed in sealed envelope and returned to the enumerator for mailing to Washington.

By such means the Census Bureau hopes to disarm criticism of its questions on income and to avert a vote on Senator Tobey's foolish resolution of condemnation. It is to be hoped that the strategy is successful, for if the Senate were to waste its time on this resolution some people might be encouraged to take a defiant attitude when the census enumerator appeared. And any such reaction would have disastrous potentialities, as the President indicated yesterday.

Whether replies are verbal or written, the accuracy of the data on incomes is not subject to check. Dependence has to be placed upon the willingness of the individuals questioned to give truthful answers. It is for that reason that an attempt by a Senator to sabotage this voluntary cooperative enterprise becomes a serious matter.

When the census is next taken, however, the Tobey episode should serve as a reminder that Congress, as well as statisticians and economists, are interested in the type of questions asked. Preliminary consultation with legislators, with a view to disarming criticism, or modifying questions regarded as objectionable, would afford protection against last-minute assaults which can only impede the vital work of census-taking and impair the accuracy of the returns.

How Many Jobless?

Protests have naturally been aroused by Miss Dorothy Thompson's specious attempt to demonstrate that unemployment has increased by a mere 2,000,000 since 1929. And her assumptions are made to look rather threadbare by an article from the Assistant Commissioner of Works Projects which we publish on the page opposite today. Incidentally, Mr. Corrington Gill indicates in this article that there is urgent need for more information about the volume of unemployment, so that those untrained in statistical analysis will not be lured into drawing absurd deductions from available data.

Mr. Gill proves conclusively that the widely accepted estimates of from 8,000,000 to 9,000,000 unemployed are proof against the whittling process to which Miss Thompson has subjected them. Furthermore, when the National Industrial Conference Board, the A. F. of L. and various unpublished Government estimates are in close correspondence, one is inclined to conclude that the agreement confirms the accuracy of the estimates instead of making them suspect, as Miss Thompson naively implies.

As she asserts, however, it is true that the public is inclined to take a great deal on faith, especially if a statement is repeated often and emphatically. That attitude of uncritical acceptance has resulted in our willingness to believe that 8,000,000 or 9,000,000 people are unemployed without bothering to inquire how these figures have been calculated. In setting up an independent estimate, however erroneous, Miss Thompson has "smoked out" the professional statisticians and elicited some valuable information about employment reporting services.

Despite the admirable work that is being done in keeping the public informed as to the probable volume of unemployment this country still lacks comprehensive official statistics of numbers unemployed. It is well known that the United States Employment Service has enough information on tap to be able to state with a close approach to accuracy all current changes in the volume of unemployment. The preliminary work necessary to establish this service has been under way a long time. An excess of professional caution, or possibly an unwillingness to inaugurate a reporting service of this type in an election year, explains the delay in making returns public. But neither factor excuses that delay.

If the existing statistical service on registered unemployment were made available, carrying with it the stamp of official approval, newspaper columnists would have no excuse for the statistical juggling that enabled Miss Thompson to prove, to her own satisfaction, that all the professional statisticians must be either dishonest or crazy.

Gains For The District

The nomination of District Attorney Pine as an Associate Justice of the District Court is admirable in itself. But it seems even more satisfactory when viewed as an indication that the long effort to give Washington municipal status is beginning to bear fruit.

In selecting Mr. Pine both President Roosevelt and Attorney General Jackson, who backed the appointment, have demonstrated an encouraging receptivity to the will of the community. Ever since the death of Justice Cox there has been no doubt that Washington wanted a native son to secure this local position. And it did not take long to realize that Mr. Pine was the logical choice.

But in spite of his excellent work as district attorney, in spite of his unanimous indorsement by the bar association, in spite of many other evidences both of Mr. Pine's qualifications and of strong community sentiment in his behalf, there was until the last moment real doubt as to his nomination. Last September, Attorney General Murphy announced that an outsider was being considered. And there is reason to believe that a carpetbagger appointment would actually have been made if Mr. Murphy had not been elevated to the Supreme Bench.

Attorney General Jackson, however, has, from the outset, been sympathetic to the case for naming a qualified local man to the District Court. If his predecessor actually made any political commitments, Mr. Jackson has disregarded them. And the President has backed him up in this practical demonstration of loyalty to democratic ideals.

The fate of democracy depends in no small measure on the functioning of local self-government. So it is really a matter of national concern that disfranchised Washington should be given as much control over its own destiny as is compatible with its peculiar status as the National Capital. The nomination of Mr. Pine to the District Court has, therefore, much more than parochial significance. It is a sign that the fight to bring democracy to Washington is making headway.

The same, in only slightly lesser degree, applies to the elevation of Judge Curran from the Police Court bench to the district attorneyship. While not a native Washingtonian, Judge Curran has spent all his adult life here and has shown a most active and constructive interest in civic affairs. As district attorney he may have to give a sharper focus to energies which have heretofore been widely spread. But of his ability for the new post there is no more doubt than there is of the enduring quality of his interest in Washington as a community.

President Roosevelt did a good day's work for Washington yesterday. His practical assistance should stimulate the efforts of all who are working to make the District of Columbia a truly self-respecting community, as well as a very agreeable place in which to live.

The Peace Urge

The American people are overwhelmingly peace-minded. They are, with very rare exceptions, determined to stay out of war. Nor do they want peace for themselves alone. They want it for the rest of mankind as well.

They realize that unless and until peace is restored in the world our situation will remain insecure. They also realize that, under existing circumstances, the terribly dislocating effects of major conflict are felt by all nations, great and small, neutrals as well as belligerents.

A recent poll of the Institute of Public Opinion throws a revealing light on this attitude. Of those questioned who have any opinions on the subject, 58 per cent—almost three out of five—believed that the time has come for a peace conference to settle Europe's problems and end the war between the Allies and Germany. And 55 per cent are of the opinion that if such a conference is held the United States should take part in it. This was before the end of the war in Finland.

These replies indicate an encouraging awareness of the fact that the United States cannot safely isolate itself from Europe. But clarification of this attitude is needed. For the American people to want peace is not enough. Nor is it enough to be willing to have the United States officially participate in a peace conference. The vital but still unanswered question is whether, once peace is restored, this Nation will be prepared to participate in its maintenance.

If the American people are now willing to go that far, the peace that will follow the present conflict will in all likelihood be a sounder and more durable peace than that effected 22 years ago. If, on the other hand, our interest in peace is only to end a conflict which is proving costly and disturbing to us and harbors possibilities of danger, an intervention for peace by the United States would serve no long-range purpose. It would be like taking aspirin for a headache which has organic causes. Temporarily the pain might be eased, but a false sense of well-being would also be created.

For 20 years the American people have largely thought of peace in emotional terms. This trend was accentuated when war broke out in Europe six months ago. It has been accentuated further by the dread prospect that unless peace is restored the Old World may see an orgy of slaughter and destruction beyond anything that occurred in the World War.

But, while such emotions do credit to our hearts, they are bound to be impotent unless accompanied by an awareness of the necessity of American participation in the maintenance as well as the restoration of peace. And unless we are prepared, not merely to hope for peace and urge peace, but also to place the great weight of this Nation constructively on the side of peace, any advice to the belligerents to lay down their arms will be more irritating than helpful.

New York's Hatch Bill

The New York Senate has passed a so-called "little Hatch bill" imposing fines and jail sentences upon anyone attempting to influence the vote of persons on relief or promising relief jobs in return for political support. This bill applies only to persons on relief or applicants for relief, and concerns only activities designed to influence State elections. Nevertheless, it shows the direction in which the wind of reform is now blowing.

Certainly if the Hatch Act is amended to prevent State employes paid wholly or in part from Federal funds from engaging in political activities, the States will be under great pressure to apply similar restrictions to all other employes. For the arguments that justify the political ban in the one case are equally forceful when applied to the State bureaucratic systems. In fact, in view of the extensive exploitation of State employes for partisan purposes, the need for remedial action is probably more imperative than in case of the Federal service.

It is significant that the only Democrat in the New York Senate voting for the little Hatch bill is at odds with his district leader, a Tammany man. That indicates that a good deal of support for legislation of the Hatch Act type will probably be forthcoming in the States because of political rivalries.

A desire to cripple a political enemy may be as potent a force for reform as a sincere wish to elevate the public service and protect public employes from political exploitation. Regardless of the motives that caused members of the New York Senate to vote to protect relief workers, their action is an encouraging indication that the Hatch Act is having a salutary effect.

The Civic Theatre

It is a pleasant sign of recognition for the Washington Civic Theatre to have an as yet anonymous producer negotiate with it to take on the road the production of "St. Joan," which closes here tonight.

Whether or not the many obstacles in the way of such an enterprise are ever overcome, the important point, as Mr. Nelson Bell has said, is that an eminent producer has perceived in this version of the Shaw play "those qualities for which he is always in search—competent acting, skillful and adventurous direction, unique staging, effective lighting and an admirable use of the 'space stage' as an element of expansion of the play's ultimate effect."

Credit for the excellence of the performance was undoubtedly due in large part to its director Erwin Piscator and star, Luise Rainer. But the fact remains that this nonprofessional group of actors has succeeded in taking the direction and working with the experienced Miss Rainer to produce a polished performance. As one of the cast remarked, it is the first time that a distinguished director and actress have cooperated with such a group to give something other than a modified rendition of Broadway, to create an outstanding artistic achievement.

In donating more than six weeks of intensive work and effort, Miss Rainer has made a very vital contribution to the American Red Cross war relief fund. And it is no coincidence that a German director and Austrian actress could work with a community group to achieve such an effect. It is truly an example of democratic endeavor.

Now that the Civic Theatre has established itself on such a professional plane, it is probable that they will continue to maintain the same excellence in their productions and in consequence receive the support from the city which they so richly deserve.

Eight Ages Of Man

From the St. Louis Post Dispatch.

This is the age of science, the age of exact measurements.

But there are some still untouched by the spirit of the age. Such a one is the Florida Negro woman who was pressed for the exact age of her children. She just did not know how old they were in terms of years. She had her own classification, however. One of the children was a "lap baby." Another was a "creeper." Then there was a "porch child," and also a "yard young 'un."

Here is a woman who is above the prosaic measuring systems of exact science. Her "yard child," no doubt, will soon be a "school boy," and after that a "working boy," or, perhaps, a "car-driving boy." Then again, his mother may decide to describe him as a "short-pants boy" and, later, as a "long-pants boy." In the fullness of time, he will, of course, become a "man." And when his mother calls him that, there will be in her language more of the rich emotional content of all human experience than the men of precision can ever hope to crowd into the figure "21." Exact enough!

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Anti-Social Unionism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Coleman, in a recent letter to The Post, is extremely exercised over Mr. Pegler's exposure of the seamy side of unionism as it has degenerated. Mr. Coleman, who is ostensibly speaking for the local craft unions of the A. F. of L. implies that Westbrook Pegler has them definitely in mind. With respect to that, I recall what Abraham Lincoln once said: "If you throw a stone over a fence and you hear a dog yelp, you may depend on it that you have hit one." If the shoe pinches, that is highly regrettable!

When I read Pegler's expose of certain racketeering and criminal union executives, proved such at law and convicted, I certainly did not imagine that he had the District of Columbia solely in mind. However, the Department of Justice seemed to be in agreement with Pegler's main thesis that the unions are punishing the poor man when it "obtained a District Court order forbidding the Mason Contractors' Association, Washington firms and 16 contractor and union officials from operating an alleged building pool as a means of restricting low bids on projects here." (Post, March 13, page 1.) Such pools prevent workers from owning homes and increase rents.

It is all right for Mr. Coleman to rush to the defense of his union colleagues, and there is no question as to his essential integrity, or that of the unions he represents. But we have ample evidence in our daily reading, outside of Pegler's column or The Post, that satisfactory housing is being denied the low-paid workers and small salaried class and that the unions in the building trades of the A. F. of L. more or less collaborate, perhaps unconsciously, with some builders.

I mean by this that the present-day union psychology is a narrow and selfish one that justifies almost any sort of inconvenience, discomfort and even hardship for those outside the union who have to depend upon the union for housing or other essential activities. Such is essentially an anti-social attitude.

Ickes Vs. Dewey

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Oscar Wilde once said, "There is only one thing worse than being talked about and that is not being talked about." Certain New Deal politicians, evidently sensing the fact that they may lose their jobs at the coming elections, are slinging mud openly as well as surreptitiously, a certain Republican "hopefuls." They appear totally oblivious of the fact that political security is not promoted by indulging in caustic criticism of their opponents but rather in maintaining a dignified silence.

Secretary Ickes pet pastime appears to be in belaboring "Tom" Dewey in particular, but inasmuch as the former district attorney has already demonstrated his courage and energy, while arousing an almost universal interest, Mr. Ickes bombastic utterances should hardly be taken seriously.

Primary Evils

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to indorse heartily the sane and concise statement of E. B. Henderson regarding crime prevention.

What could be a more costly and ineffective policy than that of increasing the police force of our already police-ridden city, while doing little or nothing to wipe out the primary social and economic evils (unemployment, slum conditions, inadequacy of relief, etc.) by which ignorance, disease and crime are bred!

"In" Will Be "Out"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the coming Presidential election: Of course, the question is, will FDR or won't he? We will leave that to Ernest K. Lindley et al. But an analysis will show that Mr. President's ultimate action or inaction, while it may affect him greatly as an individual, will have but slight effect upon the Nation as a whole during the next four years, assuming, that is, that we retain our status quo in the European mess.

Whether FDR or someone else is in the White House, a strong possibility exists of a Republican House and a Democratic Senate. There is, then, little likelihood, in view of past action on the American political scene, of anything more than a long-drawn factional dispute on Capitol Hill for the next four years anyway; so, who the President is will make little difference.

There is one fairly obvious fact, however. With such a set-up, the "in," be he Republican or Democrat, is going to have an unhappy time with the "two houses divided against themselves." And it is a good 8-5 wager for some gambler that the "in" after November, '40, will be an unpopular "out" about the same time in '44. Shades of H. Hoover.

FDR, if he is as an adroit politician as he is credited with being, might do well to pack his present popularity in his old kit bag and, Coolidge-like, hie himself back to Hyde Park, there to languish in million-dollar smiles while his successor grows gray and wan in a battle he can't possibly win.

Results Of Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The German people are beguiled joyfully to celebrate the Russo-Finnish peace. It must be made to appear as another German diplomatic triumph; with the implication, of course, that needed supplies from Russia can now flow in to defeat the blockade.

But the Reich government is not really so happy at Stalin's invasion of Hitler's Baltic. Nor will the Soviets' preoccupation now in the Balkans and farther east justify any considerable surplus exports.

On the other side the Allied command will not underestimate the military might of the Muscovite. They will rather woo than war.

Wishful thinkers who have been emoting sympathy and applause to the Finns from a distance can now emerge from the clouds of propaganda and learn that the flower of Finnish youth has been decimated in the hopeless fighting. Gen. Mannerheim, former czarist "who made the streets of Finland run with blood when he purged the Bolsheviks in 1918-1919," will be exiled.

Russia alone has profited.

Il Duce's lengthening frowns make the only risible spot in the panorama of strife.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to thank you in the name of the Chevy Chase Child Study Club for the very sympathetic and comprehensive article on the history and activities of your group which appeared in your Sunday club section of January 20.

We feel that Miss Arndt performs a real service in bringing before the public the activities of various women's organizations engaged in community projects. We are pleased that she recognized the worth while accomplishments of our small study club, and gave such an accurate presentation of our work.

Workers' Alliance Viewpoint

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post's only relief program is to cut, cut, and cut. It howled over the injustice to the upper brackets of an average $60 monthly income for WPA workers. It leaped to misinform its readers on the issues of the Woodrum Bill, even though it knew that the passage of that bill would bring harrowing misery to thousands of innocent men and women whose mortal sin was that they were unemployed. And when the reports of this suffering were established, The Post did not even have the decency to admit its part in bringing it about.

The Post has never had the decency to come out with its plain and unvarnished position on relief: destroy WPA; to hell with all this pampering and coddling of the unemployed; let them starve! We revolt at the sickening hypocrisy of your editors who fill your editorial columns with sanctimonious phrases about "practical reforms in the system of relief," when the only "practical reform" that your paper is interested in is to cut the costs of supporting the unemployed to the barest and thinnest dime possible.

That and that alone is the issue with you. To that and that alone are all your moral considerations reduced. To that and that alone do the gallons of misrepresentation and the acres of sanctimony amount.

Your "liberalism" disappears in direct ratio to the nearness of the problem: you would send millions to Finland and not one cent to the hungry in Washington, D. C. Your kept writers wrack their brains for all the phrases dignified by men of true feeling of the past—men who could not bear to touch your paper with their finger-tips today—and spread them over your columns in a cynical attempt to convince your readers that you possess some remnants of their high purpose and social conscience.

We challenge you to deny that you do not care a hoot whether a real program for the unemployed is ever advanced or not; that to you no program is feasible unless it cuts the cost of the unemployed to the lowest figure possible. We challenge you to show in any of your editorials of the past the slightest attempt to approach the problem of the unemployed from any other point of view than that of forcing starvation upon them in order to save taxes for the ailing rich.

We challenge you because we know that you do not dare to face the problem squarely because your position is impossible for any decent man and woman to hold. It is the position of the bandit squatted on top of the money bags and determined to protect his loot with his life.

It is the position of the slick lawyer who appeals to the highest judge and the sacred Constitution to save the skin of his racketeering client. It is the job of those who have to spread perfume and flowers so that people need not hold their noses as they pass by. We do not envy your job. We intend to expose and continue to expose it. We challenge you to deny it.

The Post Impressionist

Scotchy

Rheumy-eyed, crimson-beaked, wrapped in a tissue-thin overcoat, wearing a greasy cap with a flapping peak, he is Phil the Fiddler grown to middle age without once having fallen under the beneficent spell of an Alger wand. You can find his twin selling newspapers on almost any street corner in any city you care to name. So it's not his appearance that makes him remarkable. And being called "Scotchy" doesn't give him a strong claim to distinction. It's his sales technique that marks him as one newsboy in a million.

Scotchy never yells: "Wuxtry!" Neither does any other newsie who breathes and has his being outside the pages of a novel. But Scotchy doesn't even yell: "Extra!" He doesn't scream headlines at you. He lures you. "They'll do it every time!"

His voice is harsh, whisky-cracked, but full of expression. His "They'll do it every time" drips with humorous indulgence. The voice pulls you up short. "House Plans Filibuster," the newspaper headline announces. You hardly notice that. You've stopped to stare at Scotchy and to wonder how he does it.

You notice that, although he achieves the intimacy of a crooner, his Jovian comments on the news of the day are directed at none of his potential customers. Like a character in a comic strip his words seem to be aimed at an invisible balloon suspended just above his head. Still, of the hundreds who pass him there is not a single soul who doesn't feel that Scotchy has invited him and him alone to share his quiet laughter at the folly of it all.

Considered as artistry, the trick is superb. As sales technique, it's a little unfortunate. Scotchy's rhetorical nudges are arresting. There's no doubt about that. But nine out of ten people who stop to stare at this strange creature are so bemused by his sardonic muttering that any notion they may have had of buying a paper is driven right out of their heads.

Unused to meeting an editorial slant before he opens his paper, the presumptive purchaser is flabbergasted by a newsboy's scorn of the Congressional habit of 'doing it every time.' Before he's recovered, just about the time he's begun to realize that this is the only newshawker he's ever met whose interest in his wares is free of the slightest taint of commercialism, he is three blocks away from Scotchy's stand. He buys his paper from a greedy-lipped urchin who blats out the headlines with as much comprehension of what he's yelling as he'd have if he were intoning the news in Sanskrit.

Scotchy isn't always the dispassionate observer. Almost anything is likely to drag him down from the Olympus. While he is commenting on the vagaries of politicians he preserves his serene spirit of detachment effortlessly. But let the Philadelphia Athletics win two games in a row and you'll find Scotchy babbling with a quiet ecstasy. "There's no stopping them now!"

His words float up into the same invisible balloon. The trick of seeming to whisper into your ear is still managed. But the tone is different. The irony that veined his observation on the doings of the House of Representatives is gone and a schoolboy excitement has taken its place. None of his customers, unless they've studied his methods, are apt to know what he's talking about.

The headlines might be shrieking news of an earthquake, but Scotchy makes no concession to the ordinary man's fondness for the momentous. The fellow who doesn't know where Scotchy's heart lies is simply out of luck. He does give out clues, though. With the Athletics on a winning spree all's right with the world and the success of his favorites fills Scotchy with a benignity that is almost angelic. His good feeling flows bountifully in the direction of less fortunate American League teams. For every three "there's no stopping them now's" he throws in one charitable "Red Sox didn't do so bad."

On days when the Philadelphia Athletics let him down and when there is nothing more startling in the news than "Thousands Bathe While City Swelters," Scotchy's soliloquies take on a Delphic quality that leaves even his closest followers guessing. "What's the sense in it?" the cosmological murmur will run. "What's the sense of it?" You have to go through your paper carefully then before you can conclude that Scotchy has probably been referring to a story buried on page seven about the woman who died and left all her money to found a home for underprivileged rabbits.

Recent developments in Europe have changed Scotchy. His delivery is the same; his approach is the same. The difference is that he is no longer detached. He is no longer amused. He is still Jove, but Jove the wielder of the thunderbolt. "A fine state of affairs!" "Are they going to let this go on?" "Who does that guy think he is?"

Day after day, all summer long he hammered out such phrases on the forge of his indignation. People stopped to stare at the bedraggled Savonorola and sales fell way below normal. That didn't stop Scotchy. He was so absorbed in his ominous trumpeting that only the more persistent of his clients were able to distract him sufficiently to get him to accept their pennies.

Naturally his fervor has not abated. It's been months since he has turned his jaundiced eye on the local or the national scene. The closest he's come to this country is the neutrality zone. The voice crying in the wilderness of downtown traffic has become the voice of the conscience of the world. "Did you ever think it would happen?" "Are we all going nuts?" "Look," he says when the paper carries news of mobilization in Belgium.

The summer may bring brighter days. The Athletics may bring Scotchy peace. I don't know. If they do, it'll be the best season the Athletics or any other team in either league has had since the beginning of organized baseball.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

A. E. Housman

HERE AT LAST is "The Collected Poems of A. E. Housman" (Holt, $3)—the complete canon of the last of the great Victorian poets, containing, probably, considerably more than Housman himself would have cared to see preserved, yet a book whose thinness is a significant part of its virtue.

Housman's was a curious poet's life. He jingled copiously in his 'teens, but did not publish. He wrote no verse at all, apparently, in his twenties. His brother Laurence, who searched all his notebooks—and Alfred was a prolific jotter-down of single lines and rough drafts—found not even a fragment of a poem written between the ages of 20 and 31. Then came that burst of expression which bore fruit in "A Shropshire Lad," published, to an inattentive world, in 1896, when Housman was 36. (John Morley read it, and turned it down, for Macmillan; Kegan Paul published it at Housman's own expense, and it took two years to sell out the first edition of 500 copies at 2/6.) Through years at a time he wrote no poetry at all; he had a minor burst of expression in 1905, a larger one in 1910, still another in 1922, always when he was out of health. He did not publish a second volume until 1922, when he was well past 60, and many of the poems which he then released to the world, as well as a large part of the posthumous cargo, date from the "Shropshire Lad" period.

Add them all up—the total is little more than 3,000 lines; it could be assembled in a closely printed book of 100 pages. Yet it builds an imperishable chapter in the tradition of English poetry

"THE COLLECTED POEMS" includes the 1,327 lines of "A Shropshire Lad," with two slight changes made by Housman himself for later editions; the 873 lines of "Last Poems;" the 701 lines of "More Poems," published as "a final selection" in 1936, a few months after A. E. Housman's death, by his brother (a few changes have been made in these, as study of the poet's notebooks revealed a truer text); 18 further poems which Laurence Housman published in 1938 in "My Brother A. E. Housman;" also five unbooked poems, three rescued from old magazines, two never before published, and three translations from the Greek, included 50 years ago in A. W. Pollard's "Odes From the Greek Dramatists."

Yet I doubt that Housman's standing as a poet would be other than it is if he had never published another poem after "The Shropshire Lad"—certainly it has not been altered by the posthumous publication of poems which Housman himself never cared to see in book form. For the reader interested in a poet's personality, of course, every fragment has its preciousness; I particularly cherish some of those nonsense rhymes, intended only for family circulation, which Laurence Housman included in his memoir. They reveal a side of the poet unhinted in the canon of his poetry.

I wish that it might be possible to include, in some future edition of his poetry, that little essay on "The Name and Nature of Poetry" which the Macmillan Company published in 1933. There this reticent man revealed as nowhere else his self and his conception of poetry. He told how, shaving in the morning, he had to guard himself lest a line of poetry stray into his memory and cause his skin to bristle and his razor to cut. He voiced his dislike of intellectual poetry; verse dominated by reason, he said, was mere verse, not true poetry. "To transfuse emotion—or to transmit thought, but to set up in the reader's sense a vibration corresponding to what was felt by the writer," he insisted, "is the true function of poetry." And he explained how his own poetry came to him strangely, as a form of madness, "a morbid secretion, like the pearl in the oyster."

Pearls his poems are; the range of their beauty may be limited, but they communicate their "vibration" perfectly and they have become a part of our often unconscious heritage. "When I was one and twenty," "Clay lies still but blood's a rover," "Brooks too broad for leaping," "Malt does more than Milton can to justify God's ways to man," "I, a stranger and afraid, in a world I never made"—the Bredon bells ring across the starlit fences in minds that have no inkling whence the phrases came.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Home, Sweet Home

"THERE'S the doorbell."

"What! Again?"

"You'd better answer it."

"Why?"

"It might be somebody who isn't looking for any information."

"Optimist! You answer the bell. I answered it last time."

"No, you didn't."

"Yes, I did. I remember distinctly. It was one of those Gallup poll fellers."

"Well, I answered the Gallup poll before that one. It was the one where he wanted to know whether I favored public officers with or without whiskers."

"There goes the bell again. Please see who it is."

"I know who it is. It's either an income tax investigator, a census taker, somebody who is registering the vote, unless, of course, it's Gallup again."

"We've got to answer the bell."

"Why? There's a limit to everything."

"What have we got doorbells for if we don't want to know when somebody's at the door?"

"They were invented away back before we ever knew they could become a nuisance."

"He's still ringing. Are you going to sit there and let him ring forever?"

"I'm standing on my rights."

"What rights?"

"Fifteen minutes between rings."

"Suppose it's the census man again?"

"I don't care. I'm broken down from answering doorbells."

"You can be put in jail for not responding to a census."

"That would be all right . . . provided the jail has no doorbells."

"After all, why are you so obstinate?"

"I'm sick of answering questions. A man's house is his castle, not a quiz program."

"Suppose it's the letter man?"

"Let him leave the mail and go away. I'm taking no chances on him asking me any questions, either. I answered a knock on the door from the milkman yesterday. And what do you think he wanted?"

"What?"

"He wanted to know the height of Mount McKinley and the name of the inventor of the buttonhook. It seems he was going on a radio program."

"There's the bell again. Please answer. It might be somebody with no questions to ask."

"Wanna bet?"

John Chamberlain is out with a new book, "The American Stakes," and in his early thirties has become a really important writer. It seems only yesterday that he, the son of Old Bob Chamberlain, the town's leading furniture dealer back home, was playing in knee breeches on the lawn of the Chamberlain cottage at Morris Cove, hard by Lighthouse Point. Folks used to say "That's Bob Chamberlain's boy." Now they point out Bob and say "That's John Chamberlain's old man." Life is like that.

The Census Questions

By Mark Sullivan

The Ditter Bill

A PRACTICABLE compromise of the census issue, possible to adopt without inconvenience, is that proposed by Republican Congressman J. William Ditter, of Pennsylvania. He has introduced a bill which would merely repeal the penalty provisions of the census law. If this bill is passed, any citizen who objects to any question can decline to answer that question without fear of fine or imprisonment. This is a practicable way out. The other principal suggestion—that the objectionable questions be removed from the census blank, or be not asked—is difficult to carry out, because the millions of blanks are already printed; the immense mechanism and enormous personnel for taking the census is already set up.

Congressman Ditter's plan should be a practicable compromise for another reason. It ought not to meet any objection from Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, who is responsible for the census. Mr. Hopkins has said that "I am satisfied there is no inherent objection among the people to these questions." If Mr. Hopkins really believes that, if he was not merely arguing to defend himself against the present outcry, then he should have no objection to Congressman Ditter's bill.

For, if "there is no inherent objection among the people," then the people will answer the questions without being put under threat of prison. What Mr. Hopkins says is, in effect, that the people will answer voluntarily, that they do not need to be threatened. And what Congressman Ditter's bill says is, in effect, "Give the people a chance to answer voluntarily—repeal the threat of penalty."

THE CONGRESSMAN and the Secretary of Commerce are in agreement. The Secretary ought to support the Congressman's bill. The bill ought to be passed, the body ought to be satisfied. Those who have no objections to the questions will answer. Those who do not wish to answer, need not.

The result should be a perfectly practicable census. Statistics is a tricky science—a layman hesitates to venture into it. But it would seem unnecessary for the Government to have information about literally every citizen. All the Government needs is a picture of average incomes, average mortgage conditions and the like. For getting this average picture, all the census needs is information about a large, representative number of citizens.

If four out of five citizens answer the question, there should be enough for the Government's purpose. That the Government accepts this view is shown by its own practice, with respect to some of the questions. Some questions they are not going to ask of every citizen, but only one out of every 20. If one out of every 20 is enough for some questions, the four willing out of every five should be enough for the resented questions.

In any event, the primary consideration here is, not the Government's convenience but the citizen's sanctity, the citizen's right to privacy. The right of privacy is the comprehensive right that underlies and embraces all other rights. If it is not mentioned by that name in the Constitution, it is probably because the Constitution-makers thought of it as elemental. The Constitution does allude to it in one passage: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures."

Between the right of privacy, and the other familiar rights mentioned in the Constitution, there is a distinction which adds importance to the former. The right of privacy is a right to an immunity—while the right of free speech is a right to a privilege. Hardly one person in a thousand ever cares to exercise the right of free speech, on disputed questions. But every person wants the right of immunity against unreasonable intrusion of Government agents across his doorstep. The right of free speech is for the important and the aggressive, the arguers, those ambitious for power. The right of privacy is for the humble and the mute, for those who ask no more than to go their way without molestation.

THERE MAY BE historic symbolism in the fact that it was a shoemaker, in Wisconsin the other day, who was the first to get arrested for resisting a census taker. The symbolism will be recognized by those who recall the phrase in Gray's Elegy, "a village Hampden;" and who recall what the great Hampden stood for in the rights of the people as against the crown, in the constitutional struggles of England.

There is significance in some other aspects of that shoemaker's arrest. He was Italian-by birth. Had he committed his defiance in the land of his nativity, he would now be in jail, and for a long time. What actually happened in America was that the head of the Census Bureau in Washington hurriedly telegraphed to Wisconsin to rebuke the census official, and turn the recalcitrant free to go back to the mending of soles. That shoemaker is a beneficiary of a great American tradition, and of the present outcry which seeks to sustain that tradition.

The right of privacy is the fundamental question involved. Whether the answers of citizens will be kept secret is secondary. About this, it should be said in defense of the Census Bureau, that the census headquarters at Washington has an admirable history of keeping its records inviolate.

SECRETARY HOPKINS

Ought he, according to his own logic, support legislation which would remove the penalties for refusing to answer the census questions. See Mark Sullivan's discussion of this point

Artist As Statesman

By G. Raleigh Parkin

The Late Lord Tweedsmuir

Montreal.

THE UNIVERSAL tributes which were paid to the memory of Lord Tweedsmuir from one end of Canada to the other have represented something more than the formal respect paid by a community to the official head of the state. They reflected rather appreciation of a remarkable personality and recognition of outstanding accomplishment.

Like other institutions of the British Commonwealth, the office of Governor General has been undergoing a significant process of change in the last 20 years. Whereas formerly the holder of the office was the representative of the British government, endowed with certain political and administrative functions, he has now, since the decisions taken at the Imperial Conference of 1926, become the personal representative of the crown and is endowed only with those functions, largely ritual and social, which the sovereign himself performs in Great Britain.

IT WAS to such an office that John Buchan, as he then was, was appointed in 1935. It was no secret that increasing difficulty was being experienced in persuading men of ability to fill the post.

With the announcement that John Buchan, a commoner (to use the English phrase), had been appointed Governor General, it was widely recognized that a conscious effort was being made to suit the appointment to the new conditions, and it was the first Baron Tweedsmuir that John Buchan, the scholar, writer and man of affairs, arrived in Canada to perform, in a little over four years, the remarkable achievement of making the office of Governor General a significant reality in Canadian life.

While his appointment had aroused wide general interest, there were some in Canada who viewed it with disappointment, and others even with a degree of suspicion.

In the first group were the traditionalists who disliked an appointment which was not from the ranks of one of the older aristocratic families of England, if not from royalty itself. Disappointed, also, was the narrow, mostly well-to-do social set who have always clustered around government house for the sake of the social prestige which it found in such activities.

The second group was chiefly represented by the steadily growing body of Canadian nationalists who were inclined to view with some concern the influence that might be wielded by an able Conservative imperialist, such as Buchan was known to be, in matters relating to Canadian national development. This was especially so at a time when the course of British policy appeared to such people to be moving in directions that were difficult to identify with Canada's wider national interests, and when so much of the economic and political power in the Canadian state lay in the hands of a group, many of whom were known to cherish a conception of the imperial tie that bore little relationship to recent constitutional development or to the changing needs and desires of the rising generation of Canadians.

As for French Canada, its attitude seemed to be acquiescent and largely negative.

THERE ARE strict limitations to the activities of a Governor General. But Tweedsmuir worked, like an artist, within the limits set, and because he had within him some essentially creative qualities, these very limitations became a medium for creative achievement. By extensive travel, frequent speeches and the widest range of personal contacts ever developed and maintained by any Governor General in Canadian history, he used the opportunities afforded to him both to learn about Canada from Canadians and to tell Canadians about their own country and its place in the world.

He once said jokingly that as a Governor General he was confined to speaking only in terms of "governor-generalities." That was only half the truth. The other half was that he never failed to look at Canada in the large, to see its setting in the contemporary world, or to recognize and point out the implications of changing conditions. At the same time his insistence on the traditional etiquette and his strong personal predilection for the ritual and external grandeur associated with the office helped to satisfy the desires of conservatives and the social set.

The best record of Lord Tweedsmuir's Canadian career lies in his speeches. One brief quotation from the now famous speech which he made in Montreal in October 1937 before the Canadian Institute of International Affairs exemplifies well the broad spirit in which he approached great questions.

. . . The foreign policy of a democracy must be the cumulative views of individual citizens, and if these views are to be sound they must in turn be the consequence of a widely diffused knowledge.

From this duty no country is exempt. Certainly not Canada. She is a sovereign nation and cannot take her attitude to the world docilely from Britain, or from the United States, or from anybody else. A Canadian's first loyalty is not to the British Commonwealth of Nations, but to Canada and to Canada's King, and those who deny this are doing, to my mind, a great disservice to the Commonwealth . . .

These words were immediately acclaimed by the French Canadians, especially in Quebec, as also by Canadian nationalists throughout the country. By this speech, as a leading English Canadian newspaper pointed out at the time of his death, "Lord Tweedsmuir added to the political knowledge and maturity of the Canadian people."

It was not that many Canadians did not already share these views or did not already know that they issued naturally and inevitably from the stream of twentieth century British political thinking. It was the fact that they came from a man who had by that time come to be recognized throughout Canada as "impartial, just and informed." In a few well-chosen words he compelled the laggards in thought to face up soberly to contemporary reality. At the same time he created a sorely needed meeting place for many French and English which has since served both races well in their efforts to discover common ground on which might be built a durable structure of national unity.

SURPRISE at Lord Tweedsmuir's ability thus to see understandingly and to talk wisely on large national and international issues existed only where there was ignorance. For at the turn of the century, and while still a very young man, his first political experience had been in Lord Milner's famous kindergarten in South Africa. There he found himself with Patrick Duncan, now Governor General of South Africa; Phillip Kerr, now Marquis of Lothian and British Ambassador to the United States; Geoffrey Dawson, the present editor of the London Times; Arthur Steele-Maitland, a distinguished administrator, and Lionel Curtis, the founder of the Round Table group.

He had fallen into a stream of thinking which later exercised a profound influence on Commonwealth development. Thus when he found himself in the Canada of the late thirties, with discussion and argument rife over the problems of Commonwealth relationships he had a wealth of knowledge and experience which he could quite properly draw upon without overstepping the bounds of "governor-generalities."

The wheel had come full circle over the space of 40 years. He realized, what men like Milner and Borden had clearly realized and expressed years before, that the Commonwealth can only survive if its Dominion members rid themselves of a subservient colonial mentality with its inevitable concomitants—evasion of responsibility and an adolescent attitude towards world affairs. He saw, too—or else he would hardly have made this speech—that certain elements in Canada had failed to learn this lesson, and he did not hesitate to speak his mind.

When he died, a leading French Canadian newspaper quoted at length the significant sections of this speech, considering this the worthiest tribute it could pay to a man who by making it had made a significant contribution to Canadian unity.

Dorothy Thompson's Statistics

How She Eliminated Some 6,000,000 Unemployed

By Corrington Gill

Assistant Commissioner, Work Projects Administration

MISS DOROTHY THOMPSON'S discussion of the extent of our present unemployment problem in The Post on March 11 left me with a feeling of real concern for the effect it might have on the fate of a large group of our citizens. I am not worried that the unemployed themselves will be misled by Miss Thompson's attempt to conjure away the existence of unemployment. They know all too well that the problem is a real one.

But I am concerned about the confusion that may be created in the minds of the employed. Because of this I am pointing out in some detail the nature of the errors in Miss Thompson's calculations. A proper use of the figures she relies on actually supports the currently accepted estimates of the extent of unemployment.

For several years now experienced statisticians have been making estimates of the amount of unemployment in this country. They represent such diverse organizations as the National Industrial Conference Board, the American Federation of Labor, and various governmental agencies. Some of our estimates are published, others circulate informally. The methods used differ somewhat in matters of detail. All the estimates agree, however, on one central fact: The number of people who are unemployed today is some 8,000,000 to 9,000,000 greater than in 1929.

The chief point of disagreement is the exact number of unemployed in the base year 1929. The National Industrial Conference Board puts it at 500,000, the American Federation of Labor at 1,800,000. This issue is relatively unimportant, however. The important thing is that the National Industrial Conference Board and the American Federation of Labor both estimate the increase in unemployment since 1929 at roughly 8,500,000 (comparing the average for 1939 with the average for 1929). Unpublished estimates made by various Government agencies show a change of approximately the same magnitude.

NOW THIS very unanimity appears to Miss Dorothy Thompson a ground for suspicion. Anything that is so widely accepted and so often repeated is almost sure, she thinks, to be wrong. She has decided, consequently, to investigate the whole matter for herself. A quick inspection of population and employment statistics confirms her worst—or rather her best—suspicions. Unemployment, far from being the major problem most people think it is, is really of almost negligible proportions. Miss Thompson's own calculations lead her to believe that abnormal unemployment, that is unemployment in excess of what there was in 1929, is probably not more than 2,000,000.

There are, unfortunately, certain pitfalls in this field which make the going rather dangerous for a statistical novice. Miss Thompson tackles the problem with her customary daring and verve, but without the admixture of caution which would be advisable on such treacherous terrain.

Consider, for instance, her treatment of the growth in total labor supply. She finds that the population has grown by 10,000,000 in the decade since 1929. In 1929 about 38 per cent of the population were working or looking for work. It looks as though nothing could be more simple than to calculate the increase in labor supply since that date. Thirty-eight per cent of 10,000,000 is 3,800,000, and that would seem to be all there is to it.

This answer actually is only a little more than one-half right. Miss Thompson forgets completely to take account of the fact that along with the increase in population there has been a marked change in its age composition. There are relatively more people of working age now than there were in 1929. Allowance for this factor—duly made by all the statisticians who have been in the business for some time—gives an increase in the "normal" labor supply of roughly 6,000,000 instead of Miss Thompson's 3,800,000.

In arriving at her own private unemployment estimate Miss Thompson uses the NICB figure for employment. But she passes by the NICB estimate of labor supply without as much as a nod.

CORRINGTON GILL

He gave Miss Thompson a pretty low mark in arithmetic

Had she cared to look at the labor supply figures the NICB publishes she would have found that their 1939 figure is almost exactly 6,000,000 larger than their 1929 figure.

SO MUCH for the so-called "normal" increase in labor supply. In dealing with the "abnormal" increase, made up chiefly of women forced into the labor market by the unemployment of the normal family bread-winner, Miss Thompson abandons statistics and reverts to a purely literary treatment. The effect is rather confusing. The reader is left in doubt as to whether these forced entries into the labor market are included in the usual labor supply and unemployment estimates which Miss Thompson is discussing or should be added to them. Actually, of course the A. F. of L., NICB, and other unemployment estimates are made up on the assumption that only the "normal" labor supply is available for employment, and hence do not include these forced entries.

Had Miss Thompson had time to cover the field a little more thoroughly she would have found some very interesting statistics in the Enumerative Check Census of November, 1937. This census covers a large random sample of the country's population who were directly questioned as to their employment status at the time. The results provide a remarkable confirmation of the unemployment estimates made up by the entirely different method of subtracting estimated employment from estimated total labor supply.

In November, 1937, there were, according to the Enumerative Check Census 8,200,000 people unemployed, after the elimination of some 2,700,000 women who at that time were seeking work, but who would not be in the labor market in a period of normal prosperity. The 8,200,000 compares with A. F. of L. and NICB estimates of 8,500,000 and 7,700,000 respectively for the same month.

Miss Thompson reveals the same lack of statistical prudence in the calculation of the percentage of the total population who would be working if all the unemployed were absorbed. Put 9,000,000 more people to work and 44 per cent of the population would be working. But, she says, only 43 per cent are of working age (eliminating three-quarters of the women as not normally in the labor market). In arriving at this figure she excludes all people under 15 and over 65. The labor market, however, is not so discriminating. Some 2,500,000 people over 65 are still very much in the labor market, a good two-thirds of them actually employed, and several hundred thousand children under 15 still hold jobs. Statisticians must be careful to make their calculations correspond with the facts as they are, not as they might be or the investigator thinks they should be.

MISS THOMPSON'S treatment of WPA employment is in some respects very commendable. It is quite true that WPA workers "work and get wages and for the most part do work that needs to be done." Miss Thompson's recognition of this fact is all to her credit. When she goes on, however, to say that the same work would be done by some local governmental agency if it were not done by the Federal Government she is on much less solid ground. With limitations on the sources of State and local revenue and on State and local borrowing powers what they are, it is unlikely that more than a small fraction of the work now being done by WPA would be continued under purely local auspices.

Moreover—and this is the crucial point—it is scarcely fair to the WPA workers to say that they are not unemployed when the continuance of their present jobs depends on their being classed as unemployed. Until Congress and the country decide to take these jobs out of the emergency, and hence temporary, category WPA workers must continue to be counted among the unemployed.

To return to Miss Thompson's contention that "our unemployment is 2,000,000 not 9,000,000:" It is interesting to recapitulate the steps by which she arrives at this remarkable conclusion. To begin with, we must add back the 2,300,000 WPA workers she throws out; that makes 4,300,000. Then add on the 2,200,000 she overlooks by underestimating the increase in the labor supply. That brings the total to 6,500,000. Miss Thompson takes as her base the December, 1929, employment figure, a month in which depression was already well under way.

The conference board estimates that approximately 1,900,000 were unemployed in December, 1929, compared with 400,000 for the average of the year as a whole. That makes 8,000,000 jobs that must be supplied before we can get back to the 1929 level of unemployment or, putting it another way, before we can consider that the desires of the population for jobs are being met to the same extent they were in 1929. And 8,000,000 is, of course, just about the figure most people who emphasizes the gravity of the unemployment problem would give if asked how many jobs must be provided before we can consider we have attained a reasonable satisfactory state of affairs.

Beware of Frills and Cultivate Regal Posture To Shine in Easter Parade, Advises Ballerina

Mme. Danilova Says Good Clothes Are Wasted When On Slouchy Figure

By Carolyn Abbott.

FRILLY frocks, bird of paradise hats, rainbow colored accessories—bah and another big bah! These are not for the working girl on a limited budget. That is, if she wants her Easter outfit to rival in effect the Duchess of Windsor's finery. This in brief expresses the sentiments of Mme. Alexander Danilova, leading ballerina of the Ballet Russe, of Monte Carlo, who was in Washington recently.

Two colors—one for the basic dress and another for accessories—should be the limit," said Mme. Danilova, who herself is the essence of chic." Too many different colors, as evidenced in the new spring styles, detract rather than add to the beauty of any costume. Always, the hat and shoes should be the same color as the frock, even when wearing a different colored wrap or coat. When the coat is removed, the hat and shoes match the dress, the costume harmonizes, otherwise you have a piecemeal affair."

Points of Emphasi-

Shoes and hats are the most important items in a woman's wardrobe, believes this graceful ballerina. A good pair of shoes and a handsome, becoming hat will give dash to any dress even if it is a $6.98 bargain. The eyes automatically travel from the feet to the head (especially a man's eye), therefore, the shoes and hat are the focal points, she pointed out. One good dress, well cut, is far preferable to an assortment of cheaper ones, she believes. But if the dress must be cheap she still insists that the shoes and hat be of the best quality.

For those who cannot afford a new Easter frock, she suggests the following method for giving the old one a flare and fresh touch: "Fresh flowers, a new jabot, collar or cuffs, a new pair of bright clips or an exciting necklace."

Not discounting the importance of clothes, Mme. Danilova said that any woman can look like a queen in an inexpensive outfit, provided she has the regal carriage attributed to royalty. A stately, graceful carriage is far more important to looking smart than an ermine coat. Basing her opinions on observation gleaned from extensive travel, Mme. Danilova should know whereof she speaks. In Europe at the outbreak of the war, she had an opportunity to observe women in Paris, London, Rome, Florence and Milan.

Chic Italians

In Italy she was amazed to find that the Italian women were trim and slim instead of the "spaghetti eating motherly type" that she had pictured. Closely following the American women in exercises, they dieted but did not talk about it so freely as the women in the States. For styles, she said, they still depend upon Paris.

"At last," she said, "slacks have invaded the style front in London. Everywhere, women of all classes wear them in the streets, restaurants and other public places. Only the war, she believes could have put the conservative English women in slacks, but not even peace will take them away from their wardrobes."

The one effect of the war on Paris style trends that Mme. Danilova noticed was the covered up effect instead of the extreme decollete motifs in evening clothes.

Fish in Vienna Rolls a Delectable Lenten Concoction

VIENNA, city of laughter and song may be less gay these days, but bakers still proudly display Vienna Rolls in their showcases. Their crisply toasted crusts make excellent contrast for a smooth, soft filling of creamed fish.

Any of our finny friends—creamed oysters, shrimp, salmon, tuna—are right at home in a bread boat, made quickly and easily by removing the center crumb of Vienna or other hard rolls. Fold the seafood into the hot white sauce and heat the mixture thoroughly in the top of a double boiler before serving.

The combination of the good-for-you qualities of bread, white sauce, and fish makes a delectable concoction for a meatless Lenten menu.

Creamed Oysters in Crisp Rolls

Cut tops from crusty rolls. With a fork remove most of the center crumb. Brush inside of roll with melted butter. Toast in oven or in broiler. Fill with creamed oysters or other fish. Garnish with parsley.

Creamed Oysters

Melt 4 tablespoons butter. Add 4 tablespoons flour, stirring to make a smooth paste. Add 1½ cups milk, stirring until mixture thickens slightly. Add 1 teaspoon salt. Fry 1 pint oysters lightly in butter. Add to white sauce and serve in rolls.

Women Chemists Prove Worth, Society Reports

Women chemists are just beginning to prove to industry that they are as competent as men, according to a report to the Cincinnati section of the American Chemical Society, which will hold its ninety-ninth meeting in Cincinnati, April 8 to 12. There will be greater opportunities for women in the coming years, the report states. A broadened scope of activity for women chemsits in Cincinnati, it is pointed out, will result as industry expands.

"There will be an increasing need for teachers, research workers, technicians, analysts, special librarians, and other women with chemical training in educational institutions and in industry," the report says. "Nearly 150 women in Cincinnati are now engaged in chemistry or allied fields.

"The majority are in biochemistry, many being laboratory technicians or assistants in medical research in Cincinnati's ten hospitals. Others are doctors of medicine. The hospitals report a total of 44 women technicians in their clinical laboratories and about 16 in research laboratories. Thirty-five practicing physicians and 13 internes and residents are women."

1940 Fair Burgeons; Freaks Will Get The Soft Pedal

New York, March 15.

THINGS are certainly stirring out there on the Flushing meadows where the 1940 version of the World's Fair will be unveiled in a matter of weeks. The Trylon is getting a new covering, and life moves again into the 160 acres lately buried by winter.

Mary Lewis, the blue-eyed, tow-headed dynamo, is whipping her fashion building into line—which brings me to the thought that the girls are playing a much bigger part in the show than they did in 1939. Mary has great plans for her building—there will be practically continuous fashion shows of all kinds going on, widely varying displays, a moderate-priced eating place. Mary is absolutely right when she says that "Fashion is really New York's only major industry, and thus we expect all branches of the style world to support heartily our World of Fashion Building." That makes sense.

Moving across the lot to the Midway, the most stupendous flop of last year's show, we find another handsome blonde girl at the tiller, this one being Peg Humphrey, who is an experienced show-woman and is now busy lining up carnival people and other show-folk for the summer. Last year she was assistant manager of the Aquacade, and this year is going to make the Fun Zone something worth visiting if she busts a girdle doing it. Peg hates freak shows, and thinks most other people do. Thus they'll get the soft pedal. She worked at the Texas and Cleveland shows, and all outdoor showmen know her and respect her abilities. She can also put up a good scrap when it is called for.

This girl from Ashtabula, Ohio, says that there are bound to be girl shows, but she wants them done better than last year when none of them made any money.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The other day at the luncheon hour I found myself in the middle of a strong two-man discussion between Louis Bromfield, the novelist and Hendrik van Loon, who writes the successful 5-pound books. Big Hendrik is helping Hoover with Finnish aid, while Bromfield, on his Ohio farm, is trying to solve some of the agricultural problems concerned with feeding our own people. They went at it pretty strong, until both decided not to get too bitter, so they began to banter. It was interesting to hear, and I played the smart feminine role of listener. Take it from an old lady, there's no quality a man likes more in a woman than being a good listener while he preens, brags, lies, pulls out the sympathy stop, or tells the story of his youthful struggles to fame and fortune.

Visiting Minister Considers This Column's Work Similar to His; Discusses Philandering Men

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Let me congratulate you on the work you are doing. Visiting in the East, I saw your column in The Post of March 7, and noted a strong similarity between your undertaking and what I am trying to do as minister of a small pastorate in the Southwest. When I started in, 15 years ago, trying to heal souls, I found that a large number of them were sick from the kind of unhappiness described by your correspondent of March 7. Aware of her husband's infidelity, she now shrinks involuntarily from marital intimacy, which further imperils the stability of their marriage.

Your advice to this woman—to invite a judicious discussion of the obstacles to unity that have arisen—was admirable, theoretically. But for the following reasons (based on my experience and observation in trying to help solve a large number of marital problems), I do not believe this wife will be successful in tackling the difficulty in the manner advised.

Unless the husband is highly exceptional, no "judicious discussion of the state of mind which prompted his infidelity" will be possible for him. Men do not like to engage in discussions, even when they are judicious, of these questions. They either cannot or will not think through and talk out marital problems. Readily as they will throw the full force of their powers into business or politics or whatever else, outside the home, demands correction, they do not want to spend even one hour thinking about or discussing a marital misunderstanding

I have seen a number of cases similar to the one described in your column; and invariably the man would want to settle the thing by silence, kisses, a check or other gift. And he would be much hurt and surprised when his wife refused to consider such superficial treatment a solution. One man, who absolutely refused a rational discussion with his wife, said to me privately, "What could I say to her? That I love and respect her, and want only her as my wife? But that in spite of this I lusted after a young girl, that I wanted variety?"

Of course, infidelity and marital misunderstanding reflect but one aspect of a general condition of social unrest, deriving from a false standard of values which exalts individualism and materialism at the expense of finer values which have always spelled human happiness. And in the field of marriage, as in all others, men are wrong in devoting their best energy to business, politics, economics, sports and pleasure-seeking, leaving little or none for those intimate and intricate emotional relationships which are the very crux of both private and public happiness.

Women, too, are wrong in not demanding from men a different approach to these matters. Women must slowly educate men to see love and marriage in a different light. They must make it plain that gifts, money, fine houses, the best clubs and the company of "the right people" (who only too often are pretty shoddy specimens) will no longer do as the husband's contribution to the marriage. His mind and his soul, as well as his business abilities and his earnings, must be fully directed toward the sustenance and development of his marriage relationship. Yours truly.

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY.

A Time to Be Silent And a Time to Speak

DEAR DOCTOR: Your observation concerning the mental limpness of unfaithful husbands—who prefer to bury their sins in a well of silence or buy a truce, rather than face the issue honestly and bravely in open hearing—is interesting, in that it corroborates a masculine viewpoint recently declared by the French intellectual, Andre Maurois. Writing in the current issue of the Ladies' Home Journal on "The Art of Marriage," M. Maurois states, in effect, that marital discord is best healed by the gesture which implies faith, love or forgiveness.

Remarking that, "A successful marriage is an edifice that must be rebuilt every day," he goes on to say, "naturally, this rebuilding must not be accompanied by explanations, analyses or confessions. Meredith has spoken profoundly of the serious dangers of too much searching mutual criticism. The process must be simpler and more secretive. The true woman feels instinctively these threatening indications, this boredom that increases almost imperceptibly. Her instinct suggests remedies to her. The man himself knows that sometimes a look or a smile is better than an explanation . . ."

When a man of M. Maurois' sensitive intuition and scholarly eminence lays down principles of behavior which make for happy marriage, I am inclined to give those principles respectful consideration. But even so, I cannot indorse his advocacy of individual "secretiveness" as a formula for maintaining conjugal solidarity. It seems to me that one can freely concede "the serious dangers of too much searching mutual criticism," without disavowing the necessity, in times of critical psychic estrangement in marriage, for a civilized, objective discussion of the obstacles to unity that have arisen.

Sulphur Soap, Lighter Creams Good for Spring

By the Associated Press

Try a colloidal sulphur soap as a spring cleaner. And, generally speaking, it's better to use lighter creams and lotions at this time of year.

Now, for the 1940 make-up. You may change your make-up at the whim of your costume color. A lot of people are linking the two. But if you like natural make-up (more like your own coloring at its best), then you will use fairly clear red lipstick with a little more orange or a little more blue in the red according to your skin.

Your lipstick at least should blend with your nail polish and the two can match. If you like lighter nail polish, but still want color in it, let the hue of the polish correspond to that of your rouge. And rouge, by the way, often is a bit lighter than lipstick this spring.

Paint, Chintz, Good Cheer Help a Dollar Do the Work of Two

By Elizabeth M. Boykin

MAKING ONE dollar do the work of two is an old familiar refrain to the average lady with a house. Some do it with a gay and lilting hand; others with a sigh and groan. Which is your style?

One charming home on a typical American street is an example of what can be done on a small income. It might be almost anybody's house—a 5-room cottage simply built and with only the basic modern improvements and no extra frills. But paint, chintz, enthusiasm, energy and good cheer have accomplished more than a fat bank roll achieves in homes where there's been less personality and affection put into its furnishings.

Walls in White

In this little house, the living room and dining room, which adjoin through a wide arch, have had both walls and woodwork painted in a spanking white. The floors of both rooms are covered in a two-tone green broadloom, which used up an important part of the budget for these two rooms but was considered worth it. The old sofa is slip-covered in a washable cotton in an all-over green and white figured material.

The other upholstered chairs in the living room are all slip covered in plain green denim, not a dull dark practical green but a fresh crisp shade . . . after all it's a washable fabric. The other furniture here includes small maple chests as end tables and an upright piano. Built-in bookcases are painted white outside and yellow inside.

The lamps all have yellow pottery bases and white shades and accessories in yellow pottery. The curtains are white ruffled organdy made very full and finished across the top with a valance of the green and white figured material.

Gives Bright Effect

The dining room adjoining is furnished, for the present, mostly in made-over furniture. (Later this will be replaced with maple). An old round oak table got the varnish removed, then coats and coats of white paint till it was almost as smooth as a china cup. The new chairs here have already been bought—maple ladder backs they are with seat pads in the all-over figured cotton, the same green and white as is used in the living room.

For a sideboard an old dresser was called into duty, with some hanging shelves above it, the whole business painted white except the panels which were covered in the green and white figured material.

The curtains here are the same as in the living room—so are the built-in corner shelves painted white with yellow inside to hold a collection of pewter. For the table, mats of the green and white figured material and dishes of plain yellow set the scene for bright meals.

Spring Appetizer

Freeze your horseradish relish the next time you serve it with meat. Make the sauce the usual way and freeze in a tray in the mechanical refrigerator. Cut into cubes and pile up in a small dish. This gives sort of a spring touch, often needed to revive appetites.

Soaps and Rest Best Beauty Aids

The sparkle in the eye and spring in the step that make a woman radiate happiness may be especially hard to attain at the holiday season, just when she wants them most. Social occasions demand that she look her best, yet busy days of shopping and addressing cards to all her friends may leave her completely fagged.

No far-fetched prescription is really needed, but rather a reminder of the rest and beauty aids that wait within her own bathroom.

A warm, refreshing bath can relax the harried shopper so that the worry lines will practically wash away. A brisk rub with a rough towel will wake up the circulation and give an all-over glow. Feet tired of tramping through department store aisles welcome the comfort of a warm soap-and-water soaking at night. Give them a good bath, clean stockings, and a change of shoes, and another wrinkle will vanish from the brow.

Teen Agers Should Avoid Skinniness in Reducing

Cautioned Especially To Keep Eating Necessary Foods

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN anyone over 25 goes on a reducing program, the chances are 25-75 that she will remain on it. But when the teen age tackles anything, it evinces so much spontaneity and determination that the big question is whether it has the judgment to keep within bounds and not over-do. For that reason, I am always hesitant about helping the teen age to reduce.

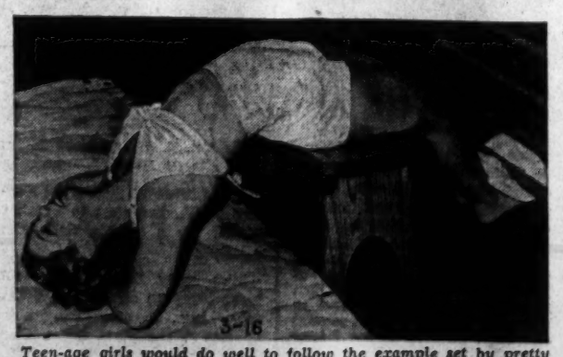
At the same time, I am wholly in sympathy with the overweights in this age group. If, as some of your letters would suggest, your size makes you utterly miserable, then something should be done about your weight.

The first thing, however, is to be sure that you are really overweight. Skinniness is unattractive at any age. It is particularly unattractive at yours! An extra 10 pounds not only is very becoming, but gives you a valuable energy reserve. If you are only 10 pounds overweight, be thankful for it!

Ask Your Doctor

But if you are as much as 30 pounds overweight, that is a different matter. Have your doctor check you over, and make your plans to reduce to normal. It is highly probable that reduction of your weight will be simple in the extreme. Cutting out pie a la mode, ice cream sodas, banana splits, and other between-meal delicacies will work wonders. Many an overweight teen age person can reduce simply by omitting the between-meal snacks that are scandalously high in calories.

But there are certain foods that anyone needs every day, and you need them more than anyone else. These you must not cut out. You should have two or three glasses of milk or buttermilk—you need the calcium. You should also have one egg, for the iron and protein. You need at least one and one-half pats of butter, for the Vitamin A. You must have two cooked vegetables, one the green leafy variety, for minerals, vitamins and bulk. You need



Teen-age girls would do well to follow the example set by pretty June Preisser (above) by emulating her program, which includes drinking a quart of milk daily, sleeping nine hours each night and getting daily exercise two fresh fruits, one a citrus fruit, for vitamins. In addition, you need one large or two small servings of lean meat, fish or fowl for protein and three or four slices of whole wheat bread for Vitamin B.

1,500 Calories a Day

Then, if you are in the least susceptible to colds, or your vitality is below par, one vitamin capsule should be added to the daily diet.

Even while reducing, you teen age girls need all the protective foods and a minimum of 1,500 calories per day. Ask your doctor to tell you the exact number of calories on which you can reduce safely.

It is more than likely that you will find the daily menus given in this column, supplemented with two slices of whole wheat bread, one pat of butter, two glasses of milk and one extra fresh fruit, a perfect diet.

In addition to weight control, you should make a hobby of some activity that exercises all your muscles so that you will grow up with a lovely figure. Skating, swimming, badminton and tennis are excellent beauty builders.

Start a Spring Flower Garden From Seed Bed

DELIGHTFUL and varied are the uses of shrubbery in the garden.

Shrubs are the perfect setting for the house, they lend themselves gracefully to boundary planting—or they may create such delightfully private nooks as the one pictured.

And by selecting the right shrubs you may have a succession of blooms from spring to fall—year after year.

After the early-blooming forsythia you can look forward to the sweet-scented lilac, the weigela with its blossoms of pink, white or crimson. In summer, a host of butterflies are lured to your garden by buddleia blossoms of lilac or white and yellow. Lovely, too, is the althea or Rose-of-Sharon.

And for autumn splendor there is the scarlet-leaved sumac, bearing velvety red fruitheads.

You may easily start new shrubs from old—save yourself expense—by the process of layering. Select a branch of your shrub and with a razor cut slantwise half through the underside of the stem. Lay stem in a 2-inch trench, cover with soil and hold down with a rock. When your branch has rooted, cut it free from the main plant.

Officials, Diplomats Toast Shah On His Birthday at Iran Legation

Reception by Newly Arrived Envoy Mohammed Schayestah, Attended By Hundreds of Washington Notables

Washingtonians celebrated enthusiastically yesterday the birthday of His Imperial Majesty Riza Shah Pahlavi of Iran at a reception given at the legation. Host was the newly arrived Minister, Mohammed Schayesteh, who was assisted in receiving by the wife of the Counselor of the legation, Mme. Hadjeb-Davallou.

All the guests agreed that more parties should be given at the legation, which is perfectly suited to entertaining. Inside a winding marble staircase leads to the second floor, where an enormous colonnaded hall would be perfect for a dance. Opening off this room are several smaller salons and an enormous dining room.

As one would expect at the Iranian Legation, the most noteworthy decorative feature are the beautiful Persian rugs. Even the cloakroom is covered with magnificent examples of the most famous industry of Iran, and there are immense carpets in the hall and dining room.

Nobody came away from the legation hungry, as the buffet was the most elaborate seen in a season when large scale diplomatic entertaining has taken a terrific slump. There were enormous salmon, great platters of salad, and jellied meats, to say nothing of the usual sandwiches and cakes. The tea table was centered with an unusual arrangement of bright red roses and white lilies. Smaller vases of the crimson roses were placed here and there throughout the rooms.

The Minister and Mme. Davallou received at the head of the staircase, the latter wearing a street length dress of lavender crepe and a corsage of gardenias. Mme. Schayesteh is in Florida until the weather here gets warmer.

High Officials In Throng

Officialdom was well represented yesterday, both foreign and domestic. Among the first arrivals was Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, who wore a black fur jacket over her green dress and a becoming hat with a veil which tied behind. The German Charge d'Affaires and Frau Thomsen hurried on as the former had to get ready for the large dinner he gave last evening for the head of the German Red Cross, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

Mrs. A. A. Berle, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, was present, wearing a gray dress and a black hat with a veil. Mrs. Henry A. Grady, wife of another Assistant Secretary of State, made the rounds with Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck. Mrs. Grady topped off her black and pink ensemble with a corsage of white orchids.

The Irish Minister, Robert Brennan, was accompanied by Mrs. Brennan and one of their three pretty daughters. The Latvian Minister, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, was another envoy present.

Senora de Cardenas, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, was greeted on all sides, having just returned from a vacation in the South. Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, and the Portuguese Minister and Mme. Bianchi were others present from the Diplomatic Corps.

The latter's daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, had on a smart spring hat, a navy-blue poke bonnet effect, which tied under the chin and had a wreath of flowers tucked under the front of the brim.

Champagne was served in a little alcove off the diningroom, and the popping of corks punctuated the conversation. There was also Scotch and soda for those who wanted it.

Shah's Health Drunk in Champagne

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe were among those representing residential society. Others seen included Orhan H. Erol, Counselor of the Turkish Embassy; Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Nathan Bartlett, Mrs. Bruce Wallace, the newly arrived Military Attache of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Kenny, Senora de Fernandez, pretty young wife of the Minister of Paraguay; Mrs. Irene Caldwell and many others.

In one room of the legation is a striking photograph of beautiful Princess Fawsia, sister of King Farouk of Egypt. She was married almost a year ago to His Imperial Highness Schahpur Mohammed Reza, Crown Prince of Iran. At that time the legation here was the scene of a large party celebrating the event.

The Iranian Legation is just above Sheridan Circle, a handsome white stone building in the same block as the Chilean Embassy. It is only a few paces from two residences which have recently been in the limelight—that of Czecho-Slovakia and the one now occupied by the Minister of Denmark, which before the Anschluss was the Austrian Legation.

Herr Thomsen Honors Duke With Dinner

Officials, Diplomats Meet Germany's Head of Red Cross

Ranking officials of the State Department, foreign diplomats and officials of the Army and Red Cross met Carl Eduard, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, at a dinner given last evening in his honor by the Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, Hans Thomsen. The Duke is here as head of the German Red Cross.

There were 67 present at last night's party, which was held at the Mayflower. Following a reception in the Pan American room and the adjoining parlor, dinner was served in the Chinese room. Garlands of string smilax entwined with gardenias and pink beauty roses made an effective table decoration. Four standards at the ends of the table were filled with the pink beauties, which are somewhat similar to the American Beauty rose, but are even more brilliant in color.

This afternoon Herr and Frau Thomsen will give a large reception at the Shoreham for the Duke and will be hosts at a buffet supper tonight in his honor at their home on Colorado avenue.

Hardin Fete Guests at Club

Dr. and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin entertained at a small dinner party last night before the Friday Supper Club.

Also hosts were Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, who feted Miss Nancy Luttrell and her fiance, Edgar Orme. Their marriage will take place March 30, in Palm Beach.

Mrs. Pettengill will leave shortly to spend Holy Week in New York. She expects to return to the Capital for Easter.

Several Hostesses Give Parties After Town Hall

After the lecture several of them entertained guests in the Shoreham's Louis Seize Room. Among the hostesses were Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Charles E. Riggs and Mrs. Geneva Dunham.

Hines, Mrs. Walter Guy, Mrs. Hoffman Philips, Mrs. Walter Freeman, Mrs. Moulton Johnson, Mrs. Elizabeth Shepherd, Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. Preston Delano, Mrs. Daniel Borden, Mrs. Stanley Smith, Mrs. James Craig Peacock and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown with a wide, white tulle skirt and lace bodice. The lace was from her mother's wedding gown. She wore a tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Guy Bowman Mercer, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a turquoise blue chiffon ensemble and carried a bouquet of tailisman roses.

J. Carter Fort, jr., brother of the bride, served as best man. After the ceremony there was a wedding supper at the home of the bride's parents for relatives and a few close friends. Mrs. Fort wore a violet lace and chiffon gown.

After a honeymoon in the South the couple will make their home at 1611 Thirty-first street in Georgetown. The bride was graduated from Hollins College in 1938. Mr. Wilson attended the University of North Carolina and received his law degree from George Washington University.

Mrs. Greenbie Given Party By Mrs. Coyle

'The American Saga' Author Is Honored At Luncheon Here

Wives of two Supreme Court justices and of two members of the Cabinet were in the group that Mrs. David Cushman Coyle gathered in for luncheon yesterday in honor of Marjorie Barstow Greenbie, the writer, whose most recently published book is "The American Saga."

Looking where every researcher looks, in the card index of the Congressional Library, Mrs. Greenbie "discovered" Anne Carroll, one of the foremost figures in Civil War days and termed "the great unrecognized member of Lincoln's Cabinet."

Book May Appear The Coming Summer

Mrs. Greenbie has written a biography of this woman, who served as Lincoln's personal pamphleteer during the war and did an important spying job. The book will probably appear next summer.

In a brief talk following yesterday's luncheon, Mrs. Greenbie told the fascinating story of how she happened to find the material about Anne Carroll, and her experiences in building up her biography.

Ranking members of the company were Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace. The 50 guests were seated at two long tables in the dining room of headquarters of the American Association of University Women. The party was the second that Mrs. Coyle has given recently in honor of Mrs. Greenbie.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

MRS. REGINALD VANDERBILT (the former Gloria Morgan) will be a spring visitor to Washington. With her sister, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, of the Capital, she has been in Havana, where they arrived by boat from Vera Cruz after a motor trip through California and Mexico. They are expected here after a stay in Miami.

Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey left Washington yesterday on the first stage of a motor trip South. She will probably go as far as St. Petersburg, Fla. The other night at dinner Mrs. Dewey was unusually effective in a black, off-the-shoulder gown of very sheer material trimmed with insets of fine pleating. When she was complimented on the dress, Gwen Dewey said that she had just received it back from a friend to whom she had lent it for the winter. Real friendship, I think.

THE JOUETT SHOUSES are expected back in Washington any day now after their trip to Cuba and Florida. In Havana they stayed with Irene duPont, who owns one of the most beautiful places in that part of the world. A private beach, tennis courts, and a fine golf course all contribute to perfect holidays enjoyed by Mr. duPont's guests. A novel and lovely feature of the place is the roof garden which covers the entire house. On leaving Havana, the Shouses stopped in Miami at the Miami-Biltmore where they entertained at several dinners before starting back home.

Though Washington is still a bit dreary as regards weather, there are a lot of us left here and not everyone has gone away to seek the sun. On the contrary, we even boast some new arrivals. Among them is Mrs. Wainwright Abbott, whose husband is United States Consul at Hamburg. Mrs. Abbott has taken an apartment at the Caravel to sit out the war.

SEEING OGDEN HAMMOND, JR. about town again is very nice. He has returned from his first foreign service post to take a three-months' course of study at the State Department and will settle down at the Anchorage. Ogden is the brother of popular Countess Roberti, who has just left for Mexico with her husband. Too bad that their paths crossed only momentarily and that the brother and sister couldn't be here together again as they were in the days when Ogden was preparing for his foreign service examinations.

William Hillman has just arrived in Washington from London. He is European manager for a well-known American magazine, and his is one of those voices which come to us on the radio from Europe with shudder-making war news. Mr. Hillman brought Mrs. Hillman and their child over with him and will leave them in the United States while he commutes back and forth between here and Europe.

Robert Pell, of the State Department, gathered in a few men to meet Mr. Hillman over the luncheon table the other day. Among the guests were James Clement Dunn and Samuel Reber.

Two of Washington's most interesting diplomatic bachelors were hosts at dinner on the same night recently. Both of them live in Georgetown in delightful small houses and enjoy having a few friends in to dine informally with plenty of lively discussion to follow.

Jacques Dumaine, First Secretary of the French Embassy, had as his guest of honor M. Charles Rist who, with his English colleague, Frank Ashton-Gwatkin, recently arrived in Washington to help unravel the snarls growing out of the Anglo-French war blockade.

John Foster, First Secretary of the British Embassy, had planned his dinner for out-of-town friends who at the last minute were unable to come. The dinner went merrily on, however, as the host is one of the wittiest men in town and is always full of good spirits, though never of the alcoholic variety, being one of those rare specimens, a man who never takes a drink.

Junior League Sponsors Tea: Groups Honored

At a Junior League tea yesterday afternoon the publicity committee and the glee club shared honors. The gathering was at the club headquarters at 2001 Massachusetts avenue.

The glee club is under the direction of Mrs. Cecil Blair, a league member with wide experience as a singer and pianist. Mrs. F. Eberhart Haynes is chairman of the group. Mrs. Haynes and Mrs. Ernest Gardner Warren, chairman of the publicity committee, were hostesses for the afternoon.

Among the guests were Mrs. Blair, Mrs. Jennings Bailey, jr., Mrs. Beale Bloomer, Miss Barbara Bolling, Mrs. Elmore Cropley, Mrs. John Ward Cutler, Miss Juliet Dulaney, Mrs. Pierre Gaillard, Mrs. Edwin Haakinson, Mrs. Bishop Hill, Mrs. Robert Kinnebrew, Mrs. Claude Langlais, Miss Sarah Tyler Meigs, Mrs. C. J. Mohan, Mrs. Robert Parker, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mrs. Edwin Tribble and Mrs. A. Z. Foster Wood.

Dorothy Dawson, Edwin S. Dobyns Are Married

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dawson have announced the marriage of their daughter, Dorothy, to Edwin Stanford Dobyns, yesterday.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lawrence J. Wempy, in the rectory of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Sixteenth street and Park road northwest.

Mr. Dobyns is the son of Mrs. Aline C. Dobyns, 1421 Varnum street northwest, the great-grandson of the late Eugene Carusi, founder of the National Law School and dean of Washington lawyers at the time of his deatth, and grandson of the late Eugene D. Carusi, for many years an executive of the Department of Justice.

Mr. and Mrs. Dobyns will make their home at 4014 Kansas avenue northwest.

Honor Mme. Diamantopolous

The Ladies of St. Sophia's Greek Church will give a tea this afternoon at the church for Mme. Diamantopolous, wife of the newly arrived Greek Minister.

Writers Attend Fete Honoring Mrs. Fairman

Mrs. Justin Miller, Mrs. James W. Morris and Mrs. Walter George were ranking guests at the literary luncheon given by Mrs. Theodore Tiller in honor of Mrs. Charles Edwin Fairman at the Grafton Hotel yesterday. Mrs. Fairman was presented with the first autographed copy of "Uncle Lancy for President," Ethel Huestón's new novel, which will make its appearance on the bookstands today.

Others in the writing field who were present included Mrs. Justin Miller, author of "The First Blade;" Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. David T. Terry, of Arkansas, author of Courage;" Mrs. Randolph Hopkins, Mrs. Robert Earl Allen, Mrs. Phyllis Moore Gallagher, Mrs. Josephus Trimble, Mrs. Alva Brewer, Miss Margaret Hart and Miss Ruth Jones.

Also attending were Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, Mrs. Eugene Cox, Mrs. Paul Maloney, Mrs. John Kee, Mrs. Dwight Webb, Mrs. Wade Ellis, Mrs. David Lynn, Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Mrs. William Harllee, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Robert M. Miss Myers Wed to Dr. Richwine

Clyde D. Garrett, Her Uncle, Gives Bride in Marriage

Miss Martha Alva Myers became the bride of Dr. Alfred H. Richwine last evening, at 8 o'clock in All Saints Episcopal Church at Chevy Chase Circle, with the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Henry B. Myers. Dr. Richwine is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan M. Richwine. Palms and pastel flowers adorned the church for the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Clyde D. Garrett. She wore a white satin gown cut on simple lines with a sweetheart neckline, and long sleeves with pointed cuffs. Her tulle veil fell the length of her train and was held in place by a seed pearl headdress. A gold cross was her only ornament. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Jane Anita Myers served as maid of honor for her sister. She wore a light blue silk jersey gown with a full skirt, shirred about the hem, sweetheart neckline, and matching hat. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The other attendants were Miss Helen Ridgely, Miss Katherine Ireland, Mrs. Barton W. Richwine and Mrs. Kinsey Jones. Two wore silk jersey gowns of dusty rose and carried Joanna Hill roses, while the other two wore aquamarine gowns and carried talisman roses.

Dr. Barton W. Richwine served as best man and ushers were Dr. Samuel M. Bageant, Dr. Clyde P. Reeves, Kinsey Jones and Laszlo Somer.

Jane Anita Myers Is Maid of Honor For Her Sister

When the couple left on a trip to Florida, the bride wore a navy blue suit trimmed in white and matching accessories. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Mullen, of New York; Mrs. Frank E. Warren, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. E. Hoover Bankard, jr., of Baltimore; Mrs. Merrill Bankard, of Charlottesville, Va.; Maj. and Mrs. E. F. Carey, of Langley Field, Va., and Mrs. T. R. Cornwell, of New York.

Mrs. Richwine attended George Washington University, where she was a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority. Dr. Richwine attended George Washington University and interned at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore.

Mrs. William B. Bankhead Is Guest of Honor At Official Congressional Club Reception

Turnout of New Hats And Suits Heralds Approach of Spring

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The third in the series of official receptions at the Congressional Club was given yesterday afternoon when Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, was guest of honor.

She will also be honored at the next club reception, that is held annually for the Speaker and his wife and which this year will be a birthday party on the evening of April 12, Speaker Bankhead's anniversary.

Yesterday, Mrs. Bankhead and most of the guests, in their spring suits and hats, suggested the approach of the Easter season and looked more like springtime than the chill March winds permitted the weather to be.

Mrs. Bankhead wore a small white hat with an open crown and a soft cluster of white blossoms over her auburn hair. The blouse of her black tailored suit was of sheer pearl gray embroidered linen, with a frill down the front and with it she wore a silver fox scarf. Mrs. Edward E. Burke, wife of the Senator and president of the club, was in a costume of navy blue, the coat piped with dusty pink, matching the rose on her wide navy blue sailor.

Members of Alabama Delegation Pour

Other officers in the receiving line were Mrs. Clarence Hancock, Mrs. Robert Doughton, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. John R. Murdock, Mrs. Robert Rich, and Mrs. Clyde Smith.

The tea table in the new dining room of the clubhouse was arranged with a centerpiece of rose-colored, white and variegated carnations, and was lighted with tall ivory tapers. Members of the Alabama delegation who poured were Mrs. Pete Jarman, who also assisted Mrs. Richard Duncan, of Missouri, chairman of hospitality; Mrs. John Sparkman, Mrs. Frank Boykin, Mrs. George Grant and Mrs. Luther Patrick. Serving with them were Mrs. Otis Bland, of Virginia, and Mrs. David Terry, of Arkansas.

There was music by the Marine Orchestra, which always contributes much to the success of the club's receptions.

The guests included Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, both of whom were among those who arrived toward the end of the afternoon. The receiving line had already broken up, as Mrs. Bankhead was obliged to leave at 5 o'clock.

Mrs. Karl LeCompte, of Iowa, had among her guests Miss Johanna Van Nierop and Dr. Leonie Van Nierop, both of The Hague, who are spending a few weeks in Washington at the Wardman Park Hotel. They came to this country in 1938 and, because of the war, decided to remain for the present. Dr. Van Nierop is the author of works on political economy, and her sister is an expert on old laces in the textile department of the Ryksmuseum.

"At an evening affair," said Miss Van Nierop, "you ask, 'Who is that man with the many decorations, and who is the woman wearing the handsome lace.'" She was greatly impressed with the collection of laces she saw in the Metropolitan Museum, she said, and added that in this country the collections are finer than those abroad. "You have the money to bring them to America."

Other guests of Mrs. LeCompte were Mrs. James Cooney, of Chicago, and Mrs. Jordan Works, of Ottumwa, Iowa.

Mrs. Sumpter Smith Wears Novel Hat

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was there with Mrs. Homer D. Angell, of Portland, Oreg., Mrs. Dunbar's home city.

Among others who attended were Mrs. John H. Bankhead, wife of the Senator from Alabama; Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of the Senator; Mrs. James F. Byrnes, wife of the Senator; Mrs. Brent Spence, Mrs. Harry L. Engelbright, Mrs. Alexander May, Mrs. Jesse Wolcott, who had as her guest Miss Emma Louise Smith; Mrs. Charles Edwin Fairman, who was the guest of Mrs. Terry; Miss Claire Sands, the guest of Mrs. Gronna, and Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, president of the Entre Nous Club.

Many of the women wore flower hats so much in vogue, but none had one just like that of Mrs. Sumpter Smith, who had three natural carnations becomingly arranged on her pert little black turban.

On the first floor, in the small room devoted every Friday to a "store" for the clubhouse fund, members of the Maine delegation were taking orders for large Maine potatoes, which were on display, and were selling pine-tree taffy, made in Bangor, potato milk wafers and spring water. Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, who had arranged the exhibit; Mrs. Wallace H. White, wife of the Senator; Mrs. Clyde Smith and Mrs. E. C. Moran were the "salesgirls." Mrs. Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, also was selling frosted chocolate cookies.

Sets of colored crocheted table mats were being delivered to customers by Mrs. Charles R. Clason, of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Dudley White, of Ohio. They took orders at the first meeting to plan for the clubhouse fund, and have been crocheting at top-speed ever since. They have now made 92—an estimated 150 hours work—and have 40 more to make. Selling them at only 25 cents each, they are doing the work at "sweatshop prices" their husbands tell them—but it's all for the good of the cause.

STORY TELLERS—Tonight the Washington Story League is sponsoring a benefit recital by Mrs. Lyle D. Campbell at the studio of the League of American Pen Women, in the Grafton Hotel. Mrs. Campbell, who is vice president of the National Story League, is widely known for her story programs and as a teacher of the art of story-telling.

There have always been those who told "tall stories" and then there were others who handed down the history of one generation to another by means of stories; who carried news of one section to another in song and story, and entertained their listeners as well.

The ancient art hasn't exactly been revived by the Story League for it has never been lost. Everybody loves stories and the league members not only have their regular monthly meetings through the year to tell stories to each other but also provide entertainment to institutions with their story programs.

Not a week passes but that some group from the league visits a home for the aged, a settlement house or hospital to entertain with stories and songs. Among the places where the story tellers are welcomed as regular visitors are the Home for Aged Women, the Home for Incurables, Friendship House, Neighborhood House, Baptist Home for the Aged, Presbyterian Home for Women and St. Vincent's Home.

ON THE AIR—Tomorrow afternoon, at 2:40, the Economic and Legal Status of Women's Group of the local branch of the American Association of University Women will broadcast a skit over Station WJSV, ill. ...ing the work it is doing among unemployed women over 40.

Mary Robinson is chairman of the group. Others in the skit will include Dr. Anna Marie Ketchum, Floriene Hurley, Jacqueline Pringle, Myrl Rhine, Adelaide Smith, Cordelia Cowan and Gwladys Jones.

LOOKING AHEAD—Two events in the near future, to which the Soroptimist Club is looking forward, are the regular luncheon meeting April 3, at which Maj. Ernest W. Brown, of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club will speak and show movies of the club, and the annual party in charge of the social committee, to be given April 27 at the Lewis Hotel Training School.

ALABAMANS TO MEET—The Alabama College Alumnae Club will meet Thursday at 12:30 at O'Donnell's Restaurant in conjunction with the Alabama Club.

BENEFIT TEA—A silver tea will be given this afternoon in the Willard room of Epiphany Parish House, through the courtesy of the Rev. Dr. ZeBarney Phillips for the benefit of the Mission Chapel of the Redeemer, in Glen Echo, Md.

Speech Class Ends Sessions

Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary, of Oregon, yesterday was the guest of honor at the final session of Mrs. Hugh Butler's Friday class in public speaking, which has been meeting at the League of Republican Women's Clubhouse since January.

Class members and guests met at noon for a luncheon, after which "entertaining speeches" were made. Mrs. W. Wayne Wirgman, as the toastmistress, introduced Mrs. McNary and Mrs. Edward E. Gann, president of the league, who gave short talks on public speaking for women in politics and public life. Mrs. Karl LeCompte, wife of Representative LeCompte, of Iowa, and first-prize winner in the recent congressional class in public speaking, spoke, as did Mrs. Edward Rees, wife of Representative Rees, of Kansas.

Mrs. Wirgman, a student of astrology, instead of saying the usual things as she introduced the speakers, told the audience something of the status of their stars according to their birth dates.

After the speeches, a vote was taken for the one who had improved the most and for the best speaker.

Mrs. William H. Krauser won the first prize for the most improvement, and Mrs. Harriet Rigdon the first prize as the best speaker, with Mrs. Frederick Benton and Mrs. Albert H. Carter as runners-up.

Class members and guests at the luncheon were: Mrs. Benton, Mrs. Clifford Myers, Mrs. William M. Butler, Mrs. Don Lundy, Mrs. Carter, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, Mrs. George L. Hart, Mrs. Krauser, Mrs. French Myers, Mrs. Franz Ridgway, Mrs. Rigdon, Mrs. J. J. Steele, Mrs. John H. Tolan, Mrs. Rees, Mrs. LeCompte, Miss Mary LeCompte, Mrs. Katherine Collins, and Mrs. R. A. Boone.

'Union Now' Discussed

Dr. Wesley M. Gewehr, professor of history at American University, yesterday addressed the Newcomb Club, of Bethesda, at its monthly luncheon meeting, advocating Clarence Streit's plan for a union of democracies as outlined in "Union Now."

Dr. Gewehr asserted the plan for a union of the democracies into which the other nations would come was the solution which promised eventually to end wars. The 13 original colonies which formed the Union from which the United States has grown have proved the practicability of the plan, he said. He pointed out that, with lack of transportation and communication facilities, North Carolina was then more remote from New York than Finland is from there today.

Approximately 70 per cent of this country's trade is with the democracies, he said, and with tariff walls removed it would increase to the mutual benefit of the countries concerned. He did not consider the racial barriers of European countries sufficient reason for deciding that a union would not work.

Mrs. Roger W. Eisinger, chairman of the international relations section which was in charge of the program, introduced the speaker. Mrs. Dorothy Kline presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. William N. Morell. The luncheon was at the Highlands, with Mrs. A. C. Foster, Mrs. William H. Swanger, and Mrs. H. H. Curry as hostesses.

Mrs. Roosevelt and five members of the Cabinet will head the list of speakers. More than 500 women, including national and State officers, district and county vice chairmen, campaign speakers, club presidents and precinct committeewomen, are expected to attend.

Judge Florence E. Allen, of the Sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals, will be the guest of honor at a luncheon of the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia at the Washington Hotel at 1:30 o'clock today.

Judge Allen, who was appointed to her present position in 1934, and who has been mentioned on numerous occasions as a possible nominee to the United States Supreme Court, has recently written a book on the Constitution entitled "This Constitution of Ours."

Mrs. Helena Doocey Reed, assistant trust officer of the Lincoln National Bank, and president of the Women's Bar Association, will preside. Mrs. Grace Brown Stiles, assistant United States attorney and chairman of the program committee, is in charge of the arrangements.

Nazi Invasion of Prague Recalled on Anniversary

Mrs. Waitsill Sharp Tells of Relief Work in Progress Before Woman's Alliance of All Souls' Church

Yesterday—on the anniversary of the Nazi's invasion of Prague—Mrs. Waitsill Sharp, who was there when the Germans entered the capital of the little republic, described present conditions and the work of relief in which she has been engaged there. She spoke at a benefit tea given by the Woman's Alliance of All Souls Church, of which Mrs. John Strother is president, in Pierce Hall.

Mrs. Wilbur Carr, wife of the former United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, introduced Mrs. Sharp and was so moved as she recalled that the day marked the anniversary of the German march that she was unable to discuss it.

Mrs. Sharp, who has been carrying on relief work with her husband, Dr. Sharp, under the Society of Friends, the Unitarian Association and a third relief organization, told how they were besieged at their hotel at 4 in the morning by people trying frantically to get out of the country, when they learned the Germans were coming.

One of the first measures the Germans took, she said, was to put signs on all warehouses, saying the contents belonged to Germany and were not to be touched. Then trucks were backed up and eggs, butter, grain and all other supplies loaded into them and taken off by the Nazis. Gold and museum treasures were similarly taken. Hundreds of Czechs, including young girls, were also sent into Germany to work in the fields and do other hard labor.

In an effort to make it appear the German troops were welcomed in Prague, pictures were taken of a handful of Germans who went out to greet them, waving flags. In order to show that they were being enthusiastically greeted all along the street, she saw the same Germans moved down a block or two and rephotographed, waving their flags, she said.

The universities have been closed and are not to be opened again, according to Mrs. Sharp. The schools have been supplied with Nazi textbooks and only censored sermons may be preached in the churches. An Easter sermon was sent back last year with a reference to the Resurrection blue-pencilled.

Stories circulated as German propaganda about Czech "atrocities" are absolutely without foundation, said Mrs. Sharp. She paid tribute to the courage and restraint of the Czechs under the burden of German rule and praised their spirit.

Germans who believed propaganda stories to the effect that German children had been killed by the Czechs came over to put wreaths on the children's graves but found the children in school, she said.

The Czech Red Cross has been disbanded and replaced by the German Red Cross, which functions under military regulations.

There is still much that can be done to relieve the suffering of the people, however, according to Mrs. Sharp, and her purpose in this country now is to raise funds for such relief as can be given. She and her husband have only recently arrived from Czecho-Slovakia.

She will speak Sunday before Mrs. U. G. B. Pierce's Sunday school class. Mrs. Ruth Staples' group of young people yesterday presented a gift of $25 for the work and approximately $50 was contributed at the tea.

Chafing Dish Supper Planned By Arts Club

An informal fireside get-together is planned by the Arts Club after the chafing-dish supper tomorrow night. Impromptu talks will be given by the members about their most interesting experiences.

Mrs. Edwin H. Etz, directing the entertainment, has announced that among those who will speak briefly is Miss Kathleen Wheeler, whose chat will be on early pottery work in England. Mrs. Charles Bittinger will read some old letters from Gen. Birney, who was among the first to have visions of an art club for Washington. "Zigzagging Home From Europe in the Fall of '39" will be Miss Margaret Tolson's topic. Other club members who have been asked to talk are Dr. Charles Edward Russell, Miss Mary A. Cryder, Paul Murphy, Miss Julia Gardiner, Mrs. Susan B. Chase and Miss Clara Saunders. Miss C. Virginia Diedel and Miss Mary Amber Cramer will be hostesses.

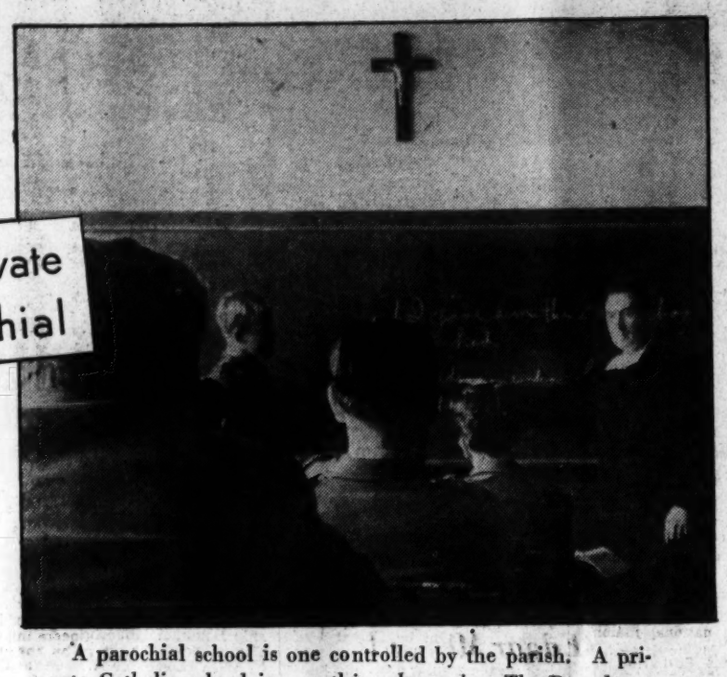
See how many fields of interest the Sunday Post covers for you

Schools: Private and Parochial

Some two thousand students come to Washington each year to attend private schools here. More thousands of Washington youngsters go to these schools. What do they get from a private school that a public school doesn't give? How do teaching methods differ? The Post brings you the picture story of Washington's private schools in its Sunday "Our Town in Pictures" section.



A parochial school is one controlled by the parish. A private Catholic school is something else again. The Post shows you both types of Catholic schools in this Sunday' picture section. You'll be able to compare the entire field of education outside the public school field with what has already been shown you in The Post's previous picture sections on the Washington public schools.

Easter: Bonnets and Breakfasts

Frills, feathers, fruits and flowers. That's the traditional Easter morning hat, for you—very feminine. In sharp contrast is the classic felt, the casual sport or tailored hat. Washington women will find both in style this spring, will have a choice between the two in selecting the Easter bonnet. Look in Sunday's Post for two pages, with pictures, about these Easter hats.

Breakfast may mean coffee and toast on other mornings, but an important breakfast on Easter morning is traditional in the Capital. In Sunday's Post Martha Ellyn tells you about the White House breakfast and the preferences of the various present occupants of the White House. There will also be suggestions from Mrs. Paul McNutt and Mrs. Claude Pepper.

Secret War; Sad Peace

No pictures and little news have come out of Czechoslovakia since the Nazis moved in. But secret bands of unconquered men are still working bitterly against the invaders; killing Nazi police, spreading anti-Nazi propaganda, increasing the ranks of their hidden army. INS war correspondent Chaplin brings you the story in Sunday's Post—first hand information from men actually operating an "underground railway" through the Alps.

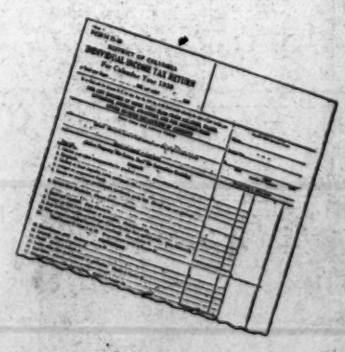
There's no such thing as a bad peace, said Mark Twain. But the Finnish-Russian peace is at least a sad one, for Finns and Allies both. With the Western Front deadlocked, with the Northeast Front now closed, will the next move be aerial blitzkrieg or a new front opening elsewhere? In the Sunday Post's war review, Edw. T. Folliard shows you the possibilities.

Another Martha as First Lady?

In another of her articles on wives of Presidential possibilities, Hope Ridings Miller brings you the story of dynamic Martha Taft. An active political speaker in her husband's cause, Mrs. Taft is considered one of his greatest assets. This word picture in Sunday's Post will introduce you to one of Washington's most interesting women.

A New Home for the Eastern Star

The first Washington chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star was formed in 1892. Then the members met in a tiny hall in the "country"—Brightwood. Now, with 40 chapters and 10,500 members, Washington's Eastern Star is building a palatial home on Meridian Hill. Sunday's Post brings you the history and development of this important women's organization, in an article by Lucie Giddens.



What About D. C. Income Tax?

Up to 1937 Washington was considered a tax haven. Then Congress started experimenting with D. C. taxes and the situation here today is the most muddled in America. Will there continue to be a D. C. income tax? What are the complications? Will the sales tax be substituted? Post reporter Secrest makes it all clear for taxpayers in his Sunday article.

Two Groups Oppose Racing Here

3d Citizen Unit Disapproves Bill To Extend Free Schooling

Two citizens' associations last night voiced opposition to horse racing in the District, while a third group voted unanimously to oppose Senator Tydings' bill to extend the law permitting nonresident children to attend District schools free.

The appointments of David A. Pine as justice-designate of the District Court, and Edward M. Curran as district attorney received special expressions of approval.

Reports of the meetings follow:

Takoma Park

The Takoma Park Citizens Association last night went on record as opposed to horse racing in the District on the ground that "it will bring into Washington hangers-on who will take more money out of the city than they bring in." The group met at the Takoma Park Library, Fifth and Cedar streets northwest.

Satisfaction was expressed with the appointment of David A. Pine as justice-designate of the District Court and Edward M. Curran's appointment as district attorney.

The group voted to ask retention of the Whittier Street Playground.

A sum to be set aside for the use of persons unable to provide for defense counsel in the courts was requested. Approval of the work of Thomas L. Lodge as chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was expressed.

Glover Park

Horse racing in the District was opposed by the Glover Park Citizens Association at a meeting last night at the Industrial Home School, Thirty-seventh street and Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Residents of a community should have a voice in the question of liquor store licensing, the association voted. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board should not allow liquor stores in the vicinity of schools and churches, it was maintained.

Other resolutions adopted included a request for investigation of the small loan business in the District and opposition to a District gas tax.

Public School Association

The District Public School Association last night by unanimous vote opposed the bill introduced in Congress by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, which would extend the law permitting nonresident children to attend District schools.

Under the present setup all children of parents who work in the District or whose fathers are in any of the Federal services and stationed outside of the Capital are entitled to free education here. Under Senator Tydings' amendment, according to school officials' interpretation, any person who assumes the obligations of a parent, legally or informally, and meets the other qualifications may send children without charge to District schools.

In another resolution, the association indorsed the proposal of allied organizations that an item be included in the public school budget to finance 110 lectures on narcotics by medical authorities. George W. Hodgkins, first vice president, presided.

Phi Sigma Kappa Dinner Celebrates 67th Anniversary

Nearly 150 members of Phi Sigma Kappa dined at the Mayflower Hotel last night in celebration of the sixty-seventh anniversary of the fraternity's founding. Lambda Chapter at George Washington University was host.

Edgar T. Fell, Assistant Attorney General, urged making Lambda Chapter into the national chapter of the fraternity. Toastmaster was Representative McLean (Republican), of New Jersey.

Guests included Prof. DeWitt Bennett, of George Washington University; Dr. Richard B. Castell, staff surgeon at George Washington Hospital; Darrell T. Lane, assistant general counsel of the Social Security Board, and Edwin M. Terrell, president of Lambda Chapter.

District Turns Green Today For St. Patrick Celebrations

Parties and Dinners to Honor Patron Saint of Emerald Isle Moved Up When Palm Sunday Falls on March 17

The Irish, who like all the rest of us, had their Thanksgiving Day advanced last fall, have themselves moved up their own day of days. Today they will celebrate St. Patrick's Day today—because tomorrow, March 17, is Sunday, Palm Sunday at that.

Thousands of the Emerald Isle's sons and daughters—with many whose ancestors never saw Erin—will be wearing the green. And tonight there'll be a lilt of Irish laughter accompanying gay dance music as celebrants throughout the city honor the man who rid Ireland of snakes (according to legend) and heathenism (according to history.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, who is Irish, will join in the festivities arranged at the Mayflower Hotel by the Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. He will speak there on the virtues of the shamrock, which he undoubtedly will be wearing.

Representative Sasscer, of Maryland, who says he isn't a bit Irish, will be at another Mayflower celebration. He is scheduled to address the Ancient Order of Hibernians and its Ladies' Auxilary at an annual banquet.

At the Friendly Sons' dinner more than 250 celebrants are expected. In addition to Postmaster Farley's address, which is titled "The Shamrock Under the Stars and Stripes," there will be a play, "The Dublin Terror."

Dr. H. J. Crosson, president of the society, will preside. The Very Rev. Arthur O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, will offer the invocation and the Rev. Oliver Hart, rector of St. John's Church, will give the benediction.

John F. Crosby, former Assistant Attorney General, will respond to the toast, "The Day We Celebrate." Farley's remarks will be carried over an N. B. C. network.

"The Dublin Terror" was written by Dennis E. Connell and Thomas W. Brahany.

Other speakers at the Ancient Order of Hibernians dinner will be Francis J. Rafferty, president of the Commodore John Barry Division, A. O. H., and Miss Mary E. Cleary, District president of the Ladies' Auxiliary. A dance will follow the banquet.

Members of the order and its auxiliary will attend a special vesper service at St. Patrick's Church at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Irish War Veterans, D. C. Post, No. 17, will place wreaths at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the John Barry statue in Franklin Park this afternoon. Tonight the veterans will frolic at a dance at the Annapolis Hotel.

Representative O'Brien, of New York, will speak at the Barry statue ceremonies, which will be opened by G. L. Cassiday, national junior vice commander.

Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, American Legion, will hold its party tonight at the Washington Hotel. Dancing will begin at 10 o'clock.

Meanwhile, the United Irish Club of Washington will be holding its annual St. Patrick's dance at the Carlton Hotel. There will be two orchestras, one playing Irish music exclusively.

Still another dance on tonight's calendar is that of the Interior Department Recreation Association, to be held at the Cairo Hotel.

Washington veterans of the Rainbow Division will gather at the Capitol Park Hotel at 7 p. m. to hear Turk Edwards and William Young, Washington Redskin football stars, and swap St. Patrick's Day reminiscences. James E. Witherite, president of the veterans' group, will preside.

Rev. P. F. O'Gorman Succumbs at 72 In Hospital

The Rev. Patrick F. O'Gorman, 72, a member of the faculty of Georgetown Preparatory School for nearly ten years and for 55 years a member of the Society of Jesus, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital.

Father O'Gorman first taught classics at Georgetown University and later was dean of studies at the College of Saint Francis Xavier and headmaster and dean of studies of the Loyola School in New York. He later was rector of St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia. Since 1930 he has been prefect of studies at Georgetown Preparatory School, Garrett Park, Md.

Requiem mass will be said in the school chapel at 9 a. m. Monday.

Bulow Calls Open Inquiry On Merit Bill

Quota Amendment, WPA Exemption Bring Decision For Senate Hearing

A Senate inquiry into controversial amendments to the Ramspeck civil service extension bill was promised yesterday by Chairman Bulow of the Senate Civil Service Committee.

Senator Bulow said the committee had decided in an executive session to hold open hearings on the measure, and they will meet Wednesday morning to map plans for the inquiry.

Quota Provision at Issue

Among the main provisions of the bill upon which the Senate committee members want more information, said Senator Bulow, are:

The Nichols - Keller amendment to bar from blanketing into the civil service any employes from States whose quotas are filled, or in excess.

A provision excluding "any positions in or connected with the Work Projects Administration" from the covering-in process.

The cost of blanketing in an estimated 200,000 Government employes, and of extending the grade and salary classification to some 396,000 positions.

"Impossible," Says Commission

The decision to open hearings by the full Senate committee was reached after receipt earlier in the week of a report from the Civil Service Commission. It declared administration of the Ramspeck bill would be "impossible" with the Nichols-Keller amendment, and suggested that the provision on WPA positions be clarified.

The Civil Service Commission estimated it would cost $400,500 to blanket in 200,000 persons. Extending the classification act, the commission estimated, would increase the Government's pay roll $14,000,000 annually and require a $500,000 expenditure by the commission. These costs, the report said, would bring increased efficiency in the public service, and be "an investment, not an expense."

Edgar Morris Is Appointed Head Of D. C. Roll Call

Edgar Morris, chairman of the Greater National Capital Committee and past president of the Washington Board of Trade, has accepted general chairmanship of the annual District Red Cross Roll Call, Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the district chapter, announced yesterday.

MORRIS

Morris has headed the Roll Call committee for the last two years. In making the announcement, Gen. Keefer pointed out that each year's membership has exceeded that of former years, with an "alltime high" being reached last year. Gen. Keefer said that Morris' efforts this year will be devoted to reenrolling last year's 125,024 members as well as adding many new members.

In accepting the chairmanship, Morris said that the Red Cross "is the greatest humanitarian organization in the world today, meeting human crises as they occur, carrying the generosity of the world to the needy."

Air Business Will Double, CAA Chief Says

Production, Travel Gains by 1942 Pictured to Engineers

Clinton M. Hester, Civil Aeronautics Authority administrator, in an address before the Nation's leading aviation experts last night predicted that in two years commercial planes production, passenger traffic and civilian pilots would be doubled.

He told 300 persons attending the national aeronautic meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers in the Washington Hotel that by the end of 1942 the United States would have 100,000 civilian pilots, civil aircraft production would rise to 800-900 a month, and passenger traffic would increase to 4,000,000.

Safety Record Praised

Hester praised the "remarkable safety record" of air travel and revealed that should no accident occur by March 26, a full year will have passed without an accident.

Despite the advance made by aviation in this country, Hester pointed out, the United States has within its continental borders only 7.2 per cent of the world's airlines against 39.7 per cent of the world's railroad mileage and 53 per cent of its paved highways.

Arthur Nutt, president of the society, urged the engineers to help in solving the employment problem so that as few as possible will have to be dismissed when the "war bubble" bursts.

Browne Gets Medal

The Wright Brothers Medal was presented to K. A. Browne, project engineer with Wright Aeronautic Corporation, for his paper in 1939 on engine mounting. L. W. Hives and F. L. Smith, engineers with Rolls Royce in England, were awarded the Manly Memorial Medal for their studies of liquid cooled engines.

The conference during the past two days heard papers on fuel tanks, spark ignition, light plane engines and passenger comfort. Yesterday afternoon the engineers made an inspection trip to the Bureau of Standards.

Educators to Open Parley Today

A committee of educators, appointed by the American Youth Commission to study possible changes in secondary school programs, will open a three-day conference today at the Mayflower Hotel.

The committee, headed by Dr. Charles H. Judd, director of the education program of the National Youth Administration, will report to the commission. Besides Dr. Judd, it includes:

George H. Brigss, Columbia University; Will French, Columbia University; Ben G. Graham, superintendent of schools, Pittsburgh; Charles A. Prosser, Dunwoodie Institute, Minneapolis; Edwin A. Lee, Columbia University; Layton S. Hawkins, chief United States Office of Education; Francis T. Spaulding, Harvard University; Alexander J. Stoddard, Philadelphia superintendent of schools; George D. Strayer, Columbia University; Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, Atlanta, Ga.; Ralph Tyler, University of Chicago; Oscar Oranger, principal, Haverford Township High School, Upper Derby, Pa.

Stratosphere Flight Will Be Described

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15.—Leonard C. Roy, of the editorial staff of the National Geographic Society, will give a talk to students, parents and friends of the Country Home School in the auditorium of Monroe Hall at Mary Washington College at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. He will describe the flight of the stratosphere balloon, "Explorer II," which in 1935 attained the highest altitude ever achieved by man.

D. C. Police Disprove Youth's Confession of Sirkis Slaying

A 20-year-old colored youth was saved from a possible death sentence last night by detectives who were successful in a two-day attempt to disprove his signed confession to the holdup slaying of Herman Sirkis, 42-year-old liquor store proprietor.

Dissatisfied with the youth's story which was described as "too good," homicide squad members managed to obtain a second confession—admitting the first statement to be false. The youth was grilled from Tuesday until yesterday.

Arrested Tuesday night by Eleventh Precinct Policemen B. K. Miller and C. D. Adams, the suspect, who gave his name as Andrew Ashton, explained he thought "he could get in good with the cops" with the confession. He was arrested, it was said, for investigation into a housebreaking in the Eleventh Precinct.

Held for Investigation

No charges had been placed against him last night, but he was still held for investigation.

Homicide squad detectives said they could hardly believe their ears after listening to Ashton's story. He claimed he was the lookout for the two colored men who fired a bullet into Sirkis' heart at the whisky store, 4824 Deane avenue northeast, February 26.

He described and identified the two gunmen, told the direction they fled and even reported the conversation between the bandits and Sirkis.

When he related the conversation, detectives stated, there was a flaw. How, they asked themselves, could he hear what was said inside the store if he were outside and the door was shut?

Talk With Eye-Witnesses

It was this point which broke down the story and brought about an explanation.

Ashton, it was stated, lived in Deanewood and was at the liquor store shortly after the shooting. He was friendly with Calvin Pendleton, eye-witness to the murder, and obtained a conclusive account from continued conversation with the witness about the case.

Randolph-Macon Alumnae Association presents Lucile Barrow Turner in Negro spirituals and interpretations Friday night in the Willard Hotel ballroom.

Officially, it was the student loan fund of the Randolph-Macon Alumnae Association that benefited by the program given last evening by Lucile Barrow Turner in the Willard Hotel ballroom, but the incalculable esthetic benefits belonged to the auditors. To call Mrs. Turner an impersonator, a character actress or a singer would be to single out one of the elements that blend in her dramatic interpretations. She has one of the most expressive voices I have ever heard, a voice contralto in its natural timbre but infinitely variant in its inflections and emotional shades. Her use of it is not that of the singer intent upon artistic finesse but that of the sincere portrayer of types.

Her reproductions of Negro intonations are faultless in their precision, particularly in those sliding tones which cannot be set down in musical notation. Lawrence Tibbett could greatly improve one of his favorite songs, "Shortnin' Bread," by listening carefully to Mrs. Turner's reading, which abounds in nuances of pitch and subtle changes of key. Her method of singing spirituals is her own, and reveals how sadly these songs are distorted by arrangers and harmonizers.

Mrs. Turner's program ran the gamut from carefree humor to stark tragedy, from chuckling gayety to exalted fervor. Her own narrative songs evoked sharp pictures of Mississippi Steam Line, Uncle Robert and the Train, Full of the Moon, One-Arm Tom, When the Stars Fell and Crap-Shooting Sinner. She had her auditors breathlessly intent with her dramatic sketches of Lilly Belle and Lucy.

It was in the spirituals, however, and in her delivery of James Weldon Johnson's "The Creation" that she disclosed the full intensity of her projective power. For the listener those were moments impressive in their fusion of naivete and dignity, of rhapsodic chant and whole-souled sincerity.

Court Approves Park Savings Liquidation Plan

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, of the District Court, approved the $200,000 Park Savings Bank liquidation plan yesterday after considering for four hours the protest of a lone depositor against the fee allowed a depositors' committee.

Of nearly 10,000 depositors who were invited to state their objections to the report of Special Master James C. Wilkes, only Mrs. Cora G. Windmuller appeared at the hearing yesterday. Mrs. Windmuller, who lives at 3165 Eighteenth street northwest and teaches at the Alice Deal Junior High School, objected to an allotment of $6,500 for the depositors' committee. She contended that there never was any agreement to pay the committee.

Will Reveals Foundation Left By Raymond Moore

A foundation to promote music, drama, the fine arts and horticulture is provided in the will of Raymond Moore, a former Washingtonian who pioneered in the summer theater movement and produced plays on Broadway, it was revealed yesterday in the testament filed at Barnstable, Mass.

Mr. Moore died last Saturday at the age of 42. He was founder of the Cape Playhouse and Cape Cinema, at Dennis, Mass., on Cape Cod. His will directs that the estate, the value of which was not estimated, be set up in a trust, and that the trustees establish the Raymond Moore Foundation.

Mr. Moore directed a Baltimore stock company for several years, and on Broadway produced "Ladies of Creation," "Berlin," "Strange Orchestra," and "Whatever Possessed Her." Mr. Moore's first wife was the late Mrs. Edna Bradley Tweedley, lumber heiress. He was divorced from his second wife last year, a year after their marriage.

2 Policemen To Appeal Bribe Ruling

Trial Board Finds Brodie and Murray Guilty; Department Suspends Both

Pronounced guilty of accepting a bribe and of prejudicial conduct by a special trial board, and suspended from the force by their superiors, Policemen Hubert E. Brodie and Leo Murray last night prepared to appeal the trial board's verdict. It recommended their dismissal from the Police Department.

To appeal to the Board of District Commissioners was said to be the only road open to the former detective sergeants.

Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the District's Tax Appeal Board and chairman of the trial board, announced the decision about an hour after the latter reconvened for deliberation at 10:15 a. m. Other members of the board were Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, member of the ABC Board, and Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

The board exonerated the defendants on one count, that of neglect of duty.

James A. O'Shea, defense attorney, said he was shocked by the board's decision and said he would appeal. Under rules laid down by the police manual, he has five days in which to act.

Brodie and Murray were stripped of their equipment—their badges and guns—by their commanding officers at their homes yesterday afternoon. Capt. Lloyd Kelley, Eighth Precinct, went to Brodie's home at 10 Grant circle northwest, and Capt. Hugh Groves, Eleventh Precinct, did likewise at Murray's residence, 1311 S street southeast.

The suspension will remain in effect pending the appeal, Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, executive officer, asserted.

Morgan forwarded the board's findings to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, for his approval. The police chief said he will make his recommendation, either approving or disapproving the decision, to the Commissioners, who have the power to reverse the trial board's ruling.

Brody and Murray were found guilty of accepting a bribe from Carl T. Updyke, convicted gambler, in front of 905½ G street northwest, October 14 and of "conduct prejudicial to the reputation, good order and discipline of the force," in connection with the bribe.

Police Outscore G. W. Unit in Test Of Intelligence

The Metropolitan Police Department yesterday outsmarted George Washington University.

Word arrived from Evanston, Ill., that 22 policemen attending the Northwestern University Traffic Institute, including Capt. Arthur Miller, of the District force, achieved a median score of 162 in the Army Alpha intelligence test.

Dr. George W. Crane, psychologist who administered the test, said the bluecoats made the highest median score he has ever encountered. Other groups he has tested, he said, include day and evening psychology classes at George Washington University.

John Garfield Makes Bad Boy Likable Chap

'Castle on Hudson' Costars Ann Sheridan; Varied Stage Bill

It's a getaway for John Garfield at both the beginning and end of "Castle on the Hudson." He's skipping from a bank robbery as the picture opens, making a getaway into eternity at the fadeout. In between, he's mostly living a simple but highly disturbed life at his "Castle on the Hudson," which, as you've probably guessed by now, is that famous rest home better known as Sing Sing.

Garfield's current bad boy role is a little meaner, brasher, more egotistic than his previous portrayals. It speaks worlds for his ability that he is able to make audiences like and sympathize with these gutter-snipes grown into gangsters, and this without any varnish or prettying up of essential character. There's no denying that the smoky-eyed one has an awful lot on the ball.

But fully equal to Garfield's performance is that of Burgess Meredith in a smaller part. You will not forget the horrifying scene of Meredith's pursuit and suicide in the attempted prison break, packed with the essence of modern tragedy. It is a Meredith-Garfield picture so far as the acting honors go.

Direction of the picture is on the tommy-gun order, starting off with a blast, never running out of ammunition. Something (usually unpleasant) is happening all the time. As to the picture's gloomy end, there'll be disagreement. It is logical and from the showman's viewpoint, it gives Garfield a chance to be a hero. But it gets pretty depressing to see anyone, even a criminal, kicked all over the place and finally right into the electric chair. You won't get over being sad about it all until the Roxyettes kick up their heels a few times.

Harvard should retract some of its chatter about Ann Sheridan after her performance in "Castle on the Hudson." She makes rather a nice chore of being a gangster's moll. Ditto for Pat O'Brien as the warden, though he gets a little smug occasionally.

There are two color shorts, one about Alaska and the other dealing with the life of Teddy Roosevelt. The news reel is enlivened by shots of the Byrd expedition and some very sassy penguins.

The stage show is a bit on the Irish side this week with the Roxyettes doing a Killarney jig and Wilson Lane singing "Irish Eyes." Marc Ballero impersonates dozens of notables, ranging from Lionel Barrymore to Joe E. Brown, winds up with a honey of an impression of the sounds of New York Harbor. The dancing Duffins offer a Czechoslovakian doll dance. The Three Freshmen are acrobats who've also graduated into the comedian class. The Earle orchestra goes off the deep end this week with a "jam session" overture that boils right over the top. MARY HARRIS.

Columbia

"Broadway Melody of 1940" danced its way back to F street and the Columbia Theater yesterday. With Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell starred and with George Murphy tapping them to the last line, dance is the word.

Cole Porter's music and lyrics afford the king, queen and challenger of contemporary dancedom elegant opportunities for the rhythm and tapping which is so exclusively theirs. The popular composer has included his "Begin the Beguine" in the film, thus bringing about one of the most speedy and impressive dance routines in many a musical.

The story, frankly, isn't much, but then it isn't supposed to do anything more than to bring boy and girl together and afford Frank Morgan the reason for being as perplexed as only Frank Morgan can be.

But it is when Fred Astaire is nonchalantly improvising some steps, when Powell is tapping so enthusiastically, when Murphy is being the composite of all song and dance men that "Broadway Melody of 1940" is at its dancing best.

Quadruple-Threat

Albert Dekker, who has the title role in "Dr. Cyclops," played four roles in the Theater Guild's production of "Marco's Millions," taking the parts of a Chinese of 40, a Persian of 30, a Chinese of 60, and an Italian priest of 80. Dekker was 21.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Another Historical Document Holds Screen at Loew's Palace Theater

Spencer Tracy Leads Cast in Filmed 'Northwest Passage;' Short Reels Amusing

The "easy livers" of the present era might learn a valuable lesson in hardihood from even a casual scrutiny of "Northwest Passage," which yesterday succeeded "Gone With the Wind" on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater.

BELL

Based on Book I of the Kenneth Roberts novel, dealing with the heroic exploits of Rogers' Rangers, 'way back there in the prerevolutionary days of 1759, this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Technicolor production is an epic of the indomitable courage that brought a mighty nation out of a wilderness. It is not a gently pleasant picture to contemplate. It is dedicated to those grim aspects of primitive living, when survival was a question of out-maneuvering and out-butchering the other fellow. The other fellow usually was a predatory Redskin, although the British and the French, wrestling for command of a continent, also have their part in the action.

While preponderantly masculine in personnel and action, "Northwest Passage" is not without its occasional moments of the more limpid charm of romance. Ruth Hussey and Isabel Jewel, in a minor capacity, see to that. But, in the large view, this deeply inspiring subject is pretty bitter business. Starting out 140 strong, Rogers' Rangers undertake a long trek to Canada to avenge the depredations of the Indians who have scalped and slaughtered so many of their fellows. The slow grind of that mighty hike, with all of its attendant sacrifices and tragedies, brings into new light the intrepid spirit of the men who laid the foundation of American greatness.

There is a bit of monotony in the tedious progress of the heroic expedition. Then again, there are intervals of thrilling suspense. The climax of the picture, reached when the Rangers arrive at their destinations and annihilate the village of their Indian enemies, is one of tremendous effectiveness. In lesser degree, the Rangers' outwitting of the French navy, their fording of a stream by means of a "human bridge" and all of the hardships they underwent in the singleness of their purpose, make for the consummation of an historical chronicle that need take second rank to none.

There is something of the flavor of "Drums Along the Mohawk" in "Northwest Passage." The staunchness of its Americanism is the same. The sacrifices of its principal characters are as great, if not greater. The spectacle of triumphant fortitude is infinitely magnified.

In both instances the judicious use of Technicolor photography has had a vast amount to do with the accomplished result. Technicolor now has come to be accepted as a matter of course. Its mechanical perfection no longer is questioned. Just as was the case in "Drums Along the Mohawk," so is it also true that in "Northwest Passage" the scenes in natural color—and they are in natural color—add magnificently to the realist effect of a film that deals heroically with an heroic period in history.

Spencer Tracy, in the role of Maj. Robert Rogers; Robert Young and Walter Brenna are the keystones of the cast. They are supported by a long list of others who contribute generously to the impressiveness of a distinctly "red meat" drama.

The short-reels on the new bill at the Palace, happily, are on the gay side. Pete Smith, that droll off-screen commentator, has his usual fun with "What's Your I. Q.?" and the cartoon comedy, "Pussy gets the Boots," quite obviously, is nothing to take seriously.

The excellent bill—if you like your major drama basted with gore—is completed by a new issue of the "News of the Day."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 14.

DISCOVERY: Marc Connelly, who is vacationing here from Hollywood, listened to a long, pointless story related by Dave Chasen, the restaurateur who once had been Joe Cook's stooge . . . Chasen persisted in telling that story, despite the yawns of his audience. . . . When it was finished, Connelly told him: "Dave, Curie hit upon radium, someone else hit upon helium—and you've hit upon tedium."

ENCOURAGEMENT: Arthur Kober, whose "Having Wonderful Time" was produced by Connelly, wrote to Marc and told him of the travail through which he's going, before finishing his new play . . . Connelly wrote a letter of wise counsel, in which he assured Arthur that no successful playwright ever completed his job without suffering mental torment and feeling his guts being torn away, with a companion sensation of worms turning in his stomach . . . "But after it's done and is a hit, that all goes away and you're happy again," Connelly concluded. "P. S.: Please make a photostat of this letter and send it to me. I need it—because I'm finishing my new play, and feel exactly the way you do."

AID: Ben Lyon and his wife, Bebe Daniels, have been making personal appearances in England for the past few years. Their material is written by Mort Lewis, the New York script writer . . . Last week Lyon wrote to Lewis, asked for more material, and explained that he couldn't pay for it now—because the British government wasn't permitting any resident to send money out of the country, except where it was needed for the support of a child or parent . . . Lewis cabled his answer: "Dear Pop: Am Broke and Hungry. Please Send Dough—Your Son, Mort."

PROOF: The New York courts soon will be asked to determine the cause of the sinking of the Athenia—the vessel which the British claim was sunk by Germany, and which Germany claims was sunk by the British . . . Five Finnish subjects, who were passengers on the Athenia when it was sunk, are preparing a suit against the Cunard White Star Line—for damages sustained when all their belongings went down with the torpedoed ship . . . Cunard will be required to prove, to make their defense tenable, that the torpedo was a German one.

ENTERPRISE: A group of debutantes and their glamour-boy escorts—all children of wealthy parents, hold weekly meetings at the Beachcomber, on Sunday afternoons . . . These rich youngsters—including Billy Livingston, Barbara Smith, Blaine Faber and Josephine Johnson—have discovered a new form of excitement. They're producing a show in which they'll all appear. It will be called "For The Love of Money."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, March 15.

I'm the copy girl. I've come to Hedda Hopper's office, as I have every morning for over a year, to pick up this column. I look forward to this daily visit. But today she isn't here. I'm alone in her office. She is on the Paramount lot working on the Aldrich Family picture.

HOPPER

Usually when I come here, there's a bustle that makes me think I'm watching a lot of bees swarming around a hive. Miss Hopper has a phone in one hand, listening to some big movie mogul's inside story—and with the other hand she's writing a note to one of her secretaries to go get that story she made on the dictaphne last night. And her secretary is beating out an expert rhythm on the typewriter as her eyes fly over a series of hieroglyphics that mean nothing to anyone except her and Miss Hopper. They're really some big story about a new production.

And I just wait, taking this all in, and watching Miss Hopper—fascinated—as she does a thousand things at once.

Then, the column finished, Miss Hopper reaches for the copy before her secretary can yank it out of the typewriter. She reads it aloud, makes last-minute corrections, then suddenly pushes it toward me, and says, "There, dear, there it is; come, come—no time to lose!" But her voice isn't commanding, it's pleasant.

Well, as I told you, that's the way it usually is. But today I'm in that same office—waiting—and it's too quiet. I'm looking about her sanctum sanctorum really for the first time.

As I go out the door, I miss her laughing voice calling after me, "Don't forget to put in the missing commas and periods, and if there're any verbs missing, call me up."

Beery Stars In War Film At the Capitol

Blackstone Steals Bill With Baffling Magic; Supplementaries Score

By Richard L. Coe.

Had the Capitol Theater flown off to Mount Ararat yesterday afternoon, we would have nodded, like the philosophical parrot of that story, and said, "Marvelous, simply marvelous." After Blackstone had erased all trace of, among other things, a horse and a Hindu atop of a rope, we were prepared for any pretty cataclysm 1940's first "all-the-show-in-one" magician might toss our way. The novel magico's stage tricks are paired on the Capitol's new bill with Wallace Beery in "The Man From Dakota," a very grade Beery film.

Blackstone's now-you-see-it-now-you-don't workout is an elegant variation from the more easy to predict routine revues. To be sure, there are girls, the tall and the short of them, and they, too, do all sorts of weird things which would be unnerving about the old homestead.

Mop-haired, white-tousled Blackstone suspends one of them in the air, passes hoops above, below, around her. Once he makes you think he's in one costume while he is actually in another. When he takes a member of the audience on stage to hold his arm, you are ready to lay even money that the patron will be seen no more.

"The Man From Dakota" seems unable to make up its mind what it is. A screen play by Laurence Stallings, adapted from the Civil War story by Civil War Expert MacKinlay Kantor, it has definite possibilities, sometimes achieved as a tense, suspenseful melodrama. However, the coy Master Beery inevitably softens things up to the sticky point; there are shots of Beery swigging wood alcohol, of Beery cutting boots to fit his whale-boat feet, of Beery muttering about his overdue pay every time you wish the camera to be showing you what is going on almost anywhere else.

It concerns the interesting escape of two Union soldiers from the Confederate prisons and the happenstance which made it possible for our heroes to learn the all-important plans of the enemy. Their trip is full of anxiety and escapades that are frequently well sustained. John Howard, Dolores Del Rio and Donald Meek play the other pivotal roles acceptably. As for Master Beery, you either like him or not. In one of his more recent films, "Thunder Afloat," you may recall that he won the World War for the Allies; in "The Man From Dakota" the cute fellow wins the War Between the States.

The Capitol is continuing the engagement of song-organizer Art Brown, another novel performer. This week he has the audience singing to pictures and in a brogue. Sam Jack Kaufman leads the orchestra in a happy genuflection to the patron saint of Eire. But I is Blackstone who should lead you to the Capitol.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

LOUELLA PARSONS

By her side was her friend, Gaylord Hauser, and I would not have known they were back if I hadn't glimpsed them dining at a small restaurant. Garbo really saw New York for the first time. She not only went to night clubs, but she had tea with Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at the famous Vanderbilt mansion on Fifth avenue. She went to Florida and was much entertained there by socialites, flew to Nassau and now she's back ready to talk pictures to M-G-M.

So far no story has been selected other than "Madame Curie," which is still in the discussing stage. Garbo is not married—that, I get right from headquarters but neither she nor her diet specialist are denying prospects of a coming marriage and I want to say now that I said so first. In fact, I was the first one to announce that she and Hauser were thataway.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Charles Butterworth's big moment is Mrs. Lois Earle, Pasadena socialite, and no one will be surprised if they head toward the altar; Randy Scott and Natalie Draper are still flourishing romantically, in spite of rumors to the contrary; Alice Faye was at Ciro's again with Sandy Cummings, who seems to be her favorite escort; here's a new and interesting twosome — Steffi Duna and Dennis O'Keefe; Sonja Henie has rented a house in Honolulu. She likes the tropical clime that well; Ruth Foran, the former Mrs. Dick, and Sy Bartlett a brown derby twosome; the Jack Warners have taken the Tom Douglas house in Palm Springs, where they are getting lots of rest; Alex D'Arcy, who carried the torch for Arlen Whelan, is consoling himself with Joan Weber, a nonprofessional from Long Beach. They have been dining at Sardi's two nights in succession.

Claire Windsor received more applause than any of the current stars at the opening of the Florentine Gardens. And many top names were there, too.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Nats Outhit Indians, But Lose, 2-0, in Near Gale

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, MARCH 16, 1940 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Fort Myers, Fla., March 15.—Here in the camp of the Cleveland Indians the folks are in violent disagreement with the popular picture of the 1940 American League pennant race. They don't identify that team in hot pursuit of the Yankees as the Boston Red Sox. They're positive the Indians are at least the second-best club in the league.

POVICH

The optimism in the camp of the Indians is so thick that it could be crated and shipped to the Allies as a tank barrier. Manager Oscar Vitt is disporting himself with an airy confidence that might be expected of only Joe McCarthy. Smug is the word for the whole outfit. The impression is that the Indians are biding their time until April 16 when they believe they will spring themselves on the rest of the league.

Wherefore all this high regard of the Indians for themselves? Well, it may not be altogether unnatural. When last seen in 1939, the Indians were hotter than a biscuit, to coin a phrase. In fact, they were just about the most terrific club in the league. They won 19 of their last 22 games on the road to lift themselves from the ruck of fourth place into third, finishing only 3½ games behind the second-place Red Sox.

To understand how extremely gratifying to the Cleveland club was that late-season spurt, it must be recalled that for most of two decades Cleveland teams were helpless waifs once they left the friendly confines of their own park. Cleveland might have won countless pennants had the club been able to cart its short rightfield fence around the league. But last year without benefit of that fence, the Indians not only did very well on the road . . . they were wonderful. There is now a well-defined belief that the old hex is gone.

But the real and meaty reason for the Indians' optimism is the presence of two young men named Leroy Boudreau and Roy Mack. Mr. Vitt will be very unhappy if this pair does not blossom as a second base-shortstop combination only slightly inferior to Joe Gordon and Frankie Crosetti, the prize pair of the Yankees. If they are merely good ball players, it will be something of a new experience for the Indians, who haven't had a capable second-base combination in 16 years, or since Bill Wambsganss and Joe Sewell were wearing Indians uniforms.

Confidentially, Vitt and the Cleveland baseball writers will tell you that Boudreau is the best shortstop in the American League, and that goes for Crosetti and Cronin. Boudreau is the young man over whom the Indians got into a mess with Big Ten authorities when it was revealed that they had been paying the boy's mother $100 a month during her son's college career for the privilege of getting his signature on a Cleveland contract when he graduated. He didn't graduate. Illinois authorities declared him ineligible and he chucked college in 1938 to go into the Cleveland farm system.

Boudreau batted a heathy .331 for Buffalo most of last season and then was called in by the Indians. He hit .258 in 53 games and gave the Indians the best shortstop job they've had since Joe Sewell left the club. Mack, a teammate of Boudreau's at Buffalo, was a football star at Case University and turned down a contract with the Chicago Bears to go into the Indians' farm system. The Indians are not profoundly impressed with Mack as a hitter but they are no less than in love with his fielding.

There are a couple of other items that Manager Vitt believes are in favor of the Indians. During the winter he traded Outfielder Bruce Campbell to Detroit for Outfielder Beau Bell. "We were too lefthanded last year," says Vitt. "We were pushovers for most southpaws in the league. They won't be so hasty to show us their southpaws with Bell in our line-up.

When Vitt lets his glance fall on third base, he becomes positively raptuous, and with cause. Because the young man on that job is Ken Keltner, who is truly the league's best third baseman, if Red Rolfe, of the Yankees, isn't. At any rate, the Indians would spurn a trade of Keltner for Rolfe. They would miss the big fellow's home runs.

There's a slight matter to be taken into consideration, however, in any discussion of Keltner this season. It seems that Mr. Keltner is the big league ball player who, at the end of the season, applied for unemployment relief despite the $8,000 salary he drew for six months, work in the big leagues. He will be reminded of that by the bench jockeys of every other club and the fans of seven cities in the league, and it may, possibly affect his play. Last year he was a productive .325 hitter.

But the Indians are a dangerous ball club if only for the fact that they own the rights to a right-hander named Bob Feller. He will win his 20-odd games every season, and Mel Harder will also do very well, as usual. But the Indians are preparing a new pitching surprise. He is a big righthander named Mike Naymick, who stands 6 feet 8 inches and bears down on the hitter from a point somewhere in the clouds. Vitt says to tab him.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Orlando, Fla., March 16.—The other day one of those forlorn, lonely Cubans who have been dredged up from the sugar-cane breaks, for a trial with the Washington Nationals, sent word out from the training field lockerroom (through an interpreter) that he wanted a pair of socks.

CONSIDINE

"Ask the guy if he's got the dough to pay for 'em," the head of the Washington commissary barked to the interpreter, and the interpreter trudged off to that dark, isolated corner of the dressing room where the Cubans dress and undress in a kind of exile.

"He ain't got a quarter," the interpreter reported.

"Then he don't get no socks," ruled the commissary man who, like many of the Washington players, extends only rudimentary courtesies to the aliens.

One of the older players on the team was standing nearby at the moment and he said, "Aw, give him the socks. He worked out yesterday without any, and it hurt my feet to look at him."

But this plea failed to melt the heart of the commissary man and, presumably, the Cuban is still playing without socks—unless he has raised 50 cents either from his embattled countrymen or from one of the unbigoted players on the team.

There are six Cubans now working out with the Washington club, as well as Alejandro Carresquel, a weather-beaten Venezuelan, who showed occasional flashes of brilliance last year. A seventh Cuban, Roberto Estalella, a tubby outfielder, was traded by Washington to Minneapolis. There are ten other Cubans spread around such Washington farms as Springfield, Mass., Greenville, S. C., Charlotte, N. C., Salisburg, Md., and Orlando.

The boys now living in a wintry conventry in Orlando are Jorge Torres, a centerfielder; Arturo Castro, a pitcher; Roberto Oritz, an outfielder; Louis Minsal, a third baseman; Gilberto Torres, a pitcher who is the son of old Ricardo Torres—a former big league catcher, and "Montague" Monteagudo, a pitcher. Only one, Gilberto Torres, is permitted to work out with the regular squad. The others are shunted to the afternoon workouts, along with a group of gangling, ineffective rookies, strays and walk-ins—including a long, lean, gabby pitcher named J. H. Dean, the J. being for Johnny.

None of the Cubans stay at the players' hotel, and their only appearances in the vicinity of their teammates' hangout is when they come around at night—seemingly banded together for protection—to buy ice cream sodas at the drug store next door. In Washington they live at a boarding home together, far from the swank apartment which houses many of their American teammates.

Isolated by their lack of English, brutally snubbed by the dumber portions of Clark Griffith's predominantly Southern ball club, the Washington aliens are about the unhappiest lot of athletes in the kingdom of sports. Back home they are National figures, glorified in the press.

If they were Americans, Washington's Cubans possibly might all win big league posts. But as it is, it will be surprising if one sticks with the team. Oritz and Monteagudo have the best chances. But they will have to be very good, to make the grade. Carresquel, of course, will stay. He is the team's second best pitcher.

Vande Weghe Sets Record

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, March 15.—Al Vande Weghe, of Princeton, set a new pool record of 1:35.3 tonight in winning the 150-yard backstroke title for the second straight year in the Eastern Intercollegiate individual swimming championships at the University of Pennsylvania.

Princeton's medley relay team of Vande Weghe, Ned Parke and Charles Boozan established a second pool record of 2:56.8 in winning the 300-yard relay. The previous pool record of 3:03.8 was made by Harvard two years ago.

Vande Weghe outstripped his field to win by 15 feet over Jim O'Mara, of Dartmouth, to shatter his own pool mark of 1:37.

Kayak II Rated at Top for Dixie 'Cap

Notch Above Seabiscuit, Challedon

Given High Weight Of 134 Pounds Over Two Conquerors for $20,000 Race

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 15.—Kayak II, C. S. Howard's Argentine-bred speedster, was rated a notch above Seabiscuit and Challedon in weights released today for the $20,000-added Dixie Handicap, although he has been defeated by both of them.

Handicapper Charles J. McClennan assigned Kayak II top weight of 134 pounds in the field of 51 horses nominated for the mile and three-sixteenths Dixie, to be run at Pimlico May 8, three days before the Preakness.

Seabiscuit Next

Seabiscuit, retired stablemate of Kayak II, and turfdom's alltime high money-winner, was rated in line with a burden of 132 pounds. W. L. Brann's Challedon, the 1939 3-year-old champion and "horse of the year," drew 130 pounds.

McLennan's weight assignments, received with surprise in some racing circles, furnished the first line on an official handicapper's estimation of the abilities of the leading handicap horses to be seen in action this spring and fall.

Against the Field

With Seabiscuit retired permanently by Howard after his successful comeback campaign at Santa Anita, the Dixie looms as a contest pitting Kayak II and Challedon against the field.

In both his comeback triumphs, the San Antonio Handicap and the Santa Anita Handicap, Seabiscuit crossed the finish line just ahead of Kayak II. Challedon also scored a notable victory over the Argentinian in the Pimlico Special last November.

Marshall Field's Sir Damion, winner of the Dixie last year, was given a 118-pound impost this year. Other weights included Isolater and Sun Lover, 122; Hash, 120; Third Degree, 118; Pasteurized and Challephen, 116; Honey Cloud, Masked General and War Dog, 115.

Colorado Tops Duquesne in Cage Finals

Buffs Win, 51-40, in Invitational Play; DePaul Beats Aggies

By the Associated Press

New York, March 15.—Colorado University's thundering herd made good on its second attempt to win the Metropolitan Invitational Basketball Tournament championship tonight, outscoring the Iron Dukes of Duquesne, 51 to 40, in a sensational final game.

Oklahoma A. and M. edged out De Paul, 23-22, to take third place.

A crowd of 15,201 saw Colorado win the title it missed two years ago, by taking complete command midway in the second half, when the Dukes lost their amazing eyes and couldn't hit from out front.

The Buffs, after Duquesne had tied the score for the fourth time during the game at 29 all, saw the Pittsburgh five spurt momentarily. Then the Mountaineers came back strong and poured in 16 points while holding the Pittsburghers to a bare 4.

The Buffs' brightest star was Bob Doll who kept the Duke machine rolling by continually coming up with the ball after shots at both baskets—and he was accorded the vote as the tourney's most valuable player by a board of metropolitan coaches.

He led the Colorado offensive with 15 points, 1 more than his other blond teammate, Jumping Jack Harvey.

Heroes of the Dukes were the injured Morris Becker, who had a bad ankle but who managed to crack in 8 points, and Paul Widowitz, the stocky forward, who made 14 for his team's best offensive showing. Colorado led after a ding-dong half by 22-18.

DorothyKirbyWins Belleair Women's Golf Tournament

Belleair, Fla., March 15 (AP).—Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, won the annual Belleair women's golf tournament today, defeating Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 5 and 3.

The Atlantan was three up at the end of the first nine holes, which she shot in even par figures.

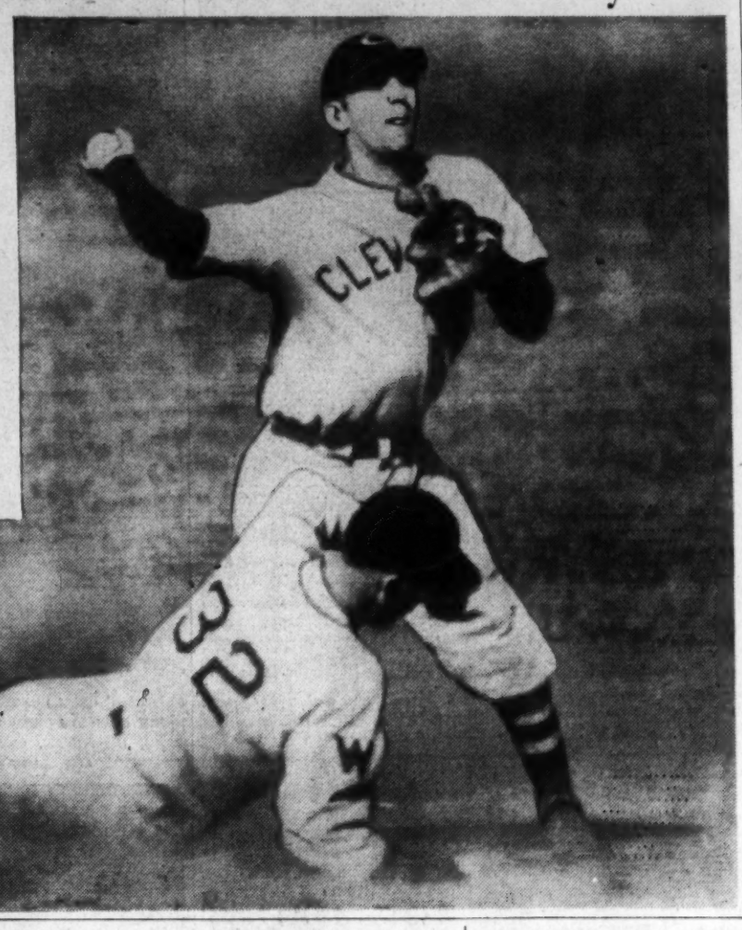
On the 11th Miss Kirby, who yesterday eliminated former National Champion Glenna Collett Vare, of Merion, Pa., holed in a birdie 3 and went 4 up. On the thirteenth she made it dormie 5, but she needed three putts on the fourteenth and the match went on another hole.

The fifteenth is a short hole and Miss Kirby's tee shot landed only 6 feet from the cup. Miss Cothran, who yesterday defeated National Champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., was trapped below the green. She missed her putt and lost the match.

Transparenti Wins

Philadelphia, March 15 (AP).—Lou Transparenti, 125½, Baltimore, punched out an eight-round decision over Billy Passan, 122½, Philadelphia, in the windup of a boxing show at the Cambria A. C. tonight. Passan's mouth was cut in the second round.

Here's One for the Album—Case in Half of Double Play at 2d



Washington's No. 1 base stealer of the American League, George Case (No. 32), was a little too late on this play at second in the Nats' 2-0 loss to Cleveland yesterday in Fort Myers, Fla. Ray Mack, Indian second baseman, tags George and completes the throw to Boudreau, who caught Buddy Lewis for a double-out. The Nats, all set to tie the score, had the bases loaded at the time. The double-play followed Jimmy Wasdell's foul "home run"

$2,000,000 Is Best Yanks' Offer Received

'Clearance Sale' Price Of $4,000,000 Quoted By Bankers; No Takers

By the Associated Press

New York, March 15.—The New York Yankees may be worth all of the $6,000,000,000 to $10,000,000 or more that they are popularly supposed to be, but in the Wall Street circles where sums like these are calculated coldly a "clearance sale" price of $4,000,000 is being quoted with no takers.

In fact, the best legitimate offer yet made was $2,000,000, a reliable financial source told the Associated Press today.

It was impossible to ascertain whether the price being bandied about in brokerage offices covered the American League club alone or included its many minor league affiliates. However, it was pointed out that the farm system would be useless, if not worthless, without the parent club.

The Madison Square Garden Corporation is one of the prospective purchasers of the Yankees, it was learned, but has made no formal offer since hearing the $4,000,000 "ask" price.

Another group reported interested if satisfactory terms could be obtained includes Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Great Britain, and Gov. Francis P. Murphy, of New Hampshire.

The surprisingly low prices under discussion in qualified financial circles indicated again the caution with which baseball investments

Rep. Kennedy Again Asks Fight Inquiry

New Investigation Threatens to Halt Archibald, Jeffra

By Al Hailey

The "muddled featherweight situation" was in a worse muddle than ever yesterday as Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy insisted that no matter what happens he still wants a Congressional investigation of the "whole structure of professional boxing."

Just as it appeared certain that Al Weill would bring his world featherweight champion, Joey Archibald, back to Washington for a return title fight with Baltimore's Harry Jeffra, Kennedy came out with a mimeographed memo which may blow the lid off the whole business. He now insists Archibald fight Scalzo.

Now nobody is certain just what will happen.

The National Boxing Association is bent upon the idea that Archibald must first meet No. 1 Contender Petey Scalzo.

Weill told Promoter Joe Turner by telephone he wants to come back to Washington—even told Joe to "go ahead and get Jeffra."

Kennedy echoes the sentiments of the N. B. A., which furthermore orders that unless Weill signs Archibald to fight Scalzo before March 28 the 127-pound title shall be taken from Joey.

With his statement yesterday, Kennedy brought in a new angle involving interstate and international "honor."

River Vale Overwhelmed, 10-1, by Eagles

D. C. Hockey Team Gains Second Place In Wild, Rough Game

By Jack Munhall.

In as wild hockey match as was ever housed at Riverside Stadium, the Washington Eagles last night routed the River Vale Skeeters, 10 to 1, to accomplish the following:

(1) Regain second place in the Eastern Amateur League race, as the Sea Gulls were upsetting the Rovers in Atlantic City;

(2) Tie Baltimore's season record for the highest number of goals in a single match; and

(3) Administer the Skeeters the worst beating suffered by any league club this season.

Three Major Penalties

More than 2,500 fans saw the slam-bang fray which resulted in the first period oustment of one River Vale player for the duration of the match; the suspension for one game of Bill Davies, of the Eagles, and Hughie Bell, of River Vale, for fighting in the penalty box and a grand total of three major penalties.

These three majors and four other minors were crammed into a wild second period which, for excitement, eclipsed any ever seen locally. Davies and Bell drew one-match suspension under a new rule because their fight was their third major of the season.

Partially obscured by the continual bickering of the players and officials was another great scoring performance by Paul Courteau, Washington wing, who tallied three goals in a match for the third time in less than two weeks.

Dewey On War Path

Just a step behind Courteau in the point-manufacturing department were Hal (Admiral) Dewey and Alan Foster with two goals each. Dewey, not on the trail of second place in the race for the league individual scoring title counted two beauties. Foster crammed his pair of tallies into the last four minutes of the game, scoring twice in quick succession.

In a fast first period which produced several rare plays, including the season's first penalty for a team having too many players on the ice, the Eagles took a 1-0 lead.

River Vale drew the too-many-men penalty when, after Herchenratter had been banished for tripping, the Eagles noticed the Skeeters still had six men on the ice. Knipfel called this to the attention of Referee MaGiffin and Shotquist, captain of the Skeeters, was given a two-minute exile. Even with River Vale shy two players, Washington couldn't add to the advantage it

Taisto Maki Wins Over Indiana's Tommy Deckard

Chicago, March 15 (AP).—Scoring a clean cut victory over Tommy Deckard, former Indiana ace, Taisto Maki, of Finland, ran the 3 miles in the good time of 14:01.9 tonight before a crowd of 2,500 at the University of Chicago Field House.

Making his second appearance of a Nation-wide tour for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund, the great distance star was not pressed, winning by three-quarters of a lap.

Maki's time tonight was 6 seconds slower than the world indoor 13:55.9 performance hung up by Gregory Rice recently, but indicated that the Finn runner is rounding into shape for the duel in which he will engage Rice, March 30, at New York.

Know Your Dogs—

No. 3 of a Series

THE KUVASZ

This large white fellow originated in Tibet about eight centuries ago and his name is a corrupted spelling of Turkish and Arabian words and means "armed guard." He was the guard dog of the ancient rulers for centuries and only those in favor of the court were allowed to own them. They are excellent shepherds but perhaps the most outstanding of all watch dogs. Dr. Schultz, of Brookville road, owns this fellow and he will be on exhibition at the dog show in Alexandria Saturday, April 27

Harris Happy Over Rookie Moundsmen

3 Right-Handers Are Stars; Wind Makes 'Homerun' Hit By Wasdell a Foul

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Fort Myers, Fla., March 15.—The Nats made the 170-mile run from Orlando this morning and no runs whatsoever this afternoon. They couldn't negotiate the 360-feet around the bases and were shut out by the Cleveland Indians, 2 to 0.

Washington's first defeat of 1940, however, was not exactly painful. The Nats outhit the Indians, 8 to 6, and Bucky Harris was positively elated by the pitching of three of his rookie right-handers, despite their lack of high success.

And then there was also that gorgeous foul ball off the bat of chunky Jimmy Wasdell in the fifth inning when with the bases full and the Nats trailing, 2 to 0, the little first baseman swung from his heels. The ball he hit was earmarked "home run" until the fag end of its flight when a dastardly wind blew the ball a foot foul.

Runs All the Way to Third

Wasdell, who had set a new distance hitting record with a home run at Tinker Field last week, belted that fifth-inning pitch today far over Rightfielder Chapman's head and caused the 1,000 customers to gasp at his power. The grinning Wasdell reached third before he was informed that the day's young gale had taken the ball foul.

Whereupon Wasdell, perhaps in disgust, struck out.

Bucky Harris sent Bucky Jacobs, Early Wynn and the Cuban Gilberto Torres against the Cleveland pitching trio of Bill Zuber, Harry Eisenstat and Johnny Humphries, and all of the Washington rookies won a new place in Harris' affections.

Jacobs yielded the only two runs of the ball game in the first inning when the Indians bunched four of their hits. Jeff Heath drove the runs home with a single to center. But, unaffected by that sour start, Jacobs settled down to hold the Indians hitless for the rest of his three-inning turn.

The chap who did himself the most good today was broad-beamed Early Wynn, who pitched himself into the solid esteem of Harris by holding the Indians to one hit in three innings. Wynn's fast ball was crackling over the plate. He walked only one hitter.

The Cuban Torres pitched the eighth and ninth and made a bid for a job with the Nats with a

FBI Routs Greenbelt in Post Tourney

G-Men, Sherwood Girls, Boys Club Advance in Heurich Gym Battles

The G-Men had a tussle last night in the District A. A. U. championship tournament, but they finally got their man, or in this case their men. Forced to call on all their court tricks, Federal Bureau of Investigation turned back the Greenbelt A. C., 45 to 26, to gain the quarter-final round of the title competition being sponsored by The Washington Post at Heurich's Gymnasium.

The Boys Club of Washington, Central Branch, earned the right to meet FBI in their next game by turning back CCC 2349 Company, of Quantico, Va., 48 to 28. In the girls' game, Sherwood stamped itself as a championship threat by downing Mount Rainier, 32 to 22.

The Greenbelt-FBI game was harder fought than the final score indicates. The G-Men, coached by Howard Meyers, ran up a 12-to-2 lead only to have Greenbelt narrow the margin to 18 to 15 at the half. In the third period, Greenbelt brought its rooters to their collective feet by tying the count at 21 to 21 and then going to the front, 23 to 21. But FBI came back strong and clicked on all cylinders to draw away from that point to the end.

Royal Blue, Paying $11.20, Wins Tropical Park Feature

Sandy Boot Second; Praetorian Wins Sixth at $23.90; Donoso Star Rider

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 15.—C. W. Pershall's Royal Blue, fourth in his last three endeavors and victorious in three straight races before that, regained the winning habit here this afternoon when he led home six seasoned rivals in the Naples Purse, mile and 70 yards piece de resistance of the card. Well handled by Apprentice Charlie Durando, the gelded son of Blue Larkspur led virtually from end to end and gamely outlasted J. B. Partridge's Sandy Boot by a head to return $11.20 for two.

Mrs. L. H. Nimkoff's Balloter, third in the recent City of Havana Handicap, was third, two lengths behind.

J. E. Widener's Bucking, a gelding that equaled the track record for this distance in his most recent outing, finished fourth in the role of favorite. He broke last, gained a contending position, then fizzled when the important question was asked.

Weather Bad

Racing today was staged under most adverse conditions. The overcoated crowd, which was below the usual size, braved chill winds and a threat of rain. The track remained fast despite early showers.

The Naples was one of those affairs in which the result was in doubt until the less stalwart contenders finally dropped out of it near the end. The field was pretty well bunched most of the way, with Bucking slowest to find his stride.

Royal Blue had Sandy Boot, Harp Weaver and Ballotter pressing him from the start. Sandy Boot managed to stick his head in front of the eventual winner for a few strides as the field tore into the stretch, but the Pershall 5-year-old was not through. He refused to be beaten, outgaming Sandy Boot in the last few jumps. Balloter easily defeated the others.

Long Shot Winner

Praetorian was a long shot winner of the mile and a furlong sixth contest. Alfred Robertson drove the $23.90-for-two chance past the wire with a neck margin over the slow starting favorite, William Palmer. White Hot followed, two lengths back. Praetorian was rated behind Lady Infinite and White Hot to the stretch, where the gelding wore down that pair and had enough left to stave off the game rally of William Palmer. The latter probably would have won with an equal getaway.

Ruperto Donoso rounded out a perfect day in the saddle with a hard earned triumph astride Uvalde in the next-to-closing number. The Chilean had three mounts and clicked on each occasion. Uvalde came from fourth place with a rush through the stretch that carried him first home by a head at $6.60 for two.

SWEET SUKEY began fast, was eased back rounding the turn while saving ground and, responding courageously under a strong ride, outlasted CLOCK TIME. The latter, on the outside and in close attendance of the leader the entire trip, hung when the final test came. ALL EVEN, compelled to circle the field, easily disposed of the others in the final furlong. SHAUN G. raced evenly. NOWO went into the air at the start and was crowded back.

LIMERICK, hustled to the front while crossing the field going to the first turn, was then rated in front and held sway all the way. DUNLAD, pinched back going to the first turn, bettered his position steadily, but could not overhaul the winner. BARBED RETORT stumbled at the start and closed a big gap to dispose of BLACK CRUSADE in the last furlong.

PAUL PRY, reserved off the pace until well around the lower turn, moved up steadily when placed to pressure and wore DARBY DALLAS down in the final drive. DARBY DALLAS, well placed in the early stages, took command with a rush at the furlong pole, but was unable to withstand the winner's bid. PANJAB stole through on the inside after leaving the backstretch and easily disposed of the others. GOURMET had no excuses.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIDAS, $5.50, $3.20, $2.70; CHICHARRA, $4.30, $3.60; DARK MAY, $3.60.

MIDAS, taken back off the pace in the opening half mile, took command when called upon leaving the backstretch and won as his rider pleased. CHICHARRA, well up all the way, lost ground rounding the lower turn, but finished stoutly and easily disposed of the others. DARK MAY saved much ground entering the stretch, but could not engage the leaders. SAN PIETRO tired as if short.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,300. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:58½. Off 3:58½. Winner, C. W. Pershall's b. g. ROYAL BLUE held his opposition safe for speed and rated in front, continued with determination when placed to a drive and just lasted. SANDY BOOT, going closer up than usual while in tight quarters to the furlong pole, finished gamely when obtaining racing room and would have won in a few more strides. BALLOTER, on the outside, made a bold effort rounding the lower turn, but was unable to keep pace with the leaders. BUCKING broke slowly, moved up strongly on the outside leaving the backstretch, but then retired in the stretch run.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRAETORIAN, $23.90, $10.00, $4.60; WILLIAM PALMER, $3.20, $2.50; WHITE HOT, $3.00.

PRAETORIAN followed the pace under light restraint in the early running, moved up determinedly when called upon and outlasted WILLIAM PALMER in the final drive. WILLIAM PALMER almost unseated his rider at the start and was away badly, bettered his position gradually while circling the field and lost much ground, but ran as if much the best. WHITE HOT, prominent throughout, failed in the stretch run.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:51½. Off 4:52. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UVALDE, $8.60, $4.90, $3.70; JACQUELLA, $8.40, $5.00; DEVIL'S PEAK, $5.40.

UVALDE kept forward under light urging, moved up gamely between the leaders entering the stretch turn and, responding with determination to punishment, outlasted JACQUELLA. The latter raced COSSACK GIRL into defeat, assumed a short lead and held on gamely when the final test came, but could not stave off the winner's bid. DEVIL'S PEAK, forced extremely wide on the stretch turn, hung in the final drive. ERIN'S SUN had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:19½. Off 5:19½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK DEMON, $7.20, $5.40, $3.70; CHAMELEON, $7.20, $4.40; MOBCAP, $3.00.

BLACK DEMON, taken back off the pace entering the backstretch, moved up gamely between the leaders on the stretch turn and opened a winning lead. CHAMELEON, well placed all the way, responded gamely to punishment and closed strong. MOBCAP gradually worked her way up on the outside and was going fastest of all at the end. HEADIN HOME retired in the final furlong.

National Park Girls Learn to Care for Their Horses

Spring days mean many a canter in Rock Creek Park for National Park College students, but all is not play. Besides learning how to mount and ride, these girls also are instructed in the care and feeding of horses. Above—Gladys LaVance, riding instructor, explains something about the horse's hoof to Emma Sloan, Betty Munson, Shirley Zuchmaier and Marjorie Brice

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al—One of the most enthusiastic horse fanciers in Florida is Carl O. Rose, former chairman of the Florida State Racing Commission, whose Rosemere Farm at Ocala is the scene of the most intensive thoroughbred breeding activities in the State. When his sire, Full Dress, recently died, Rose made arrangements with the United States Remount Service to lease Green Melon to mate with his mares, Jacinth and Hazardous. Green Melon was a recent acquisition to the Remount Service and is slated to stand in Florida. Rose has two yearlings at his farm, a filly out of Jacinth and a colt from Hazardous, both large juveniles which appear to be thriving in the limestone country of Ocala. Their owner has prepared large outdoor paddocks for them, and believes that the State can make rapid strides forward as a breeding stronghold when horse-lovers of Florida awaken to the fact that the natural properties in the ground are conductive to well built bodies and strong bodies. The Tropical Park running strip is better now than at any time since the opening of the course, according to owners and trainers stabled on the grounds. This was illustrated by the rapid running time posted this week, as well as by the excellent marks posted in training hours. Although the going is lightning fast, it is also well cushioned and safe for all weak-legged thoroughbreds. The Heckle Art Brown Contest is nearing a close, but the entries are gathering momentum. For instance, here's one from W. G. M., of the Fire Department: "There is a man in our town who thinks he's wondrous wise; At handicapping, organ playing, ribbing other guys; Has no sylph-like figure, he's stuffed like Barnum's clown: This master of the gas pipe, presenting Arthur Brown." Confucious say: Fly Me will earn the fee. BILL.

First race—Sting Ray appears best suited of those due to march postward in the day's opener. Needs only the right ride. Runmilton goes for all the dough here, but I believe second is about right. Brilliant Rock for the minor award.

Second race—No Ending should do a lot of running in this field and I believe the speed will be enough to take first money. My First is improved, and will be a keen factor. Come Home should take a place in the pay circle.

Third race—Equistone ran some fair races at the other course. Seems favored by conditions in this field and I'm going to string along. Sack and Counterglow to complete the money bracket.

Fifth race—Double Call set a world record last out and is the natural choice in this company. General Jack is good now and will be here or thereabouts. Five Fifty has proven better than the name implies and could take it all with slight improvement.

Sixth race—Totache may come through with that long awaited victory in this field. May get the right help from the saddle. My Mommy belongs in this field and will be dangerous. Ranch Boss could get a piece of the pay.

Seventh race—Zevson has a slight edge on those gathered for this event and I see no reason for mistakes. Cuckoo and Sun Mica are the ones most likely to cause trouble for the top fellow.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Modest Queen, Travel Agent and Tilanna.

Point-to-Point Races At Warrenton Today

Can Gerry Webb Repeat in Feature Is Big Question? His Easy Mark Has Won Four Straight Major Starts; Program Opens at 11

The Warrenton Hunt's point-to-point races at 11 a. m. today at William H. Emory's farm, near Warrenton, will bring out the answer to the question which has been the hunt country's main subject for discussion of late: can Gerry Webb do it again?

Webb, Middleburg horseman who has won four major point-to-points in as many efforts, will bring out his Easy Mark in an effort to take his second consecutive victory in the Warrenton annual fixture. Hunting enthusiasts are waiting to see if Easy Mark will be able to repeat, or if some outsider will score unexpectedly.

Webb's entry is in the race for individual riders, over approximately six miles of Warrenton country. Trophies will be presented to the first rider to finish, to the first heavyweight of over 190 pounds to finish, and to the first member of the Warrenton Hunt to finish.

The second race, for teams of two, carries two pieces of plate to the winners. Last year the event was taken by William Emory and Nathalie Hazard, who are expected to be back in competition this year.

Conditions state that both races are open to members of the Warrenton Hunt, landowners, and by invitation to members of recognized hunts. Horses must be ridden by owners or members of their immediate families. Entrants must have been hunted by their owners at least six times during the current season.

In the first race, there will be a minimum of 160 pounds, but otherwise, races will be ridden at catch weights in regular hunting equipment. Contestants are not allowed to ride along a road for more than one-quarter of a mile, must close all gates, and replace all bars.

American U. Track Team Starts Work

American University's track team, working for the first year under a full-time track coach, Dick Gentle, has settled down in earnest to work for its triangular meet with Catholic University and Gallaudet College April 19.

Addition to his squad of Jim Flaherty, who specializes in the javelin throw, 220-yard hurdles and 100-yard dash, has greatly bolstered Gentle's hopes for the coming season.

A star at Washington and Jefferson, Flaherty was ineligible for competition as an Eagle last year under a Mason-Dixon Conference ruling that a transfer remain idle two semesters before taking up activities in the same sports participated in at his previous school.

The work of Bob Dixon, Bill Adams and Otto Streitberger, sprinters; John Jablonsky and Ken Fox, shotputters, and distance men Herb Wood, Bob Little and LeRoy Cook has also added to Gentle's hopes for a successful first year. The team is working out daily now at A. U.

Roosevelt and Bethesda Beaten in 1st Round at Durham

Montgomery Titlists Make Best Showing In Loss to Georgians; Roosevelt Miserable

By Bill Burnett
A Staff Correspondent

Durham, N. C., March 15.—Washington's lowest rated representative in the second annual Duke-Durham scholastic tournament turned in by far the finest performance today as Roosevelt and Bethesda - Chevy Chase bowed out of action in the first round. Bethesda, Montgomery County titlist, conceded only a vague chance of tripping Georgia's State champions, Lanier High, won the hearts of fans after the first five minutes of play despite the fact it wound up on the short end of a 43-to-31 count.

Roosevelt opened the event this morning with a miserable loss to Harrodsburg (Ky.) High, 21 to 16. The score developed as the lowest of the first round and the game, played in the early morning hours, developed as the Rough Riders' worst effort in a year in which they mopped up District competition with the loss of one game to a school-boy club. The result sended for good the Riders' hopes of entering the Eastern States Tourney in Glens Falls, N. Y.

Roosevelt Folds

Playing against a team with less than half the strength of Bethesda's first foe, Roosevelt led by a scant 10-8 margin at the half but folded badly in the last stages. It's ace scorers, George West, Hymie Perlo and Ernie Travis, wound up with their worst game totals of the year, 2, 4 and 1 points, respectively, and the Riders were outplayed, outthought an doutfougnt throughout.

In all, it was the most disastrous showing a District five has made for a number of years in an out-of-town tourney. Whatever honors garnered by the Riders were heaped on little Frank Ciango, an unspectacular youngster who has plugged along with four points a game all year while his fancier mates stole the head lines. Ciango scored 7 points, easily outstanding for the Rough Riders. And while his teammates took things easy, Ciango scrapped with the best of them.

Lampkin Winners' Star

So upset at the outcome were Roosevelt leaders that at first they planned to leave for home immediately despite the fact the tournament committee provided for their stay throughout action. Later they reconsidered that decision.

Harrodsburg's star was a slender player with an uncanny accuracy on an overhead shot. Thornton Lampkin. His 10 points were high for the game.

In contrast to the fall of Roosevelt, Bethesda's highwaymen went down to defeat in glory. Twelve points separated the clubs at the end, and those were accounted for by the 6 feet 8 inches boasted by Lank Murrow, Lanier center. The spindley star tallied 18 points, most of them solely because Bethesda didn't have a first-string player to match his altitude.

Bethesda tried everything possible to stop the giant. It concentrated two men on Murrow, leaving Forward Curtis Thornton free to "pot" the ball, which he did to the tune of 14 points.

Durham, Greenville Win

Durham High, host team and defending champ after an opening round 59-33 triumph over Glass High, of Lynchburg, came within one game of a successful defense of its crown when it trampled Lanier High, of Macon, by a 53-51 count in tonight's semifinals. Its opponent in the finals tomorrow night will be Parker High, of Greenville, S. C., which advanced to the coveted berth with an opening round victory over High Point (N. C.) High and tonight defeated Harrodsburg (Ky.), by 27-22.

Dominates A. A. U. Swimming Events

Patsy Palmer, youthful swimming star of the Shoreham Hotel pool team, ran away with honors in the first night's events in the District A. A. U. indoor meet last night at Shoreham. She won two firsts and a second in the women's events. "The meet will conclude with finals in ten more events tonight at 8 o'clock. Here is Patsy emerging from the pool after her 220-yard free-style victory

Patsy Palmer Star in A. A. U. Swim Events

Swimming stars of the Shoreham Pool team dominated the first night's events in the District A. A. U. indoor swimming championships last night in the Shoreham Hotel which saw 6 of the 16 events enter final stages without any pool or meet record endangered.

Patsy Palmer, 16-year-old Shoreham star, took two firsts—in the 50-yard freestyle and 220-yard free-style—and came in second in the novice 50-yard freestyle event.

Bill Wright, ace swimmer on the Shoreham men's team, easily won the 220-yard freestyle event and set the pace in qualifying for tonight's finals in the 50-yard and 100-yard freestyle.

The 220-yard event was a walkaway for Miss Palmer over a field composed entirely of her Shoreham teammates, Helen Flett, Jean Brunson, Betty Jane Roland and Bette Ott. She finished half the length of the pool ahead of Miss Flett, who came in second, but her time of 2 minutes 58 seconds was 3.8 seconds off record time.

Shoreham B 200-yard relay team of Kayhoe, Carter, Jorden, Wright, took an easy victory over Wilson High's quartet of Chadwick, Lewis, Burch and Chickering. Central came in third and Northeast Boys' Club finished a poor fourth.

FINAL SUMMARIES

Giants Stop Yanks, 3-2, In 10th Inning

Tigers Beat Cards; Red Sox, White Sox, Pirates Are Victors

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 15.—The World Champion New York Yankees can be stopped—and their home town pals, the Giants, are just the fellows who can do it.

Meeting in their first exhibition game in many years, the Giants edged out the Yanks 3-2 today on a tenth-inning triple by Rookie Morris Jones. It was the first defeat in four games this spring for the Yankees.

In the course of subduing the Champs, Pitchers Hy Vandenberg, Harry Gumbert and Bob Carpenter, of the Giants, held the famed sluggers to three hits in the last seven innings.

Lakeland, Fla., March 15.—Young Dick Conger, pressing his bid to become a major leaguer in one jump, blanked the St. Louis Cardinals for five innings in an exhibition game here today as the Detroit Tigers came through with a 5-2 victory.

It was Conger's second fine mound performance for Detroit. Only one Cardinal got as far as third base—and that on an error and a stolen base. Conger allowed only two hits.

Conger, former West Coast collegian, never played professional ball until this year. The last pitcher to move from the sandlots to the majors in one jump was Bob Feller, of Cleveland.

A rookie and a veteran gave Conger able help. Pat Mullin, center, and Birdie Tebbetts, veteran catcher, each hit a home run and between them batted in all the Tiger scores.

Los Angeles, March 15.—A big eighth inning which produced seven runs, combined with some timely punch in the tenth, gave the Chicago White Sox an 11-to-10 victory today over their National League home-town rivals, the Cubs.

Five hits, two of them by Jimmy Webb, together with three walks and an error, figured in the White Sox seven-run eighth inning. In the tenth, Webb walked, took third on Taft Wright's single and scored the winning run on Bob Kennedy's single. The losing pitcher was Vern Olsen, with John Rigney getting credit for the victory.

The Cub 15-offense included homers by Bill Nicholson, Augie Galan, Dominic D'Allessandro and Al Todd.

Anaheim, Calif., March 15.—Bunching three of their six hits along with two walks the Pittsburgh Pirates shoved over five runs in a big sixth inning today to beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 5. Johnny Rizzo's hit with the bases full and Arky Vaughan's double were the big blows of the inning.

The victory evened the series between the teams. The A's won a 14-inning game yesterday, 10-7.

Clearwater, Fla., March 15.—It was the fifth inning, score tied, bases loaded, two out and—Pete Coscarart, Brooklyn's star second baseman, let an easy bouncing grounder hop between his legs and into the outfield.

That error provided the Boston Red Sox with the margin of a 7-to-5 victory over the Dodgers and kept the Sox's spring record spotless.

Diz Leaves to Join Cub Teammates

C. U. Holds Intramural Boxing Show Tonight

Fights Are Last College Bouts of Season Here; 16 Three-Rounders Carded; Receipts Will Help Pay Strang's Expenses to N.C.A.A.

College boxing will make its last 1940 stand in Washington tonight when Catholic University opens the doors at the C. U. gymnasium on its annual intramural show, which consists of 16 three-round fights and two wrestling matches for comedy relief.

The business starts at 7:30 p. m., with the main purpose of raising funds to defray part of the expenses of Gerry Strang, C. U.'s 165-pound entrant in the N. C. A. boxing tournament, to Sacramento, Calif., scene of the 1940 nationals.

The show further will furnish a preview of the Cardinals' 1941 boxing team. Coach Eddie LaFond will be on hand to keep an eye out for prospective punchers for next year—mainly on such freshmen stars as Leo Houck, jr., Ken Blackbird, Bernie Cody and James (Buddy) Lynagy. Houck, 184-pounder, is regarded as the successor to Jay Turner, who will be graduated this June. Blackbird and Cody are heavyweights, and Lynagy is a welterweight.

A product of St. John's, Lynagy carries a terrific punch and may get Huck Hughes' 145-pound berth next year. Four heavyweight fights, two light-heavy, three middleweight, two welterweight, three lightweight and two 127-pound contests are on the card.

C. U.'s Pirro brothers, Rocco and Carmen, will take over the wrestling end of the card, Rocco facing Jim Conlen and Carmen meeting 245-pound Tiny Nemec.

Prusoff, Mulloy Take Doubles Championship

By the Associated Press

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 15.—Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, and Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, today won the Bermuda Men's Doubles tennis title with a four-set victory over the favored team of Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg. The scores were 6—2, 3—6, 10—8, 10—8.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., and Pauline Betz, of Los Aangeles, the top-ranked women's team, had little difficulty turning back Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Helen Pederesen, of Stamford, Conn., 6—3, 6—2, in the final round.

The winners had eliminated Millicent Hirsh, New York, and Margot Lee, Washington, 6—3, 6—3, while Miss Wheeler and Miss Pedersen defeated the Bermuda team of Mrs. William Freisenbruch and Gladys Hutchings, 6—3, 7—5.

In the mixed doubles semifinals, Miss Betz and Prusoff defeated Miss Pedersen and Frank X. Shields, New York, 4—6, 6—0, 6—3, to enter tomorrow's final against Mrs. Fabyan and Cooke, who defeated Miss Wheeler and J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., 6—1, 6—3.

Wilson Purple Glove Second Round Tonight

Second round in the elimination series for the right to fight for the J. Finley Wilson Purple Glove Championship in St. Louis, Mo., in August, will be staged tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Columbia Lodge, Rhode Island avenue and Third street northwest.

Bell Clothiers, Fuelmen Clash In Tournament

Marvin's Five Plays N. E. Boys' Club at Henrich Gym Tonight

Tonight is a big night in the life of young Johnny Poston. The Bell Clothiers make their second bid to escape elimination in the District A. A. U. Tournament being staged at Heurich's gymnasium. Johnny, who coaches and plays with the Stewart Bros. Aces., also coaches the Stewart Bros. Photographers and the Bell Clothiers.

Poston, who has been playing in the tournaments sponsored by The Washington Post for seven years, has been on several championship teams. However, he is too small for actual unlimited play. But he will be directing the Clothiers tonight when they take the floor against Bellman Fuel Co. in a battle that will decide which meets the United Typewriters in the quarter-finals. This game starts at 9:30.

In the first of the two unlimited battles, booked for 8:30, Marvin's Credit tackles Boys Club of Washington, Northeast Branch. The program opens at 7:30 with a clash of the Merrick Boys Club, last year's 145-pound champions, and Sixth Presbyterian.

Both Bell Clothiers and Bellman Fuel exhibited a lot of punch in the first-round games. The Clothiers turned back the formidable General Accounting Office, while the Fuelmen downed the Census Bureau Americans.

Marvin's won from Farm Credit Administration to reach the second round, while the Northeast Boys Club trimmed the Georgetown Hotshots, composed of G. U. football players for the most part. The winners of this game will tackle Interior Department in the quarter-finals.

spectively. Mickey McDonald, of Greenbelt, who scored 24 points in his first tournament appearance, was held to a single point. He was a marked man from start to finish and got few open shots. Cain, Wurl and Blanchard did the bulk of the Greenbelt scoring.

Boys Club Central Branch had its scoring shoes on against the CCC fellows. The Boys Club presented John Mandes and Jerry Zanelotti on the front end of the counting machine. Mandes accounted for 22 points and Zanelotti 18. Having scored 32 points in his first game, Zanelotti now has 50 points and leads the field in the battle for the Sprigman Medal which goes to the leading scorer in the unlimited class.

The Sherwood and Mount Rainier girls put up a good battle, with the former team always having the edge over their younger rivals. Misses Lewis and Culp were on the counting end of the Sherwood attack and dropped the ball through the rim with regularity. The Miller sisters did most of the scoring for the suburban girls.

Keep Quiet, Listen, Learn, Don't Change Stance At Bat Is 'Make Good' Code of Dom DiMaggio

Moe Berg, Roommate Says Glasses Will Not Hinder His Playing

Mention of Brother Joe Banned; Quietest Player, Says Kirksey

By George Kirksey
United Press Staff Writer

Sarasota, Fla., March 15.—About 6 o'clock in the afternoon I walked into the hotel room and the tall fellow with the whimsical look in his eyes put his finger to his lips and said:

"Shh—be quiet and don't wake him."

I saw nothing but the back of a mop of coal black hair buried in a pillow. He didn't stir for 15 minutes but our conversation finally roused him. As he got up and stretched, Moe Berg, the Boston Red Sox's philosophical coach and world traveler, said:

"Dom, meet George Kirksey, United Press, New York."

"Hello George, how are you?" he answered.

Dom Said Nothing

That was my introduction to Dominic DiMaggio, youngest of the great Italian baseball clan and the most talked about rookie in Florida this spring. And for a roomie they had given him Moe Berg, the Red Sox's most observing and philosophical member.

For the next two hours Dominic never said another word to me or anybody else unless he was addressed. He is the quietest ball player I ever met.

Two of the main planks in his platform to win a regular job in the Red Sox outfield are:

1. Keep quiet and listen and learn.
2. Don't change batting style.

Lefty O'Doul, San Francisco manager and developer of Dominic, is the fellow who sent young DiMaggio on his way to camp this spring with the admonition, "Don't let them change your batting style." Whoever it was that told Dominic not to pop off was wasting his time. He is just not the talkative type. But don't think he isn't alert. He's all ears and eyes. He never misses a trick.

DOMINIC DiMAGGIO

The first question I asked him broke up the interview. I asked, "What advice did Joe give you before you left San Francisco?"

Berg interrupted with, "That's a standing rule we have in this room. We never talk about any DiMaggio except Dominic. The mention of Joe's name is taboo so please don't try to press Dominic for an answer."

I withdrew the question and Berg told me what he'd learned in a couple of weeks of rooming with the 22-year-old "baby" of the famed DiMaggio baseball brothers—Joe of the Yanks, Vince of the Reds and now little 5-foot 9-inch, 160-pound Dominic. The intellectual Berg revealed that the name of Dominic DiMaggio translated from the Italian means, "Sunday in May."

Underwriters Hear Holcombe At Banquet

Cooperative Research Helps Insurance Sales, He Says

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Ways for better distribution of life insurance were reviewed last night by John Marshall Holcombe, jr., manager of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, and principal speaker at the fourth annual banquet of District of Columbia Chapter, Chartered Life Underwriters.

Addressing more than 200 members and guests at Carlton Hotel, Mr. Holcombe explained that the bureau came into being because a small group of agency officers recognized nearly 20 years ago that distribution problems of life insurance could be improved if two modern techniques of business were applied to their study.

The first of these was research. The idea that research methods could be used to study distribution problems was a new one in the early 1920s, but it has now become widely recognized in American business, the speaker reminded.

Cooperation in Research

The second technique of modern business activity which was recognized as usable for the study of life insurance distribution problems was cooperation between competing companies, he said, adding that many of these problems are common to many companies. Therefore, if each company studies its problems individually, each would shoulder the entire expense; whereas, if a common effort could be made, the expense would be spread. Furthermore, results of the research would be far more reliable because of the wider experience in a cooperative effort.

J. Alan Maphis was chairman of the dinner which marked the thirteenth anniversary of the American College of Life Underwriters. There were responses from H. Cochran Fisher, president of the local chapter, and Earle W. Brailey, president of the national chapter. The guest list included: William Montgomery, president, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Adolph A. Rydgren, president, and Daniel E. Jones, vice president, Continental American Life Insurance Co.; Robert V. Fleming, president, Riggs National Bank; Dr. Donald H. Davenport, economic consultant, TNEC; Senator Joseph C. Retail Sales Jump 11 Pct. During Week

Richmond District Shows 14 Pct. Gain, Board Reports

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that department store sales in the week ended March 9 were 11 per cent higher than in the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended March 2, sales had been 6 per cent above last year, and the four weeks ended March 9, sales also averaged 6 per cent over last year.

All of the 11 Federal Reserve districts, for which separate estimates were made, reported increases for the one week ended March 9. (No figure was given for the Minneapolis district, but this area was figured in the national average.) The district increases were:

Boston, 6; New York, 4; Philadelphia, 26; Cleveland, 19; Richmond, 14; Atlanta, 10; Chicago, 9; St. Louis, 14; Kansas City, 10; Dallas, 11, and San Francisco, 12 per cent.

World Production Of Steel Reaches All-Time Record

New York, March 15 (AP).—Record-breaking production of steel in England, Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia made 1939 the highest producing year throughout the world. United States production, and that in most other steel producing nations, reached relative high, but not record levels, the American Iron and Steel Institute said today.

Total world production was estimated at 149,336,000 net tons, based on data published by leading trade journals. The 1939 figure compares with 140,140,000 net tons in 1937 and is 13 per cent above the 1929 figure of 132,570,000 tons.

The United States produced 35 per cent of the world's steel in 1939, with Germany second, producing 19 per cent.

Missouri Pacific To Pay $9,600,000 For 2 Terminals

St. Louis, March 15 (AP).—The Missouri Pacific Railroad, which contracted in 1930 to pay $20,334,264 for terminal properties in North Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., will be able to acquire them for less than half under the terms of an agreement signed yesterday.

The deal, completed by Guy A. Thompson, Missouri Pacific trustee, culminated lengthy negotiations to end litigation growing out of the railroad's original purchase of stock control of the terminals from the Van Sweringen interests.

The contracts were invalidated in 1935, after the railroad had gone into Federal court for reorganization, and Thompson as trustee sued to recover $3,200,000 already paid on the transaction.

The settlement, subject also to approval of Government regulatory bodies, sets a new price of $9,600,000 for the properties—$3,600,000 for all the stock of two St. Joseph terminal companies and $6,000,000 for a two-thirds interest in the North Kansas City Bridge & Railway Co. and five affiliated corporations.

Hudson Sales Reported 20,297, Gain of 62%

Detroit, March 15 (AP).—Hudson Motor Car Co. reported today that its retail sales of new cars for December, January and February totaled 20,297 units. This was a gain, the announcement said, of 62 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago.

New Security Issues Dwindle in Week

New York, March 15 (AP).—The capital market stalled this week as new security issues during the week ended yesterday fell off to $10,206,417, the smallest total in four months.

More than 80 per cent of the total represented a demand for new money rather than refinancing of previous debts, but nearly 90 per cent were municipal issues.

A. F. L. Urges Job, Pay Boost To Aid Nation

Outlines Production To Raise U. S. Income By $10,000,000,000

An increase of $10,000,000,000 in the national income involving a 6 per cent boost in wages and creation of 2,700,000 new jobs was projected by the American Federation of Labor last night.

In its monthly review of business, the federation cited a study just released by the National Resources Committee, "showing what goods would be consumed if our national income were raised to $80,000,000,000" from the present approximate $70,000,000,000.

"There would be no difficulty in selling the product, provided that rising production created sufficient jobs, and also that workers actually received the wage increases that rising production made possible."

Previous Gains Cited

It pointed out that from 1933 to 1937, national income increased by an average of $6,900,000,000, and each year the average worker received a 5 per cent increase in annual earnings.

"We are now considering a larger increase in national income, amounting to $10,000,000,000," it continued. "This will require a 6 per cent wage increase; it will probably make possible a wage raise of much more than 6 per cent.

"Approximately 2,700,000 new jobs would be created; with the 6 per cent wage increase these jobs would yield an average income of $1,382 per year, or a total increase in workers' income of $3,730,000,000. A 6 per cent wage increase to workers already employed would raise their total income by $2,570,000,000. These two items together add to make a total increase in workers' income of $6,300,000,000.

Other Rises Predicted

"Past experience has shown also that a rise in workers' income is accompanied by an increase in incomes of businessmen, farmers, receivers of rent and dividends; for our economy does not operate in watertight compartments, but all groups advance together as production increases. From 1933 to 1937, every $100 increase in workers' income was accompanied by an increase of $60 in other incomes. Basing our estimate on this experience we may assume that a $6,300,000,000 rise in workers' incomes will be accompanied by a $3,800,000,000 rise in all other incomes, making a total increase of slightly over $10,000,000,000 in our national income, arising from the production increases outlined above."

Simultaneously, the WPA announced last night that the quota of project workers would be reduced 228,000 in April.

Col. F. C. Harrington, commissioner of works projects, said the authorized employment for April would be 2,120,000 compared with 2,348,000 authorized for this month. Actual employment as of March 6 was 2,323,000.

Harrington's announcement was looked upon as a step toward the eventual reduction of WPA rolls to about 1,500,000 by the end of the fiscal year on June 30. By such a reduction, WPA officials said, the agency could operate within the $1,477,000,000 appropriation which Congress supplied for the current fiscal year.

Stocks Decline on Reaction to Heavy Selling as Signs of a Business Rise Fails to Appear; Scandinavians Dip

New York, March 15.—Lag in expected signs for a vigorous spring business rise, mixed trader reactions to the Russo-Finnish peace, and impatience at the feebleness of rallying forces, may have explained the rather general selling in today's share markets which dropped price levels 1 to 4 points, steels and other so-called war stocks being hardest hit. Some commentators attributed the price softness directly to a "peace scare," although there was nothing in the news to substantiate hope for reconciliation of the Allied-German hostilities.

Still others thought that foreign selling to provide more American dollars for Anglo-French war chests could account for the decline. Here once again there was no evidence to indicate that liquidation orders from abroad had been as large or larger than usual.

While the cotton market held firm in both old and new positions, wheat gave up ½ to ⅞ cent a bushel, principally because of lack of punch by the long side. In the foreign exchange section sterling, francs and the Canadian dollars were steady around their recent lows. Guilders firmed a little. Scandinavian bonds were off 1 to 3 points after their sharp rise of Thursday.

Range Is Broader

The decline in stocks was accompanied by increased volume and a broader range. The 100-stock barometer ended 0.55 point lower on transfers of 882,130 shares. Lower priced speculative descriptions were, on the whole, no weaker than pivotals. Not one of the 15 most active shares of the day finished on the plus side.

For the second successive day the behavior of the aircrafts was unsettling to the rest of the list. Manufacturing and transport activity are, of course, establishing new highs, but cautious traders persist in regarding this as temporary and dependent on more aggressive fighting on the Western Front. In addition, the opposition of Congress to making fighting planes for the belligerents is a potential factor for reducing exports of United States planes; and criticisms have been made in the British Parliament at prices paid in this market for battle craft.

Air Stocks Decline

Contributing to the 0.97 point average drop in 10 leading air stocks was a decline of more than a point in Douglas and 1½ in Glenn Martin. Curtiss-Wright, leader for the day in activity, lost ⅜ and other active aircrafts to drop substantial fractions included United Air Lines, Pan-American Airways and Transcontinental & Western.

The downturn in steels was highlighted by a more than 2-point loss in Bethlehem. Steel common, most active issue of the group, ended 1¾ lower. Republic common and preferred lost ¾ and 1⅞, respectively, on the heels of an excellent annual report, and an estimate by the management that current steel consumption is higher than production. Crucible was off 1¾.

Motor Chart Lower

General Motors, traded to the extent of 9,400 shares, ended ⅞ down and Chrysler lost 1½. Studebaker was active at lower quotations. Ward's estimated weekly assemblies for the United States and Canada at 105,720 units, a small increase from the preceding week, and said that schedules will continue to be advanced in March due to the strong retail demand for new cars.

Rail stocks made some recovery from their lows of the day, and, in the main were not severely depressed, most members of the group being dull. Carloadings were off quite a bit in the latest report, but earnings have been improving.

Leaders Drop in Day

Losses of a point or more in pivotal issues included Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Delaware & Hudson, Western Electric, Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Kennecott and Du Pont.

Oils and utilities were steady on small business with some of the preferreds in both groups ending with gains. In the farm implements, Case, International and Oliver all were lower. Montgomery Ward dropped 1¼, following appearance of unofficial reports that the company is contemplating new financing. Sears Roebuck lost nearly a point.

Bond Trading Brighter

Listed bonds today showed signs of breaking out of the rut in which they have traveled for some months. High grade investment media were in keen demand, much to the satisfaction of bankers with new issues on their hands. United States Treasury securities led the investment issues upward by fractions Speculative bonds were soft, with only a few exceptions, and some of the declines were sharp. Turnover was $6,290,000.

Long-term Treasury bonds showed gains ranging to ½ point in the formal market, but only the inactive bonds were up to that extent. Counter market figures disclosed advances for the day of 1/32 to 1/4 point. Best rated corporated securities were in persistent demand.

Foreign Issues Irregular

Foreign dollar bonds remained uncertain, after their recent wide swings. Finland 6s and the Scandinavian issues gave up 1 to 3 points of their recent gains. Belgians moved sharply higher, but Italian bonds were idle. Belligerent bonds held close to former levels. Dominicans were firm in an otherwise dull Latin-American group.

Speculative rail bonds in the corporate department slowly receded, much as did equities. Little business was done in local tractions, which tended lower. Other speculative bonds were dull.

Lecturer Tells Of New Finds In Istanbul

A new appreciation of the artistic greatness of the Byzantine Empire has resulted from the recent excavation of sixth-century mosaics in the old palaces in Instanbul, according to Byron M. MacDonald, who showed pictures of the archeological finds in a lecture last night before members of the National Geographic Society at Constitutional Hall.

MacDonald contrasted ancient and modern civilizations along the coasts of Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and the Island of Rhodes. Motion pictures in color illustrated the talk.

The lecturer described a modern Odyssey, which led from the canals of Venice to the cliffs of the Dalmatian coast, where towns cling to the steep shores.

New York, March 15 (AP).—Directors of American Brake Shoe & Foundry Co. today declared a dividend of 30 cents a share on common stock, payable March 30 to holders of record March 25. Grain Futures Slide Lower On Peace Talk

Wheat Closes Major Fraction Off; Corn Shows Weakness

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 15.—European peace talk dominated the grain trade today and prices slipped to their lowest level in 10 days with losses of as much as 1⅞ cents at times.

Weakness of securities and French reports of internal political controversies highlighted foreign rumors of possible peace maneuvers in the wake of the Finnish-Russion settlement. While most traders agreed that the grain market is subject to peace rumors as well as war talk, this situation served to restrain buyers and produce scattered evening up operations, with many dealers resitating to make new commitments.

Wheat closed ½ to ⅞ lower than yesterday, May, $1.01⅛@1.01¼, July 99@99⅛; corn unchanged to ⅜ off, May 56, July 56⅜; oats ¼ to ⅝ down; soy beans 2 lower; rye ⅜ to ⅞ off and lard 20 lower.

Some buying that helped to steady wheat in early dealings and rally later was associated with pessimistic crop reports from the Southwest indicating growing weather has disclosed signs of winter killing in some regions.

Corn showed losses of about ½ cent at one stage but recovered partially before the close, being steadied by Scandanavian purchases of about 500,000 bushels. Spot prices were ½ higher to ¼ lower.

Transamerica Net Increases To $7,443,672

Bank of America Holdings Reduced By 288,046 Shares

New York, March 15 (AP).—Transamerica Corporation reported today net profit for 1939 of $7,443,672, including $615,464 reserve for doubtful notes receivable and after including $1,985,890 as Transamerica's proportion of net profit of nonconsolidated subsidiaries in excess of dividends received. The 1939 net is equal to 69 cents a share. The earnings compares with the 1938 net on the same basis of $7,039,681, or about 66 cents a share.

The portfolio report shows that the parent company and consolidated subsidiaries reduced their holdings of Bank of America shares by 288,046 to 1,017,825 on December 31 and holdings of the National City Bank of New York by 46,181 shares to 494,720. Transamerica Corporation and consolidated subsidiaries also disposed of all of 10,688 shares of General Foods Corporation, 2,700 shares of Frisco Railway and 34,696 shares of Union Oil of California.

Cotton Futures Move Downside After Early Rise

Final levels were 2 points higher to 3 lower. Old March went off the board at 10.89, up 2, but the new type spot month was down 22 at 10.78.

Opening gains were extended in line with a firm Bombay market and the rise at Liverpool. Trade and foreign accounts were lively buyers. In the afternoon, however, traders thought twice before making commitments and the list started a slow slide downward. Lower security prices and the downward slant to other commodities braked demand from the trade.

The session was marked by issuance of tenders against 16,600 bales of March, of which all but a few hundred were stopped by a major spot interest.

Evening up in old March proceeded in orderly fashion, but liquidation of only several lots of new March caused a sharp break.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures skidded into new low price territory for the season today as trading expanded to the fastest in about three weeks.

Final prices were off 15 to 16 points on sale of 188 lots.

March expired at noon at 6.90, down 2 points, May closed 6.76; July, 6.82; September, 6.87; October, *6.86.

Demand for crude oil slackened. Oil in the Southeast and Valley was priced nominally at 5⅛ cents a pound and 5⅛ to 5⅜ in Texas.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, March 15—The stock market hesitantly inched forward today, due largely to absence of liquidating orders rather than new buying. Gilt-edged issues recovered briskly from opening declines and Brazilian loans improved in the foreign bond market. Demand for Trinidad issues helped the oil group. Kaffirs steadied and rubbers moved evenly. Industrial leaders wobbled, but changes either way were small.

Paris—The bourse gradually worked up momentum forward today and closed at the session's best levels. Domestic shares, led by steels and coals, advanced 2 to 6 per cent. Chief spur to demand appeared the hint of inflation in the latest Bank of France statement.

Liverpool—Cotton futures advanced 8 to 12 points today, guided by steady New York and Bombay markets.

'Ignored' Moe Arnovich in All-Star Game

Phillie Star To Bat First For Nationals

Failed to Crash 1939 All-Star Game; McKechnie Has Hands Full

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., March 15.—The "forgotten man" of the 1939 major league All-Star Game in New York will not be cast in the same pathetic role when the National and American leaguers meet in their Finnish Relief Fund exhibition game here Sunday.

On the contrary, he will be the first National Leaguer to step to the plate.

Last year Moe Arnovich, sturdy Phillie outfielder, was a demon early in the season. With a batting average around the .400 mark, he was a natural choice for a place on the All-Star roster.

The great day for Moe arrived, and his friends and relatives went to the Yankee Stadium, bursting with pride in the Jewish lad from Superior, Wis.

As each fresh player went on the field, the Arnovich rooters looked expectantly, but inning after inning passed, and no Moe. The game ended, with the American Leaguers in front 3 to 1. And still no Moe.

Philly Goes Anti-Hartnett

Indignation in Philadelphia and Superior was boundless. Gabby Hartnett, who managed the National stars, had done little Moe dirt, and for the rest of the season his appearance in Philadelphia was a signal for boisterous anti-Hartnett demonstrations.

But Moe will get his chance Sunday. Whether Bill McKechnie, who will pilot the National Leaguers, was influenced by that Yankee Stadium tragedy is not known.

Mr. McKechnie will need the rest to stop Joe McCarthy's stars. It appears that the American Leaguers are determined to simply overpower their rivals, just to muddle any National League arguments to a whisper.

Sluggers Abound on Team

McCarthy has taken his five best Yankee sluggers, and added to them possibly the only three men who might strengthen the world's champions—Joe Cronin, Ted Williams and Jimmy Foxx.

Evidence of the power hidden in Americans' starting line-up is the fact Bill Dickey, a Yankee siege gun, is batting eighth, and Foxx, Red Sox slugger who batted .360 last year, is in the fifth slot.

Neither McCarthy nor McKechnie has announced a starting pitcher, but insiders hint it will be either Bucky Walters or Paul Derringer for the Nationals. McCarthy's only hint is that his starter will not be Bob Feller.

George Case, making his debut in the starting line-up this spring, cracked out two of the Nats' eight hits. Both clubs were dealing strictly in singles today.

The Nats made motions as if to drive Zuber from the mound at the outset when Case led off with a single to left and Wasdell followed with a single to right, but the big right-hander bore down on the meaty sector of the Washington batting order and disposed of Lewis, Walker and Travis on two infield pops and a grounder.

Then it was that the Indians tied into Jacobs' curve ball for four first-inning hits and the only two runs of the ball game.

Wasdell made his bid for heroism after Early, Wynn and Case singled in succession with none out in the fifth, to fill the bases against the left-handed Eisenstat. But after his long sock to right field was labeled "foul" by the wind and Umpire Kolls, Wasdell meekly took a third strike, and Buddy Lewis obligingly hit into a double play.

$2,000,000 Is Best Offer for Yankees are approached by financiers. The same considerations are involved in the Yankee deal that caused the trustees of the estate of Charles Comiskey to seek court permission to sell the Chicago White Sox. At the request of heirs, the court refused.

Both Comiskey and the late Col. Jacob Ruppert, who lavishly built the Yankee dynasty that has brought four consecutive world championships, made specific provisions in their wills that the ball clubs should be kept intact.

Ruppert's fortune, left to three women, two of them nieces and one a friend, has been estimated at $40,000,000, largely brewing company stock and New York real estate.

Designted Four Trustees

To make certain that the ball club should not be affected in the settlement of taxes and other affairs, Ruppert designated four trustees to operate the ball club separately from the remainder of the estate and provided that all inheritance taxes should be paid out of the residuary estate and that in addition the residuary estate should make whatever loans or advances to the ball club that might be necessary to keep it at its present high standard.

The little French-Canadian wing took the puck at mid-ice and shot an off-the-boards pass to Ramsay at the other side of the rink. The disc eluded Ramsay, but Courteau dashed in to pick it up and with almost the same motion fire on past Goalie Hemming. It was a spectacular play.

Just before the end of the period Squee Allen, River Vale center, was banished for the duration of the match for gross misconduct. Allen disputed an offside decision against River Vale and when told to quiet down by Referee MaGaffin he rushed the official and pushed him several times.

Sea Gulls Beat N. Y. Rovers, 4-1

Atlantic City, March 15 (AP).—The fast-fading New York Rovers yielded, 4 to 1, to the Atlantic City Sea Gulls tonight in an Eastern Amateur Ice Hockey League game.

McKay put the Rovers ahead with a goal after 2:23 of the first period. Little more than a minute later Webster, of the Gulls, tied the score. Fasano tallied twice and Tustin once in the second period to win for the Gulls.

Archibald, Jeffra Return Bout Hits Snag

Investigation Again Asked by Kennedy To Clear Up Muddle

B. A. cannot now deviate from its stand for Scalzo without a direct slap at both Venezuela and Louisiana," Kennedy announced, after reviewing the situation.

Joey Has Lost Two Bouts

Pointing out that Archibald has ignored Scalzo since April 1939, Kennedy also called attention to the fact that Joey has since lost decisions in nontitle bouts to Simon Chavez, of Venezuela, and Jimmy Perrin, of New Orleans, while Jeffra "has remained comparatively idle." This, Kennedy reasons with the N. B. A., makes Perrin No. 2 and Chavez No. 3.

"Venezuela and Louisiana turned down championship bouts with Archibald against Chavez and Perrin and upheld their N. B. A. responsibilities by insisting upon justice for Scalzo," Kennedy said, adding that to do the right thing by those worthies, Archibald must face Scalzo first.

The N. B. A. has made it known that if Archibald refuses to comply with the March 28 edict titular recognition will be withdrawn and Scalzo will face Jeffra or Perrin, "the winner agreeing to box, within 90 days, the third of the Scalzo-Jeffra-Perrin trio," Kennedy said he was informed.

"Thus the N. B. A. will be fair in its national attitude while still according my constituent, Jeffra, his 'shot' at the title," the legislator added.

Where this leaves Chavez is uncertain — probably somewhere in Venezuela.

Would Request Investigation

"When all efforts brought from Weill only a threat of suit against the N. B. A. if Archibald were 'forced to box Jeffra,' I stated that I would request a Congressional investigation of boxing," Kennedy said, adding:

"Nothing has happened to alter that intention."

Whether the N. B. A. will still insist Archibald meet Scalzo before Jeffra remained uncertain last night, but there was one more befuddled party on hand — namely, Promoter Joe Turner.

Orlando, Fla., March 15.—Manager Bucky Harris was a wee bit disgusted today with his second base-shortstop combination, Jimmy Bloodworth and Jimmy Pofahl . . . the James boys reported that they had incurred slightly sore throwing arms . . . but Bloodworth was in the lineup against Cleveland at Fort Myers . . . Second Baseman Eddie Leip featured the afternoon group's workout today with a series of sensational plays in the infield and is commanding new respect from the Nats' bosses . . . Leip, First Baseman Jack Sanford, Outfielders Elmer Gedeon and Roberto Ortiz, and Catcher Al Evans, represent the only important talent in the afternoon class . . . Clark Griffith ridiculed published reports that the Nats are contemplating a trade with the Cleveland Indians which would bring Pitcher Willis Hudlin and Catcher Frankie Pytlak to the Nats . . . Bucky Harris today outlined his pitching program for the week-end's exhibition games . . . on Saturday against the Giants he will send Walter Masterson, Joe Haynes and Rene Monteagudo to the mound, and on Sunday against the Tigers his pitchers will be Paul Gehrman, Joe Krakauskas and Sid Hudson . . . young Hudson is a fixture in the lineup when the Nats play Sunday games at Orlando . . . It is concession to the Chamber of Commerce which widely advertised the appearances of the former Florida State League star . . . Pitcher Ken Chase has been set back ten days in training due to the sore foot caused by a protruding spike in his baseball shoes . . . paste this in your hat: Washington's 1940 ball team is far superior to its 1939 outfit . . . neither the Nats nor the Tigers will be at their peak for Sunday's battle . . . on the same day, George Case, Dutch Leonard and Buddy Lewis will be playing with the American League All-Stars at Tampa for the Finnish Relief Fund, and the Tigers will be minus the presence of Hank Greenberg, Tommy Bridges and Pete Fox for the same reason.—POVICH.

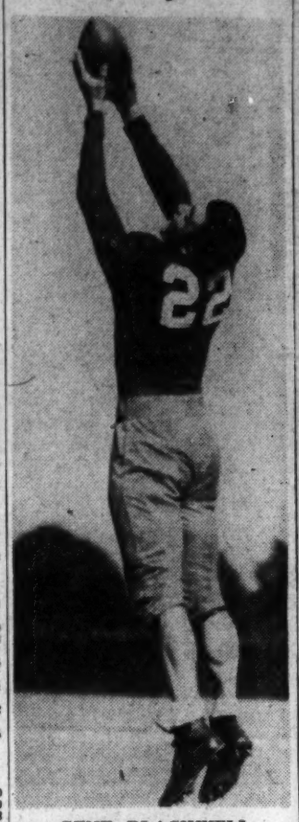
Redskins Sign Alabama Star, 13th Player



GENE BLACKWELL

Contract No. 13 for the Washington Redskins' 1940 campaign was signed yesterday by Gene Blackwell, University of Alabama star end, Jack Epsey, general manager, announced.

Blackwell, who has been one of Alabama's mainstays at left end for three years, is a 21-year-old, 190-pounder in whom the Redskins hope to find a superior to the famed Don Hutson, the Crimson Tide's gift to the Green Bay Packers.

Blackwell, who is a 6-foot-2 specimen, is touted as the best pass receiver at Alabama since Hutson and as Don's superior on defense. He was purposely left off the Redskins' draft list after an Alabama scout recommended him to the Washington bosses.

Blackwell hails from Blytheville, Ark., and is the fourth "new face" to be signed by the Redskins. Nine veterans already had been signed for 1940.

Art Thurnblad Beaten, 50-40, In Cue Match

Johnny Layton Wins With Fine Finish In World's Series

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 15.—Johnny Layton, Sedalia, Mo., ending the match with a fine cluster of 7, won his second game in the world's three-cushion billiards championship today with a 50-to-40 victory in 58 innings over another former titleholder, Art Thurnblad; of Kenosha, Wis.

Both players excelled at safety play, but the edge went to the chunky Layton, who often broke through Thurnblad's leaves to score. Layton, who has lost two contests, established his high run for the game in the final inning. Thurnblad's best string was 6.

Layton twice committed fouls. In the eighth inning he shot the wrong ball after having made one billiard, thus getting a zero for the inning. A foul in the forty-third inning, however, cost him 1 point. The defeat was Thurnblad's fourth in five games.

In an earlier game, Joe Chamaco, Mexico City, National Billiard League champion, defeated Arthur Rubin, of New York, 50 to 38, in 59 innings.

Campolo Injured; Jacobs Seeking Mann as Substitute

New York, March 15 (U.P.)—Promoter Mike Jacobs is seeking a substitute heavyweight opponent to fight big Buddy Baer, of California, at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night. Valentin Campolo, of Argentina, withdrew from the 12-round match today because of an injured shoulder.

It is expected that Jacobs will negotiate first with Nathan Mann, of New Haven, to replace Campolo. Mann defeated Gunner Barlund, of Finland, at the Coliseum Monday night. Barlund scored a technical knockout over Buddy Baer in Buddy's last New York fight two years ago.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Bidding a two-card suit put today's declarers into a bidding spin from which they emerged at six no trump, doubled, down three. Off to a bad start the pair couldn't stop, and each "sign off" of a desperate West was interpreted as a strength bid by his partner. Even the Blackwood four-five no trump was abused. West struggling to play the hand at some number, any number of no trump, rather than the three-card suit he bid, called four no trumps and then bid five no trump which his confused partner believed were invitations to a slam.

Here is what contributor, F. E. G., says of it:

"I had a lot of fun with a hand in a Washington duplicate game the other night in which psychics wrote their 'death warrant.' We received top on the board, playing against J. D., one of our younger experts, paired with Mrs. V. Z., a well known tournament player. My partner and myself are beginners.

"When they reached six no trump I thought it was about time to get out the hatchet, so I whacked it. Down three, doubled, for 800 points, which gave us top, as the hand was usually played at three no trump, declarers' making four."

Listen! with Slocum

As Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll approach their twelfth anniversary as one of radio's earliest and most enduring institutions—"Amos 'n' Andy"—they are completing an herculean task of compiling a complete record of their scripts.

On March 19, this beloved Columbia network team of blackface character impersonators, will complete 12 years of the lives of Amos 'n' Andy, the Kingfish, Brother Crawford, Lightnin' and some 190 other citizens of their mythical Harlem.

Gosden and Correll first were heard in January, 1926, as Sam 'n' Henry.

Permanent records of the story of Amos 'n' Andy, spanning more than 14 years of inspiring teamwork, has been in the process of compilation by Gosden and Correll—and has proved to be one of the largest typing jobs ever commissioned on the Pacific Coast.

It began when the two radio stars sought the return of some script copies which had been sent to Washington, D. C., for copyright purposes.

Twenty stenographers and copy readers worked for more than six weeks, making four copies of the 3,700 episodes which began with Sam 'n' Henry and still are winning millions of listeners nightly as Amos 'n' Andy.

The compilation required 62,500 sheets of paper; 4,000 sheets of carbon. Special stenographers were paid $2,588. Typewriters were rented for $50; carbon sheets cost $108; and typewriter ribbons, $75.

The four copies are to be leather-bound. One set of this rare and unusual literature goes into Freeman (Amos) Gosden's library; another into Charles (Andy) Correll's library; the third set becomes an "office file copy" and the fourth may be presented to a museum.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

Real fencing was succeeded by verbal fencing when Inspector Cramer visited Nero Wolfe in regard to the Percy Ludlow murder. Cramer was furious at Archie Goodwin, Wolfe's confidential secretary, for leaving Miltan's fencing studio right after the murder, and demanded to know why. Wolfe had no intention of telling Cramer that Archie had found in his overcoat the coi de mort which had probably been used on the epee to murder Ludlow. He told Cramer that he had sent Archie with Carla Lovchen to help Neya Tormic who had been accused of stealing diamonds from Nat Driscoll, another fencing pupil. Neither did Wolfe intend to have Cramer know about the mysterious paper which Carla had hidden in one of Wolfe's books. Oh, no. So Wolfe said Archie returned home by orders. Cramer then demanded from Archie a recount of his activities. But Wolfe and Archie seemed to willing to please, and Cramer was angrily suspicious. Then Wolfe said that Neya Tormic had also requested that he act in her behalf in the murder case since Neya was Ludlow's fencing instructor. Then Cramer exploded.

Chapter 11

MY WAVING paw finally stopped his bellowing; the phone had rung and I couldn't hear. It was a request for him. With a grunt he got up and came to my desk for it, and I made way for him. For several minutes his part of it was mostly listening, and then apparently he was told something disagreeable, judging from the way he violated the law against the use of profanity on the telephone. He gave some instructions, banged the thing into its cradle, and said in a quiet but very sarcastic voice, "That's nice, now."

He went back to his chair and sat there a minute chewing his lip. "That's just fine," he said. "The case is as good as solved. I won't have to go to any bother about it."

"Indeed," Wolfe murmured.

"Yes indeed. Three Federals have blown in up there. Anybody might suppose that a murder in Manhattan is the business of the homicide squad of which I happen to be the head, but who am I compared with a G-man? If we throw them out the commissioner will say tut-tut, we've got to cooperate. It has two pleasant aspects. First, it means an entirely new angle we haven't even stispected, and that's a cheerful idea. Second, whoever solves it and however and whenever, the G-men will grab the credit. They always do."

"Now, Inspector," I remonstrated. "A G-man is the representative of the American people, in fact it would hardly be going too far to say that a G-man is America—"

"Shut up. I wish you'd get an FBI job yourself and they'd send you to Alaska. I can pull you in, you know."

"If you can it's news to me. Who made any law about an innocent man being overcome with repugnance at the sight of blood and taking a taxi home?"

"Where did you see any blood?"

"Metonymy," Wolfe muttered.

"Kid me. I like it." Cramer glared at Wolfe. "So you've got a client."

Wolfe made a face. "Tentatively I have. Archie accepted the commission. I say tentatively because I have never met her. When I've seen her and talked with her I shall know whether she's guilty or not."

"You admit she may be."

"Certainly she may be." Wolfe wiggled a finger. "May I make a suggestion, Mr. Cramer? If you want consilience. It would be doubly unprofitable for you to question me, since you have stated that you will believe nothing I tell you, and since all those people are strangers to me and I am completely ignorant of what went on."

"You say."

"Yes, sir, I say. But it might help for me to question you. It would certainly help me, and in the long run it might even help you."

"Great idea. Wonderful idea."

"I think so."

CRAMER put his mangled cigar in the tray, got out another one and stuck it in his mouth. "Shoot."

"Thank you. First, of course, achieved results. Have you arrested anyone?"

"No."

"Have you found adequate motive?"

"No."

"Are there any definite conclusions in your mind?"

"No. Nor indefinite either."

"I see. No indictments from the mechanical routine—fingerprints, photographs, blabbing objects?"

"No. There's one object, and maybe two, that ought to be there and we can't find it. Do you know anything about fencing?"

Wolfe shook his head. "Nothing whatever."

"Well, the thing he was killed with is called an epee. It's triangular in section, with no cutting edge, and the point is so blunted that if you thrust at a man hard enough to go through him it would merely break the blade, which is quite flexible. In fencing they fasten a little steel button on the end, and the button has three tiny points. The points are only to show on your opponent's jacket when you've made a hit; the thick body of the button wouldn't permit the epee to pierce through the pad they wear or the mask over their face."

I said, "He didn't have any mask on."

"I know he didn't, so he wasn't actually fencing at the moment he was killed. Miltan says no one ever fences with the epee without a mask. The one Ludlow had been wearing was on a bench over by the wall. And the epee that was sticking through him had no button on it, just the blunted end, and it couldn't possibly have pierced him like that. But there was that thing in the cabinet in the office which Mrs. Miltan discovered was missing while your Mr. Goodwin was present. Which she calls a culdymore. You talk French; you can say it better than I can."

"Col de mort."

"Right. Anyone could have taken it from the cabinet. The chances are a million to one it was used on the epee that killed Ludlow. At a distance of a few feet, and especially with the epee in motion, he would never have seen it was that and not the ordinary fencing button. But the culdymore was not on the epee. So it had been removed. So everyone was searched and 20 men went through that joint like molasses through cheesecloth. They didn't find it. One person and only one had left that building, namely Goodwin here. You don't imagine he took it with him for a souvenir?"

Wolfe smiled slightly. "I would't suppose so. Thrown out of a window perhaps?"

"It could have been. They're still looking, in the damn dark with flashlights. Also for the other object which may be missing. Miss Tormic has an idea a glove is gone, one of the ladies'-size fencing gauntlets, from the cupboard in the locker room. Miss Lovchen and the dame that calls herself Zorka don't think so. Mrs. Miltan won't commit herself. Nobody seems to know for sure exactly how many there were."

"WHAT ABOUT the button that had to be removed from the epee before the coi de mort could be used?"

"They're all over the place. Right in the fencing rooms in drawers."

"Would the handle of the epee show fingerprints if it had been grasped without a glove?"

"No. Wrapped with cord or something for a grip."

"Well." Wolfe looked sympathetic. "The only two objects that might have helped aren't there. I'll promise you one thing, Mr. Cramer, if Archie did take them away I shall see that they are handed over to you as soon as we finish with them. But to go on, how many persons were in the building at the time the body was found?"

"Counting everybody, 28."

"How many have you eliminated?"

"All but eight or nine."

"Namely?"

"First and foremost, the one who was fencing with him. Your client."

"I wouldn't expect that. If she is still my client after I see her I'll eliminate her myself. The others?"

"Mr. and Mrs. Miltan. They alibi each other, which would be a drug on the market at two for a nickel. The girl that came to see you, Carla Lovchen. That's four. She had been fencing with Driscoll, but they had quit and had gone to the locker rooms, and she could have sneaked to the end room and done it. Driscoll. He's unlikely but not eliminated. Zorka. She was in the big room on that floor with a young man named Ted Gill. He claims not to be a fencer and was in there with her learning how to start."

I said, "It was him that was with Belinda Reade yesterday when they saw our client in the hall as she was going to the locker room not to pinch Driscoll's diamonds."

"Right. Then there's the Reade girl and young Barrett. They were moving around and it's hard to tell. Of course, if it's Donald Barrett you can have it. Also there's a kind of a man named Rudolph Faber."

"The chinless wonder."

"Not original but good. It's him, by the way, that's responsible for the fact there's been no arrest. How many does that make?"

"Ten."

"Then it's ten. And no discovered motive in the whole damn bunch. I wouldn't—"

The phone rang. I performed and, after a moment, beckoned to Cramer.

"Who?"

"The police commissioner, by gum."

He got up, said in a resigned tone, "Oh, poop," and came and took it.

THAT TELEPHONE conversation was in two sections. During the first section, which was prolonged, Cramer was doing the talking, in a respectfully belligerent tone, reporting on the situation and the regrettable lack of progress to date. During the second, which was shorter, he was listening and apparently to something not especially cheerful, judging from the inflection of his grunts, and from the expression on his face when he finally cut the connection and returned to his chair.

He sat and scowled.

Wolfe said, "You were lamenting the lack of motive."

"What?" He looked at Wolfe. "Yeah. I'd give my afternoon off to know what you know right now."

"It would cost you more than an afternoon, Mr. Cramer. I read a lot of books."

"To hell with books. I am fully aware that you've got some kind of a line on this thing and I haven't; I knew that as soon as I heard about Goodwin. If it ever did any good to look at your face I'd look at it while I'm telling you that the commissioner just informed me that he had a phone call 10 minutes ago from the British consul general. The consul stated that he was shocked and concerned to learn of the sudden and violent death of a British subject named Percy Ludlow and he hoped that no effort would be spared and so forth."

Wolfe shook his head. "I'm afraid my face wouldn't help you any on that. My sole reaction is the thought that the British consul general must have remarkable channels of information. It's half past ten at night. The murder occurred only four hours ago."

"Nothing remarkable about it. He heard it on a radio news bulletin."

"The source of the news was you or your staff?"

"Naturally."

"Then you had discovered that Ludlow was a British subject?"

"No. No one up there knew much about him. Men are out on that now."

"Then obviously it's remarkable. The radio tells the consul merely that a man named Percy Ludlow has been killed at a dancing and fencing studio on Forty-eighth street, and he knows at once that the victim was a British subject. Not only that, he doesn't wait until morning, when the usual conventional communication could be sent to the police from his office, but immediately phones the commissioner himself. So either Mr. Ludlow was himself important, or he was concerned in important business. Maybe the consul could supply some details."

"Much obliged. The commissioner has a date with him at 11 o'clock. Meanwhile how about supplying a few yourself?"

"I don't know any. I heard Mr. Ludlow's name for the first time shortly before six o'clock this afternoon."

"You say. All right, to hell with you and your client both. I don't kick on any ordinary murder, it's my job and I try to handle it, but I hate these damn foreign mix-ups. Look at those two girls, they barely speak English, and if they want to monkey around playing with swords why can't they stay where they belong and do it there? Look at Miltan, I suppose some kind of a Frenchman, and his wife. Look at Zorka. Then look at that Rudolph Faber guy, he reminds me of the cartoons of Prussian officers at the time of the World War. And now the Federals are up there horning in, and this consul general informs us that even the dead man wasn't a plain honest-to-God American—"

"From old Ireland," I slipped in.

"Shut up. You know what I mean. I don't care if the background is wop or mick or kike or dago or yankee or squarehead or dutch colonial, so long as it's American. Give me an American murder with an American motive and an American weapon, and I'll deal with it. But these damn alien trimmings, epees and culdymores and consuls calling up about their damn subjects — and moreover, why I was fool enough to expect anything here is beyond me. I should have had you tagged and hauled in and let you wait in a cold hall until sunrise."
